B * Then arose Eldras: & toke an oth of ꝑ chefe prestes & Leuites, & of al Israel, that they shulde do accordyng to thys worde: and they sweare. And Eldras stode vp frō before ꝑ house of God & went into the chābre of Johanan the sonne of Eliasib. And when he cam thyther, he dyd eate no bread, nor dronke water, for he mourned, bycause of the transgression of the people that had bene in captiuite. And they caused a proclamacion to go thorowout Juda and Jerusalem, vnto all the chyldren whyche had bene in captiuitie, that they shuld gather them selues togyther vnto Jerusalē. And that whosoeuer came not within thre dayes accordynge to the deuyce of the rulers and elders, all hys substaunce shulde be forfayt, and he shulde be put forth from the congregacion of the captiue.

A Whē these thynges were done, the rulers cam to me, & said: The people of Israel, & the prestes and Leuites are not separated from the people of the landes (as touching their abominacions) namely, of ꝑ Cananites, Hethites, Pherezites, Jebusites, Amonites, Moabites, Egiptians, & Amozites. * For they hane takē ꝑ doughters of the same to them selues, & to theyr sonnes & the holy seed is myxed wyth the nacions in the lande, and the hande of the princes and rulers hath ben principall in the trespasse.

Deu. vii.a. Esd.viii.c Jud.iii.a.

Esd.ix.biii.c * And when I harde this sayeng, I rent my clothes and my garment, and pluckt of the heer of my heade, and of my beerde, & sat mournyng And there resorted vnto me all suche as feared the wordes of the Lorde God of Israel, bycause of the transgression of ꝑ people of the captiuitie. And I sat mournynge vntyl the euenyng sacrifice. And aboute the euenynge sacrifice, I arose vp fro myn heuynes, and rent my clothes and my rayment and fell vpon my knees, and spreade out my handes vnto the Lorde my God, and sayd.

B O my God, I am ashamed, and dare not lyfte vp myne eyes vnto my God: for oure wyckednesses are growen ouer oure head, & our trespas is waxed greate vnto the heauen. Syns ꝑ tyme of oure fathers, haue we bene in greate trespasse vnto thys day, * and bycause of our wyckednesses haue we and our kynges bene delyuered into the hande of the kynges of the nacyons, into the swarde, into captiuite, into shame, and into cōfusion of face: as it is to se thys daye.

C And now is there a lytle and sodayne graciousnesse come from the Lorde oure God, in causyng some of vs to escape, and that he maye giue vs a nayle in hys holy place, and that oure God maye lyght our eyes, and gyue vs a lytle life to take breath in oure bondage. For we are bondmen, & our God hath not forsaken vs in oure bōdage, and hathe enclined mercye vnto vs in the syght of the kynges of Parsia, to gyue vs lyfe, to set vp the house of our God, and to redresse ꝑ desolation therof, and to gyue vs a wall in Juda and Jerusalem.

And nowe oure God, what shall we saye after thys? For we haue forsaken thy commaūdementes whiche thou hast cōmaunded by thy seruauntes the prophetes, sayenge: The lande vnto whych ye go to possesse, it is an vncleane lāde bycause of the fylthynesse of the people of ꝑ landes, whyche wyth theyr abhominacions haue made it ful of vncleānesse on euerye syde. * Therfore shal ye not giue your doughters vnto their sonnes, & theyr doughters shall ye not take vnto your sonnes, nor seke theyr peace and wealth for euer, that ye maye be stronge and enioye the good in the lande, and that ye and your chyldren maye haue the enheritaunce of it for euermore.

Deu. vii.a.

D And after that all these thynges are come vp on vs (because of oure euel dedes, and great trespasses) thou our god hast thrust downe our wyckednesses, and haste gyuen vs a delyueraunce, (ꝑ wch as it is come to passe thys daye.)

And yf we turne backe againe, to let go thy cōmaundementes, and make contract wyth the people of these abhominacions, wylte thou not then be wrath at vs (and not without cause) tyl we be vtterly cōsumed, so ꝑ nothynge remayne, and tyll there be no delyueraunce? O Lorde God of Israell, thou art ryghteous, for we remayne yet escaped as it is to se thys day. Beholde also, in thy presence are we in our trespasses, and bycause of it maye we not stande before the.

¶ The.ii. Chapter.

¶ After Nehemia had obtayned letters of Artaxerses, he came to Jerusalem and buylded the walles.

IT foztuned, that in the moneth * Nisan in the twentyethyeare of king Artaxarses, the wyne stode before hym, & I toke vp the wyne, & gaue it vnto the kyng. And I was heuye in his presẽce. And the kynge sayde vnto me: why lokest thou so sadly, whẽ ỹ art not sicke? it is nothinge els, but that ỹ arte heuye herted. And I was sore afrayed, and sayd vnto the kynge, God saue the kynges lyfe for euer. Howe shulde I not loke sadly, whẽ the citye and place of my fathers buriall lyeth waste and the gates therof are consumed wyth fyre. And the kynge sayd vnto me: what is thẽ thy request? I made my prayer also to the God of heauen, & sayd vnto the kinge: yf it please the kyng: and yf thy seruaunte haue founde fauoure in thy syght, sende me into Juda vnto the citye of my fathers buryall, that I maye buylde it.

B And the kynge sayd vnto me (the queue hys wyfe settynge by hym) how lõge shal thy iourney cõtinue, and when wylt thou come agayne? And it pleased the kyng to sende me, & I set him a tyme, and sayde vnto the kyng: yf it please the kyng, let hym gyue me letters to the captaynes which are beyonde the water, that they may cõuay me ouer, tyll I come into Juda: and letters vnto Asaph the lorde of the kynges wood, that he maye gyue me tymber to make beames for ỹ gates of the palace (which is herde be the house) & for the walles of the cityе, & for the house ỹ I shall entre into. And the kynge gaue me accordyng to the hande of my God, whych was good vpon me. And when I came to the captaines beyonde the water, I gaue them the kynges letters. And the kynge sente captaynes and horsemen wyth me.

C Sanabalat also the Horonyte and Tobia a seruaunte (the Ammonite) heard it, and it greued them sore, that there was come a mã whiche sought the wealth of the childrẽ of Israell. And I came to Jerusalem, and was there thre dayes, & I gat me vp in the night season, and a few mẽ wyth me, neyther tolde I anye man, what God had gyuen me in my herte to do at Jerusalem: & there was not one beast wyth me, saue it that I rode vpon. And I departed in the nyght by the valleye port, before the dragon well, and to the donge porte, and consyred the walles of Jerusalem howe they were broken downe and the portes thereof consumed with the fyre. And I went ouer vnto the well porte, ond to the kynges conduyte, & there was no rowme for the beast that was vnder me to passe. Then went I on in the night by the brooke syde, and cõsidered the wal, and turned backe, and came home agayne by the D valleye porte.

And the rulers knewe not whyther I wente or what I dyd: neyther dyd I as yet tell it vnto the Jewes, to the prestes, to the noble men to the rulers, & to the other that laboured in ỹ worke. Then sayde I vnto them: ye se the myserye that we are in, how Jerusalẽ lyeth waste, & howe the gates therof are brent with fyre: come therfore, that we maye buylde vp the wall of Jerusalem, & that we be no more a rebuke. And I told them of the hande of my God, (that it was gracious ouer me) & the kynges wordes that he had spoken vnto me. And they sayd: let vs get vp, and buylde: & they strengthed theyr hande to good.

But when Sanabalat the Horonite, & Tobia the seruaũt (an Ammonite,) and Gesem the Arabian herde it: they laughed vs to scorne, and mocked vs, and sayd: what is thys that ye do? Wyll ye fall awaye from the kynge? Then answered I them, and sayde: the God of heauen, he it is that hath graũted vs prosperitie: and we be hys seruauntes. Let vs get vp and buylde. As for you, ye haue no porcion nor ryght, nor remembraunce in Jerusalem.

And I departed in the nyght by the valleye port, before the dragon well, and to the donge porte, and consyred the walles of Jerusalem howe they were broken downe and the portes thereof consumed with the fyre. And I went ouer vnto the well porte, ond to the kynges conduyte, & there was no rowme for the beast that was vnder me to passe. Then went I on in the night by the brooke syde, and cõsidered the wal, and turned backe, and came home agayne by the D valleye porte.

And the rulers knewe not whyther I wente or what I dyd: neyther dyd I as yet tell it vnto the Jewes, to the prestes, to the noble men to the rulers, & to the other that laboured in ỹ worke. Then sayde I vnto them: ye se the myserye that we are in, how Jerusalẽ lyeth waste, & howe the gates therof are brent with fyre: come therfore, that we maye buylde vp the wall of Jerusalem, & that we be no more a rebuke. And I told them of the hande of my God, (that it was gracious ouer me) & the kynges wordes that he had spoken vnto me. And they sayd: let vs get vp, and buylde: & they strengthed theyr hande to good.

But when Sanabalat the Horonite, & Tobia the seruaũt (an Ammonite,) and Gesem the Arabian herde it: they laughed vs to scorne, and mocked vs, and sayd: what is thys that ye do? Wyll ye fall awaye from the kynge? Then answered I them, and sayde: the God of heauen, he it is that hath graũted vs prosperitie: and we be hys seruauntes. Let vs get vp and buylde. As for you, ye haue no porcion nor ryght, nor remembraunce in Jerusalem.

¶ The.iii. Chapter.

¶ The nombre of them that buylded the walles.

AND Eliasib the hye preast gat hym vp A with his brethren the prestes and they buylded the shepegate. They repayred it, and set vp the dores of it: euen vnto the towre Hea, repayred they it, and vnto the * towre of Hananeel. Next vnto him also builded the men of Jericho. And beside hym Sachur the sonne of Amri. But the fysshe porte dyd the childrẽ of Sanaa buylde, which also layed the beames therof, & set on the dores, lockes and barres of it. And next vnto him builded Merimoth, the sonne of Uria, the sonne of Hakoz: and next vnto them buylded Mesulam the sõne of Barachia the sonne of Mesesabeel: and next vnto him buylded Sadoc the sõne of Baana. And next vnto him buylded they of Thekoa. But the great men that were amonge them, put not theyr neckes to the worke of their Lorde.

Jer.xxxi.g. Zach.xiiii.c

The Olde gate buylded Jehoiada the sonne B of Paseah, & Mesulã the sonne of Besodia, they layed ỹ beames therof, & set on the dores, lockes & barres of it. Next vnto thẽ buylded Melatiah of Gibeon, & Jadon of Merano, mẽ of Gibeon, & of Mispa, where he that was captaine on this syde the water had a mansion. Nexte vnto hym buylded Uziel the sonne of Harhaiah the goldsmith. Nexte vnto hym also buylded Hanania the sonne of Harakim, & they repayred Jerusalẽ vnto the brode well. Nexte vnto them buylded Raphaiah the sõne of Hur, the ruler of the halfe parte of Jerusalem. Next vnto hym buylded Je C daia the sonne of Harumaph ouer agaynste hys house: & nexte vnto hym buylded Hatus the sõne of Hasabnia. But Melchia the sonne of Harim & Hasub the sõne of the captaine of Moab buylded the other pece, and the towre besyde the fornaces. Nexte vnto hym buylded Sallum a syngers sonne, the ruler of the halfe parte of Jerusalem, he and hys doughters.

The valley gate buylded Hanum, & the cite D zins of zanoa. They buylded it, & set on ỹ dores, lockes & barres therof, and a. M. cubytes on the wall, vnto the donge pozte. But the donge pozt buylded Melchiah the sõne of Rechab, the ruler of the fourth parte of Bethcharem: he repayred it, and set on the dozes, lockes & barres therof. But the well gate repayred Sallũ the sonne of Cholhosah, the ruler of ỹ fourth parte of Mispa. He buylded it, and layde the beames, and set on the dozes, lockes and barres therof, and the wall vnto the poole of Siloah, by the kinges garden, and vnto the steppes that go downe from the cytie of Dauid. After hym buylded Nehemiah the sonne of Asbok: the ruler of the halfe parte of Bethzur, vntyll the other syde ouer agaynst the sepulchres of Dauid, and to the poole that was repayred, and vnto the house of the myghty.

After hym buylded the Leuytes, Rehum the sonne of Bani: and next vnto hym buylded Hasabia the ruler of the halfe parte of Keilah in his quarter. After hym buylded their brethren: Banai the sonne of Henadad the ruler of the halfe parte of Keilah: and after him buylded Ezer the sonne of Iesua the ruler of Mispa the other pece, harde ouer agaynst the goynge vp to ỹ house of the ordynaunce that was in the cozner. Agayne, after hym brake forth Baruch the sõne of zachai of indignaciõ, & repayred the other pece from the turnynge cozner, vnto the doze of the house of Eliasib the hye preast. And after hym also buylded Merimoth the sonne of Uria the sõne of Hacos the other pece frõ the doze of ỹ house of Eliasib, euen as longe as the house of Eliasib extended. After hym buylded the preastes, the men of the playne. After hym buylded Ben Jamin and Hasub, ouer agaynst theyr house, and after hym wrought Asaria, the sonne of Maasia, the sonne of Ananta, next vnto his house. After hym also buylded Benui the sonne of Henadad the other pece, from the house of Azaria vnto the turnyng of the wall, and vnto the cozner.

After hym buylded Bala the sonne of Mlak, ouer agaynst the cozner & the hygh towze, which lyeth out ouer from the kynges house, that was besyde the courte of the pryson. After hym Phedaia the sõne of Pharhos (as for the Nethinims they dwelt in the stronge holde vnto the watergate, towarde the east, & to the towze that lyeth out.) After him buylded they of Thekua ỹ other pece ouer agaynst ỹ great towze, that lyeth outwarde, vnto the wall of the stronge holde.

But from a boue the hozse gate forth buylded the preastes, euery one ouer agaynst his house. And after them buylded Zadok the sonne of Immer ouer agaynst his house. After hym buylded also Semeia the sonne of Sechania the keper of the eastgate. After him buylded Hanania ỹ sõne of Selemia, & Hanun the sonne of Zalaph ỹ syxt the other pece. And after hym buylded Mesullã the son of Barachia ouer against his stozehouse. After hym buylded Malachia the goldsmythes sonne, vntyll the house of the Nethinims, and of the marchauntes ouer agaynst the gate Mephkad, & to the parlour in the cozner. And betwene the parlour of ỹ cozner vnto the sheepgate buylded the goldsmythes & the marchauntes.

The. iiii. Chapter.

The buyldyng of Jerusalem is hyndred and let, but the Jewes buylde it, beyng redye harnessed, lest theyr enemyes shulde inuade them.

But when Sanabalat herde that we buylded ỹ wall, he was wroth in hym selfe, & toke great indignacion, & mocked the Jewes, & sayd before his brethren and the souldyours of Samaria: what do these impotent Jewes? wyll the heathen suffre them? shall they offre? shall they perfourme it in one daye? shal they make ỹ stones whole agayne that are brought to dust & brent? And Tobiah ỹ Ammonite was besyde hym, and sayd: Though they buylde, yet yf a fore go vp, he shall breake downe theyr stony wall. Heare (O ỹ our God) for we are despised, turne their shame vpõ theyr owne heade, and gyue them ouer into despytyng in the lande of theyr captiuitie. Couer not theyr wyckednes, and let not theyr synne be put out in thy presence: for they haue prouoked the buylders. And so buylded we the wall, & it was ioyned hole togyther, vnto the halfe heyght therof. And the people were mynded to labour.

And it fortuned, that when Sanabalat, and Tobiah, & the Arabians, Ammonites, & Asdodites herde that the walles of Jerusalem were made vp, & that the gappes began to be stopped, they were very wroth, & conspired al togither to come & fyght agaynst Jerusalem, & to make the people an hynderaunce therin. Neuertheles we made our prayer vnto our God, & set watchmen by them, whiche buylded day and nyght ouer agaynst them. And Juda sayd: the strength of the bearers is to feble: and there is yet moche moze mozter, & we are not able to buylde on the wall. And our aduersaries sayd: they shall not knowe neyther se, tyll we come in the myddes amonge them, & slay them, and hynder the wozke. But it fortuned that when the Jewes (which dwelt beside them) came, they tolde vs as good as ten tymes: that in al places where ye go vnto, they are appoynted to fall vpon vs. Therfore set I the people after theyr kynredes with their swerdes, speares, and bowes bynethe in the lowe places behynde the wall, and I loked, & gat me vp: and sayd vnto the chefe men: to the rulers: and to the other people, be not ye afrayde of them: * but thynke rather vpon ỹ great Lozde, which ought to be feared, and fyght for your brethren, your sonnes, your doughters, your wyues, and your houses. Neuertheles, it chaunced that when our enemyes herde, that we had gotten wozde of it, God brought theyr counsell to nought: and we turned all agayne to ỹ wall: euery one vnto his labour. And frõ that tyme forth it came to passe that the halfe parte of the ponge men dyd the labour, and the other halfe parte of them helde the speares, shyldes, bowes, & brestplates: and the rulers stode behynde all ỹ house of Juda, whiche buylded on the wall, & bare burthens from those that laded them. With one hande dyd euery one wozke: and with the other helde his weapon. And euery one that buylded, had his swearde gyrde by his thygh, and so buylded they. And the trumpet blewe beside me.

And the halfe part of them helde the speares frō the morninge sprynge: tyl the starres cam forth. And at ꝑ same tyme sayd I vnto the people: euerye one abyde with hys seruaunt at Jerusalem, that in the night season we maye watch, and labour on the day tyme. As for me & my brethren, my seruauntes and the men of the watch (which were behynde me) we put neuer of oure clothes, nomore thē the other dyd theyr harnes saue onely because of the water.

¶ The. v. Chapter.

¶ The people are vexed with hunger. He requyreth not the lyuynge of a captayne.

A And there arose a greate complaynt of the people, and of theyr wyues against theyr brethren the Jues. For ther were some that sayd: our sonnes and doughters and we are to manye therfore wyll we take corne for them, ꝑ we maye eate and lyue. Some also there were that sayd: let vs set our landes: vynepardes & houses to pledge & take vp corne in the dearth. But some there were ꝑ said: let vs borowe money for the kynges tribute: and that vpon our landes and vynepardes. Beholde, our bodyes as the bodyes of our brethren, & our chyldren as theyr chyldren: els shulde we subdue our sonnes and daughters vnto bondage, and some of our daughters are subdued vnto bondage alredy and no strength is there in our handes, and other men haue our landes and vynepardes.

B And when I harde theyr complaynte & suche wordes, it displeased me sore, and I aduised so in my minde, that I rebuked the councelers, and ꝑ rulers, & sayd vnto them: Euery one of you is to chargeable vnto his brother. And I brought a greate congregacion agaynst them, and sayde vnto them: we (after our abilitie) haue boughte our brethren the Jewes, which were solde vnto the heathen. And wyll you sell your brethren agayn vnto the heathē, after that they haue bene solde vnto vs? Then helde they theyr peace, and coulde fynde nothynge to answere.

C And Nehemia sayd: It is not good that ye do. Ought ye not to walke in the feare of God, because of the rebuke of the heathen that are our enemies? I and my brethren, and my seruauntes do lende them money and corne: but as for vsury let vs leaue it. Therfore, this same day I praye you se that ye restore them theyr landes agayne theyr vynepardes, oyle gardens, and theyr houses, and remyt the hundred part of the money of the corne, wyne, and oyle that ye haue wonne of them. Then sayde they: we wyll restore them agayne, and wyll requyre nothynge of them: and wyll do as thou hast spoken. And I called ꝑ prestes, & toke an oth of them, that they shuld do so. And I shoke my lappe, & sayde: God shake out euery man after the same maner from hys house & labour that mayntaynneth not thys worde: euē thus be he shakē out, & voyde. And all the cōgregacion said: Amen, & praysed the Lord: And the people dyd so. And from the time forth that (the D kynge) commytted vnto me to be a captayne of them that were in the lande of Juda euē frō ꝑ. xx. yeare vnto the. xxxii. yeare of kynge Artharxerses (that is. xii. yeare) I wt my brethrē lyued not of such substaunce as was gyuen to a captayne. For the olde captaynes ꝑ were before me, had bene chargeable vnto the people, & had taken of them breade and wyne, & xl. sycles of syluer: yea & theyr seruauntes had oppressed ꝑ people. But so dyd not I, & that because of the feare of God. But I laboured also in the worke vpō the wal, & bought no lande. And all my seruauntes came thyther together vnto ꝑ worke. Moreouer ther were at my table an. C. and. l. of the Jewes & rulers, which came vnto me frō among the hethen that are aboute vs. And there was prepared for me daylye an ore, & syxe chosen shepe, & byrdes, & euer ones in. x. dayes a great summe of wyne. Yet requyre not I the lyuynge of a captayne, for the bondage was greuous vnto the people.

¶ The buyldynge is yet agayne hyndered and let.

A And when Sanabalat, Tobiah, & Gesem ꝑ Arabian, & the other of our enemies hard that I had buylded ꝑ wall: & that ther were no mo gappes therin (howbeit at the same tyme had I not hanged the dores vpon the gates) Sanabalat & Gesem sent vnto me, sayeng: come that we may mete & take coūcell tagether in the villages ꝑ are in the playn of ꝑ citie Ono. Neuertheles they thought to do me euel. And I sente messengers vnto thē, sayenge: I haue a greate busynes to do & I can not come downe. The worke shuld stand styl, yf I were negligent, & came down to you. Howbeit, they sent vnto me as good as foure tymes after ꝑ same maner. And I gaue thē the same answere. Thē sent Sanabalat his seruaūt againe vnto me the fyfth tyme, wt an open letter in hys hāde wherin was writtē: it is tolde the hethen, & Gesem hath sayde it, that ꝑ & the Jues thynke to rebel, for the whych cause ꝑ buyldest the wall that ꝑ mayste be theyr kynge in these matters, & hast ordeyned the prophetes to preache of the at Jerusalem, and to saye: He is kynge of Juda.

A And now shal thys come to the kynges eares come now therfore, & let vs take our coūcell together. And I sent vnto hym, sayeng, there is no such thinge done as thou sayest: for thou fayneste them out of thyne owne herte. For they were all mynded to make vs afrayed, sayeng: they shall wythdrawe theyr handes frō the worke, that it shal not be fynished. Howbeit, I strengthed my hande the more. And I came to the house of Semeia the sonne of Dalaia the sonne of Mehetabeell, & he had shut hym selfe wythin, & sayde: let vs come together into ꝑ house of God, euē vnto ꝑ myddes of ꝑ tēple, & shut ꝑ dores of ꝑ tēple for they wyl come to slay ꝑ: yea, euē in ꝑ nyght wyl they they come to put the to deth. And I sayd: shulde any suche man as I am flye? Who is that beynge as I am, that wyll go in to the temple, to saue his lyfe? I wyll not go in.

C And I perceyued, that God had not sente hym. Yet spake he prophecye vpon me, neuertheles, Tobiah and Sanabalat had hyred him for money. Therfore take he ꝑ money, that through feare I shulde so do, and synne: that they myght haue an euyll report of me, to blaspheme me. Hy God thynke thou vpon Tobiah & Sanabalat accordynge vnto these theyr workes, and of the prophete Noadia, & of the other prophetes that wolde haue put me in feare.

D And the wall was fynyshed on the fyue and twenty day of the moneth Elul, in two & fyftye dayes. And when all our enemyes herde therof, all ꝑ heathen that were about vs, were afrayde, and their courage fayled them. And they perceyued, that this worke came of our God. And at ꝑ same tyme were there many of the chefe of Juda whose letters went vnto Tobiah, & agayn from Tobiah vnto them (for there were many in Juda, that were swore vnto hym, for he was the sonne in lawe of Sechania, the sonne of Arah, and his sonne Jehonathan had the doughter of Mesullam, the sonne of Barachia, & they spake good of hym before me: & tolde him my wordes) and Tobiah sent letters, to put me in feare.

C The. vii. Chapter.

C After the wall ones buylded: is the watch appoynted.
They that returned from the captiuite are nombred.

NOwe when the wall was buylded: I hanged on the dores also, and the porters, syngers, & Leuites were appoynted. And I cómaunded my brother Hanani and Hanania the ruler of the castell at Jerusalem: for he was a faythfull man, and feared God more then dyd many other. And I sayd vnto them: let not the gates of Jerusalē be opened vntyl the sunne be whote. And whyle they were standyng in the watche, they shut the dores, and barred them. And we appoynted certayne cytesyns of Jerusalem, to be watche men, euery one to kepe his watche, and euery one to be ouer agaynst his house. As for the cytie, it was large of rowme and great: but the people were fewe therin, and the houses were not buylded.

B And my God gaue me in my herte, that I gathered togither the principal men, & the officers and the people, to nombre them: and I founde a ℂ The. viii. Chapter.

℣ Eldras gathereth together the people, & readeth to the the law. They kepe the feast of tabernacles of bothes.

A ii.Esd.viii.a. viii.Ec.ix.a.

And ✠al* the people gathered them selues together: as one man, in the strete that was before the watergate, and they sayde vnto Eldras the scrybe, that he shuld fetche* the Deu.xxxi.f. xxxi.ye.xxviii.a boke of the lawe of Moses, whiche ꝑ Lorde cōmaunded to Israell. And Eldras the Preaste brought the law before the congregacyon both of men and women: and all that coulde vnderstande dyd herken vnto it, vpon the fyrst day of the seuenth moneth, and he redde therein, in the strete that was before the watergate (from the morynge vntyll the noone daye) before men & women that dyd harken to it: and the eares of all the people were inclyned vnto the booke of the lawe. And Eldras the scrybe stode vpon an hye pulpyt of wood whiche they had made for ꝑ preachynge, and besyde hym stode Mathathia, Sema, Anania, Uziah, Helkia, and Maaseia, on his ryght hande, and on his lefte hande stode Pedaia, Misael, Malchia, Hasum, Hasebadana, zachari, and Mesulam.

And Eldras opened the boke before all ꝑ peo B ple, for he stode aboue all the people: And when he opened it, all the people stode vp. And Eldras praysed the Lorde the great God. And all the people answered: Amen, Amen, with theyr handes vp, and bowed them selues, and worshypped the Lorde, fallynge downe vpon their faces to the grounde. And Iesua, Baam, Serabiah, Jamin, Acub, Sebathai, Hadaia, Maasia, Celita, Azaria, Jozabad, Hanan, Pelaia: & the Leuytes caused the people to geue hede vnto the lawe, and the people stode in theyr place. And they red in the boke of the lawe of God dystynctlye and playnely, so that men vnderstode the thyng that was red. And Nehemiah (which is Hathirsata) and Eldras the Preest and scrybe and the Leuytes that caused the people to take hede, sayde vnto all the people: this daye is holy vnto the Lorde youre God: be not you sory, and wepe not. For all the people wepte, when they hearde the wordes of the lawe.

And he sayde vnto them: * go your way and C eate of the fat, and drynke the swete, and sende Neh.viii.a part vnto them also that haue not prepared thē selues: for this daye is holy vnto our Lorde, be not ye sory therfore: for the ioye of the Lorde is your strength. ✠ And the Leuites stilled al the people, and sayde: holde your peace, for the day is holy, vexe not ye your selues. And all the people went theyr waye to eate and drynke, and to sende parte vnto other, & to make great myrth because they had vnderstande the wordes that were declared vnto them.

And on the nexte daye were gathered together the cheke fathers among all the people and the prestes and Leuytes, vnto Eldras ꝑ scrybe, that they myght vnderstande the wordes of the lawe. And they founde wrytten in the lawe, *(whiche the Lorde had commaunded by Moses) that the chyldren of Israel shoulde dwel in bothes in the feast of the seuenth moneth, and ꝑ they shoulde cause it to be declared and proclaymed in all theyr cityes, and thorowout Jerusalem, saying: go forth vnto the mount, and fetch olyue braunches, pine braunches, myrte braūches Palme braunches, and braunches of thycke tre: to make bothes, as it is wrytten Leu.xxiii.f. Nu.xxix.b. ii.Mac.i.c.

And so the people went forth, and fet them, & D made them bothes, euerye one vpon the rooke of his house, and in theyr courtes, and in the courtes of the house of God, and in the strete by the watergate, and in the strete by porte Ephraim.

And al the congregacion of them that were com agayne out of captiuytie made bothes, and sate vnder the bothes: for syns the tyme of Josua the sonne of Nun vnto thys daye, had not the chyldren of Israel done so, and there was very great gladnesse. And euery daye from the fyrste daye vnto the last, red Eldras in the boke of the law of God. And seuen dayes helde they the feaste, & on the eyghte daye they gathered together, accordynge vnto the maner.

The.ix. Chapter.

The people repent, and forsake theyr straunge wyues. Eldras recyteth the benefytes of God, & the syns of ỹ people.

IN the.xxiiii. day of this moneth came the chyldren of Israel together agayne with *fastyng sakclothes, and earth vpon thē and they that were of the sede of Israel were seperated, from all the straunge chyldren, & stode and knowledged theyr synnes and the wyckednesses of theyr fathers, and stode vp in the place and red in the boke of the lawe of the Lord their God four tymes on the daye, and they knowleged and worshypped the Lorde theyr God four tymes on the day. And the Leuites stode on hye namely Jesua, Bani, Cadmiel, Sabaniah, Buni, Sarebiah, Bani and Canani, & cryed loude vnto the Lorde theyre God. And the Leuytes, Jesua and Cadmiel Bani and Hasabnia, Serebia and Hodia, Sebania & Phathahia sayde: stande vp, and prayse the Lorde youre God for euer: and let thankes be geuen vnto the name of thy glory, whiche excelleth all thankesgeuynge and prayse. Thou arte Lorde alone. Thou hast made Heauen, and the heauen of all heauens, wyth all theyr Hooste, the earthe: and all thynges that are therein, the see and all that is therein, and thou preseruest them all, and the hooste of heuen worshyppeth the.

Thou arte the Lorde God, that hast chosen Abram, and broughtest him out of *Ur in Chaldea: & calleddest hym Abraham, and foundest his hert faythfull before the * and madest a couenaunt with hym, to geue vnto hys sede the lande of the Cananites, Hethites, Amorytes, Pherezites, Jebusites and Gersites, and hast made good thy wordes: for thou arte ryghteous. *and hast considered the mysery of our fathers in Egypt, and heardest theyr complaynt by the red see, and shewed tokens and wōders vpō Pharao, and on all his seruauntes, and on al the people of hys lande: for thou knewest that they were presumteous and cruel agaynst them, and so madest thou the a name, as it is thys daye. And the red see dyddest thou deuyde in sondre before them, so that they went thorowe the myddes of the see drye shodde: and theyr persecuters threwest thou in to the depe (as a stone) in the myghtye waters: and leddest them on the daye tyme wyth a cloudye pyller, and on the nyghte season in a pyller of fyre to shewe them lyght in the waye that they wente.

*Thou camest downe also vpon mount Sinai, and spakest vnto them from Heuen, and gauest them ryght iudgementes, true lawes, good commaundementes and statutes, and declaredest vnto them thy holy Sabboth, & commaundedst them preceptes, ordynaunces and lawes, by the hande of Moses thy seruaunte: and *gauest them breade from Heuen, when they were hungrye, and ‡broughtest forth water for them oute of the rocke, when they were thyrstye: and promysedst them that they shulde go in, & take possessyon of the lande: ouer which thou haddest lyfte vp thyne hande for to geue them.

But they and our fathers were proude and herdened: so that they folowed not thy cōmaundementes: and wolde not obeye, neyther were myndefull of the wonders that thou dydest for them: but became obstynate & headye, insomuch that they tourned backe to theyre bondage for theyr disobedyence. And thou my God forgauest, and wast gracyous, mercyful, pacyent and of greate goodnesse, and forsakest not them.

*And thoughe they made a molten calfe (& sayd This is thy Gods that broughte the oute of the lande of Egypte) and dyd greate blasphemyes, yet forsakest thou them not in the wyldernesse, according to thy great mercy. * And the cloudy pyller departed not from them on the day tyme: to leade them the waye, nether the pyller of fyre in the nyght season, to shewe them the lyght in the waye that they went.

And thou gauest them the good spyryte to enfourme them, *& withheldest not thy Manna from theyr mouth, ‡and gauest thē water when they were thyrsty. Fourtye yeres longe madest thou prouisyon for them in the wyldernesse, so ỹ they lacked nothyng: *theyr clothes waxed not olde, and theyr fete swelled not. And thou gauest them kyngdomes and nacyons, and partedest them according to theyr porcyons: so that they possessed *the lande of Sehon kyng of Hesebon: and the lande of Og the kyng of Basan. And theyr chyldren multiplyeddest thou as the starres of heauen, and broughtest them into the lande: wherof thou haddest spoken vnto theyr fathers, that they shulde go into it, and haue it in possessyon.

And the chyldren went in, and possessed the lande, *and thou subduedest before them the inhabyters of the lande, euen the Cananites: and gauest them into theyr handes, with theyr kynges and the people of the lande, that they might do with them what they wolde. And they wan theyr stronge cityes and a fat lande, & toke possessyon of houses, that were full of all maner of goodes: welles dygged out, vynepardes, oylegardens, and many frutefull trees, and they did eate, and were fylled: and became fat, and lyued in welth thorow thy great goodnes. Neuerthelesse they were disobedyent, & rebelled agaynste the, and cast thy lawe behynd theyr backes and *slue thy prophetes (whyche exhorted them earnestly, that they myght bryng them agayne vnto the) and dyd greate blasphemyes. Therfore thou gauest them ouer into the hande of theyre enemyes that vexed them.

And in the tyme of theyr trouble when they cryed vnto the: thou herdest them from heauen: and thorow thy great mercy thou gauest them

For the children of Israel, and the children of Leui shal bring vp the heue offerynges of the corne, wyne and oyle vnto the store houses, there as are the vessels of the sanctuarye: and the preastes that mynister, and the porters and singers, þ we forsake not the house of oure God.

¶ The.xi. Chapter.

¶ Who dwelled in Jerusalem after it was buylded, and who in the cityes of Juda.

AND the rulers of the people dwelt at Jerusalem: The other people also cast lottes, þ among ten, one parte shulde go to Jerusalem into the holy cityе to dwel, and nyne partes to be in the Cityes: and the people thanked all the men that were wyllynge to dwel at Jerusalem.

These are the heades of the lande that dwelt in Jerusalem and in the Cityes of Juda, euerye one in his possessyon, and in theyr cityes: they of Israel, the preestes, Leuites, Nethinims, and the children of Salomons seruauntes. And at Jerusalem dwelt certayne of the children of Juda and Ben Jamin.

Of the children of Juda: Athaiah the sonne of Vsia, the sonne of zachari, the sonne of Amaria, the sonne of Saphatia, the sonne of Mahalaleel: the children of Phares. And Maasia the sonne of Baruch, the sonne of Chal Hose, þ sone of Hasaia, the sonne of Adaia, the sone of Joiarib, the sonne of zachary, the sonne of Silony. All these were þ children of Phares that dwelt at Jerusalem, euen foure hundred threscore and eyght valeaunte men.

B These are the children of Ben Jamin, Salu the sonne of Mesullam, the sonne of Joed, þ son of Pedaia, the sonne of Calaia, the sonne of Hasia, the sonne of Ithiel, the sonne of Isai. And after hym Gabai, Selai nyne hundred and.xxviii. And Joel the sonne of zichri had the ouersyghte of them: and Juda the son of Senua was nexte ouer the Citye.

t. Para. p. b * Of the preestes: Jedaiah the sonne of Joiarib, Jachin, Saraiah the sonne of Helkia: þ son of Mesullam, the sonne of zadoc, the son of Meraioth, the sonne of Ahitob, was Prynce in the house of God: and hys brethre that perfourmed the worke in the temple. viii. hundred and.xxii. And Adaia the sonne of Jeroham, the sonne of Palaliel, the sonne of Amzi, the sõ, of zachari, the sonne of Phashur, the sone of Malchia: and his brethren cheke amonge the fathers, two hundred and two and fourtye. And Amasai the son of Azrael, the sonne of Ahasai, the sone of Mosselemoth, the sonne of Immer: and his brethren were valeaunt men: an hundred and eyght and twentye. And theyr ouersear was zabdiela son of one of the great men.

¶ t. Para. p. b * Of the Leuytes: Semeia the sone of Hasub, the sonne of Asrikam, the sone of Hasabia the sonne of Bunni, and Sabathai, and Josabad of the cheke of þ Leuites, had the ouersyght of the outwarde busynesse of the house of God. And Mathaniah the sonne of Micha, the sone of zabdi, the sonne of Asaph: was the prynсipal to begynne the thankesgeuing and prayer. And Bakbukia the seconde amonge his brethren, & Abda, the sonne of Sammua, the sonne of Galal, the sonne of Jeduthum. All the Leuytes in the holy cityе were two hundred foure score and foure. * And the porters Acub and Talmõ, and t. Para. p. b. theyr brethren that kepte the portes, were an hundred and two and seuentye. As for the residue of Israell, the Preastes and Leuytes, they were in all the cityes of Juda, euerye one in hys inherytaunce.

And the Nethinims dwelte in Ophel: and Ziba and Gispa was set ouer þ Nethinims. The ouersear of the Leuites at Jerusalem was Vsi, the sonne of Baani, the sonne of Asabi, þ sõne of Mathania, the sonne of Micha.

Of the children of Asaph there were syngers D about the busynesse in the house of God, for it was the kynges commaundement concernynge them: that the syngers shulde deale faythfully euery daye as was accordynge.

And Pathaia the sonne of Mesababel of þ children of zerah the sõne of Juda next þ kynge in all matters concernyng the people: and theyr vyllages and landes. And some of the children of Juda that were without the townes of their lande dwelt at Kariath Arbe, and in the vyllages therof: at Dibon, and in the vyllages therof: and at Jezabel, and in the vyllages thereof: at Jesua, Moladah, Bethphalet in þ towne of Sual, Beersheba, and in theyr vyllages: at Siklag & Moconah, and theyr vyllages: and at Enremon, zarah, Jerimoth, zonoa, Odollam, and in theyr vyllages: at Lachis and in þ feldes therof: at Aska, and in the vyllages therof: and they dwelt frõ Bersabe vnto þ valey of Hinnõ

The children also of Ben Jamin, of Geba, dwelt at Machmas, Aia, Bethel, and in theyr vyllages. And at Anothoth, Nob, Ananiah, Hazor, Ramah, Gethaim, Hadid, zeboim, Nabalath, Lod and Ono, the carpenters valleye. And the Leuites had possessyon both in Juda, and in Ben Jamin.

¶ The.xii. Chapter.

¶ The preastes and Leuytes whiche came wyth zorobabel vnto Jerusalem are nombred, and the wall is dedicated.

THese are the preestes and Leuites that A went vp with zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and with Jesua, Saraia Jeremy and Eldras, Amaria, Maluch, Hatus, Sechania, Rehum, Meremoth, Iddo, Genthoi, Abia, Miamin, Maaria, Belga, Semeia, Joiarib, Joiada, Salu, Amocke, Helkia and Jadeia: These were the heades among the preestes: and theyr brethren in þ dayes of Jesua. The Leuites were these, Jesua, Bennui, Cadmiel, Sarabia, Juda, and Mathania, which was ouer the office of thankesgeuynge, he and his brethren, Bacbukia: and Hunni and theyr brethren, were about them in þ watches.

Jesua begat Joakim: Joakim also begate Eliasib: and Eliasib begat Joiada: Joiada begat Jonathan: and Jonathan begat Jadua. In the dayes of Joakim were these ꝑ chefe fathers amonge the prestes: vnder Sararia, Mararia, vnder Jeremy, Hanania, vnder Esdras, Mesullã, vnder Amaria, Jehoanã: vnder Milico, Jonathan: vnder Sebania, Joseph: vnder Harim Adna: vnder Maraioth, Helkia: vnder Iddo, zachari: vnder Genthon, Mesullam: vnder Abia, zichri: vnder Miniamin, and Moadia, Piltai: vnder Belga, Samua: vnder Semeia, Jehonathã: vnder Joiarib, Mathanai: vnder Jadaia, Uzi: vnder Selai, Kelai: vnder Amok, Eber: vnder Helchia, Hasabia: vnder Jadaia, Nathenael. And in ꝑ tyme of Eliasib, Joiada, Johnan and Jadua, were the chefe fathers amonge

B the Leuites and the preastes, written vnder the raygne of Darius the Persian. The chyldren of Leui, the principal fathers were wrytten in the Chronycles vnto the tyme of Jonathan the son of Eliasib. And these were the chefe amonge the Leuytes: Hasabia, Serebia, and Jesua the son of Cadmiel, and theyr brethren in theyr presẽce to geue prayse and thankes, accordyng as Dauid the man of God had ordeyned it, one watch ouer agaynste another, Mathania, Balbukia, Obadia, Mesullam, Talmon and Akub were porters in the watche at the thresholdes of the gates. These were in the dayes of Joakim the sonne of Jesua, the sonne of Josedec, and in the dayes of Nehemia the captayne, and of ꝑ preast Esdras the Scrybe.

C And in the dedicacion of the wall at Jerusalem: they sought the Leuites out of all theyr places, that they myght be brought to Jerusalẽ to kepe the dedicacyon & gladnesse, wyth thankesgeuynges and syngyng with cymbales, psalteryes and harpes. And the chyldren of ꝑ syngers gathered them selues together from euery syde out of the playne countrey about Jerusalẽ, and from the vyllages of Netophathi, frõ the house of Gilgal, and out of the coũtries of Geba, and Asmaueth, for the syngers had buylded theym vyllages rounde about Jerusalem. And ꝑ preastes and Leuytes were purifyed, and clensed the people: and the gates, and the wall.

And I brought the prynces of Juda vp vpon the wall, and appoynted two greate queres of men to geue thankes, whiche went on the ryght hande of the wall towarde the donge gate, and after them went Hosaia, and halfe of the prynces of Juda, and Asaria, Esdras: and Mesullam Juda, Ben Jamin, Semia & Jeremy: & certayn of the prestes chyldren wyth trompets, namely zacharya the sonne of Jonathan, the sõne of Semeia, the son of Mathania, the son of Michaia the sonne of zacur, the son of Asaph and his brethren, Semeia, Asarael, Ualalai, Gilalai, Maai, Nathanael, and Jnda & Hanani, with ꝑ musycal instrumentes of Dauid the man of God.

D And Esdras ꝑ scrybe went before them and beside the Welgate, they went vp ouer agaynst them vpon the steppes of the cite of Dauid, at the goynge vp of the wall beyonde the house of Dauid, vnto the watergate Eastwarde.

The other quere of them that gaue thankes went ouer against them, and I after them, & the halfe parte of the people vpon the wal, beyonde the fornace gate vnto the brode wall, & beyonde the porte of Ephraim, and beyond the olde gate beyonde the fyshegate, and the tower of Hananeel, and the tower of Mea, vntyl the shepgate And they stode styl in the pylon gate, & so stode the two queres (of them that gaue thankes) in the house of god: and I, and the halfe of the rulers with me, and the prestes, namely Eliakim Maasia, Miniamin, Michaia, Elioenei, zachary, and Hanania: wyth trompettes, and Maasia, Semeiah, Eleasar, Uzzi, Jehohanan, Melchiah, Elam, and Ezer. And the syngers sange loude, hauyng Jesrahiah for theyr ouersear.

And the same daye they offred greate sacrifyces and reioyced: for God hadde geuen them great gladnesse, so that both the wyues & chyldren were ioyfull: and the myrth of Jerusalem was heard farre of.

E At the same tyme were there men appoynted ouer the treasure houses (wherin were the heue offrynges: the fyrstlynges, and the tythes) that they shulde gather them out of the feldes about the cities, to destribute them vnto the preastes and Leuytes, accordynge to the lawe: for Juda was glad of the prestes and Leuytes, that they stode and wayted vpon the office of theyr God which is a pure office. And the syngers and porters stode after the commaundement of Dauid and of Salomon his sonne, * for in the tyme of *1.Pa.xxiii.a Dauid and Asaph, were the chefe syngers founded, and the songes of prayse & thankesgeuyng vnto God. In the tyme of zorobabel, and Nehemiah dyd all they of Jsraell, geue portyons vnto the syngers and porters, euery daye hys portyon, and they gaue tythes vnto the Leuytes, and the Leuytes gaue tythes agayne vnto the chyldren of Aaron.

And the chyldren of ꝑ syngers gathered them selues together from euery syde out of the playne countrey about Jerusalẽ, and from the vyllages of Netophathi, frõ the house of Gilgal, and out of the coũtries of Geba, and Asmaueth, for the syngers had buylded theym vyllages rounde about Jerusalem. And ꝑ preastes and Leuytes were purifyed, and clensed the people: and the gates, and the wall.

And I brought the prynces of Juda vp vpon the wall, and appoynted two greate queres of men to geue thankes, whiche went on the ryght hande of the wall towarde the donge gate, and after them went Hosaia, and halfe of the prynces of Juda, and Asaria, Esdras: and Mesullam Juda, Ben Jamin, Semia & Jeremy: & certayn of the prestes chyldren wyth trompets, namely zacharya the sonne of Jonathan, the sõne of Semeia, the son of Mathania, the son of Michaia the sonne of zacur, the son of Asaph and his brethren, Semeia, Asarael, Ualalai, Gilalai, Maai, Nathanael, and Jnda & Hanani, with ꝑ musycal instrumentes of Dauid the man of God.

D And Esdras ꝑ scrybe went before them and beside the Welgate, they went vp ouer agaynst them vpon the steppes of the cite of Dauid, at the goynge vp of the wall beyonde the house of Dauid, vnto the watergate Eastwarde.

The other quere of them that gaue thankes went ouer against them, and I after them, & the halfe parte of the people vpon the wal, beyonde the fornace gate vnto the brode wall, & beyonde the porte of Ephraim, and beyond the olde gate beyonde the fyshegate, and the tower of Hananeel, and the tower of Mea, vntyl the shepgate And they stode styl in the pylon gate, & so stode the two queres (of them that gaue thankes) in the house of god: and I, and the halfe of the rulers with me, and the prestes, namely Eliakim Maasia, Miniamin, Michaia, Elioenei, zachary, and Hanania: wyth trompettes, and Maasia, Semeiah, Eleasar, Uzzi, Jehohanan, Melchiah, Elam, and Ezer. And the syngers sange loude, hauyng Jesrahiah for theyr ouersear.

And the same daye they offred greate sacrifyces and reioyced: for God hadde geuen them great gladnesse, so that both the wyues & chyldren were ioyfull: and the myrth of Jerusalem was heard farre of.

E At the same tyme were there men appoynted ouer the treasure houses (wherin were the heue offrynges: the fyrstlynges, and the tythes) that they shulde gather them out of the feldes about the cities, to destribute them vnto the preastes and Leuytes, accordynge to the lawe: for Juda was glad of the prestes and Leuytes, that they stode and wayted vpon the office of theyr God which is a pure office. And the syngers and porters stode after the commaundement of Dauid and of Salomon his sonne, * for in the tyme of *1.Pa.xxiii.a Dauid and Asaph, were the chefe syngers founded, and the songes of prayse & thankesgeuyng vnto God. In the tyme of zorobabel, and Nehemiah dyd all they of Jsraell, geue portyons vnto the syngers and porters, euery daye hys portyon, and they gaue tythes vnto the Leuytes, and the Leuytes gaue tythes agayne vnto the chyldren of Aaron.

AND that daye dyd they reade in the boke of Moses, and the people harkened therto, and there was founde wrytte, *ꝑ the Ammonites & Moabites shulde neuer come into ꝑ congregacyon of God, because they met not ꝑ chyldren of Jsrael with breade & water: * but hyred Balaam agaynst them, that he shulde curse thẽ and our God turned the curse into a blessynge. Now when they heard ꝑ lawe, it fortuned, that they seperated from Jsrael euerye one that had myxte hym selfe therin. And before this had the preast Eleasib the ouersyght of the treasury of the house of oure God, and he was kynsman to Tobia: and had made hym a greate chambre, & there had they afore tyme layde the offerynges frankencense, vessell, and the tythes of corne, wyne and ole (accordyng to the cõmaundemẽtes geuen to the Leuites, syngers and porters) and the heueoffrynges of the prestes. *De.xxiii.a *Nu.xviii.a

B But in all this tyme was not I at Jerusalẽ: for in the.xxxii. yere of Artharerses king of Babilon, came I vnto the kyng, and after certayne dayes obtayned I lycence of the kynge to come to Je-to Jerusalem. And I gat knowledge that Eliasib dyd vnto Tobia, in that he had made hym a chambre in the court of the house of God, and it grened me sore, & I cast forth all the vessels of ỹ house of Tobia out of the chambre, and cõmaunded them to cleanse the chambres. And thyther brought I agayne the vessels of ỹ house of God with the meatofferyng and the incense.

And I perceyued that the porcyons of the Leuites were not geuẽ them, & that euery one fled to his lande, euen the Leuites and syngers that executed the worke. Then reproued I the rulers and sayde: Why is the house of God forsaken? And I gathered them together, and set them in theyr place. Then brought all Juda the tythes of corne and wyne, and oyle, vnto the treasure. And I made treasurers ouer the treasure, euen Selemiah the prest, and Zadoc the scribe, and of the Leuytes, Phadaia, and vnder theyre hande was Hanan the sonne of Zacur, the sonne of Mathania, for they were counted faythfull, & theyr office was to distribute ỹ porcyons vnto theyr brethrẽ. *Thynke vpon me, O my God herein and wype not out my mercy that I haue shewed on the house of my God, and on ỹ offyces therof. (.Eld.b.c.

At the same tyme saw I some tredyng wyne prelles on the Sabboth, & bryngyng in sheues, and asses laden with wyne, grapes, fygges and bryngyng all maner of burthens vnto Jerusalem vpon the Sabboth day. And I rebuked thẽ earnestly the same daye that they solde the vyttayles. There dwelte men of Tire also therein, which brought fysh and all maner of ware, and solde on the Sabboth vnto the chyldren of Juda in Jerusalem. Then reproued I the rulers in Juda, and sayde vnto them: what euell thyng is this that ye do, and breake the Sabboth daye? Dyd not your fathers euen thus, and oure God brought all this plage vpon vs, and vpon thys citye? And ye make the wrath more yet vpõ Israel, in that ye breake the Sabboth.

¶ And it fortuned that when the portes of Jerusalem began to be darke in ỹ euenynge before ỹ Sabboth, I cõmaunded to shut the gates and charged, that they shuld not be opened tyll after the Sabboth: & some of my seruaũtes set I at ỹ gates, ỹ there shulde no burthẽ be brought in on the Sabboth daye. Then remayned the chapmẽ and marchauntes ones or twyse ouer nyght wout Jerusalem with all maner of wares. Then reproued I them sore, & sayde vnto thẽ: why tary ye all nyght about the wall? Yf ye do it ones agayne, I wyl laye handes vpon you. Frõ that tyme forth came they nomore on the Sabboth. And I sayde vnto the Leuites ỹ they shuld clẽse them selues, & that they shuld come and kepe the gates, to halowe the Sabboth daye. Thynke vpon me (O my God) concernynge thys also, & spare me accordynge to thy great mercye.

D And at the same tyme saw I Jewes that maryed wyues of Asdod, of Ammon, and of Moab and theyr chyldren spake halfe in the speache of Asdod, and coulde not speake in the Jewes language, but by the tunge myght a man perceyue euery people. Then I reproued them, and cursed them, and smote certayne men of them, & made them bare, and toke an oth of them by God: Ye shall not geue youre doughters vnto theyr sonnes, neyther shall ye take theyr doughters vnto your sonnes, or for your selues. Dyd not Salomon the kyng of Israel synne for suche? and yet amonge many heythen was there no kyng lyke hym, whiche was dere vnto hys God, and God made hym kynge ouer Israel: and yet neuerthelesse, outlandyshe women caused hym to synne. Shall we then obeye vnto you, to doo all thys greate euell, and to trasgresse agaynst our God and mary straunge wyues?

And one of the chyldren of Jehoiada the son & of Eliasib the hye preaste had made a contracte wt Sanabalat the Horonyte: but I chased hym fro me: (O my God) thynke thou vpon them ỹ defyle the prestlhod & the couenaunt of the prestlhode & of the Leuites. Thus clensed I them frõ al suche as were outlandysh, and appoynted the courses of the prestes and Leuytes euerye one in hys office, and to offer the wood at tymes appoynted, and the fyrst frutes: Thinke thou vpõ me (O my God) for the best. ❧ (Amen.)

And the kynge loued Esther aboue all ỹ wemen. and she founde grace & fauoure in his syght before all the wyrgins: so that he set the crowne of the kyngdome vpon her heade, and made her Quene in stede of Vasthi. And the kynge made a great feaste vnto all his princes & seruauntes (which feast was because of Esther) and caused the landes to be in quyetnesse, and gaue gyftes, as became the royaltye of a kynge.

D And when the wyrgins were gathered together the seconde tyme, Mardocheus sate in the kinges gate. And as yet had not Esther shewed her kynred and people, accordynge as Mardocheus had bydden her: for Esther dyd after the worde of Mardocheus, lyke as she had bene yet vnder his gouernaunce. At ỹ same tyme whyle Mardocheus sat in the kynges gate, two of the kynges chamberlaynes, Bigthan and Theres, which kept the dore were wroth, and sought to lay theyr handes on ỹ kyng Ahasuerus: wherof also Mardocheus gat knowledge * and tolde it vnto Quene Esther, and Esther certifyed the kynge therof in Mardocheus name. And when inquysycion was made, it was founde so. And they were both hanged on tree: and it was wryt ten in the chronycles before the kynge. Esther. bi a

C The.iii. Chapter.

C Haman the Macedonian, after he was exalted obtayned of the kynge, ỹ all the Jues shulde be put to death, bycause Mardocheus had not done him worshyp as other had.

A Fter these Actes dyd kynge Ahasuerus promote Haman the sõne of Amadatha the Agagite, and sette hym on hye, and set his seate aboue all ỹ princes that he had with him. And all the kynges seruauntes that were in the kynges gate, bowed theyr knees, and worshypped Haman: for the kynge had so cõmaunded cõcernyng hym. But Mardocheus bowed not the knee, and worshypped hym not. Then the kynges seruauntes whych were in the kynges gate sayde vnto Mardocheus: why transgressest ỹ the kynges commaundementes? And when they spake this daylye vnto hym, he folowed theym not, and they tolde Haman: that they myghte se howe Mardocheus matters wolde endure: for he had tolde them, ỹ he was a Jewe. And when Haman sawe that Mardocheus bowed not the knee vnto hym, nor worshypped hym, he was full of indignacyon, and thoughte it to lytle to lay handes onely on Mardocheus: for they had shewed hym the nacyon of Mardocheus, wherfore he soughte to destroye all the Jewes, that were throwout the hole empyre of Ahasuerus and that were of the nacyon of Mardocheus.

In the fyrst moneth (ỹ is the moneth Nisan) in ỹ twelueth yere of kyng Ahasuerus: they cast Pur (that is a lot) before Haman from day to daye, and from moneth to moneth, to the twelueth moneth, that is the moneth Adar. And Haman sayd vnto kyng Ahasuerus: There is here a people scattred abrode, & dispersed amonge al people in all the landes of thyne empyre, & they haue theyr lawes contrary from all people, and do not after the kynges lawes, neyther is it the kynges profyte to suffer them after this maner. Yf it please the kyng, let it be wryttẽ that they maye be destroyed, and so wyl I weydowne. x. thousande talentes of syluer by the handes of ỹ worckemen, to be brought into the kynges treasury. And the kyng toke his ryngẽ frõ his hand and gaue it vnto Haman the sõne of Amidatha the Agagite the Jewes enemye. And the kynge sayd vnto Haman: Let the syluer be geuen the, & do with that people as it pleaseth the. B

C Then were the kynges scrybes called on the thyrtenthe daye of the fyrste moneth  (Nisan) and there was wrytten (accordynge as Haman cõmaunded) vnto al the kynges officers, and to the captaynes that were in all the landes, and to the rulers of euery people in the countryes on euery syde, accordyng to the wrytynge of euery nacyon, and after theyr language: in the name of kynge Ahasuerus was it wrytten, and sealed with the kynges ryngẽ. And the wrytynges were sent by postes into all the kynges landes, to roote oute, to kyll and to destroye all Jewes, bothe ponge and olde, chyldren and women, in one daye (namely, vpon the thyrtenth daye of ỹ twelueth moneth, which is the moneth *Adar) and to spoyle theyr goodes. C  Marche. Februarye

This was the sum of the wrytyng that ther shulde be a cõmaundement geuen in all landes, and published vnto al people, that they shuld be ready agaynst the same day. And ỹ postes went in all the haste, accordynge to the kynges commaundement. And in Susan ỹ chefe citye was the commaundement deuysed. And the kynge & Haman sat and dranke, when in ỹ meane tyme the citye of Susan was disquyeted. D

C The.iiii. Chapter.

C Mardocheus geueth the Quene knowledge of the cruell decre of the kynge agaynst the Jewes.

Whẽ Mardocheus perceyued all that was done, he rente hys clothes, and putte on sakcloth, wyth ashes, and wente oute in to the myddes of the citye, and cryed lowde, and lamentably, and came before the kynges gate, but he A myghte not entre wythin the kynges gate, bycause he had sackloth on And in all landes, countreyes and places, as farre as the kynges worde and cõmaundement extended, there was greate lamentacion amonge the Jewes, fastynge, weppyng and mournynge, and many laye in sakclothes and in asshes. So Esthers damsels and her chambrelaynes came and tolde it her. Then was the Quene exceedynglye astonyed. And she sent rayment, that Mardocheus shulde put on, and laye the sakcloth from hym: But Mardocheus wolde not take them. Then called Esther Hathath one of the kinges chãbrelaynes (which stode before her) and gaue hym a commaundement vnto Mardocheus, that he myght knowe what it were, wherefore he dyd so. So Hahath wente forth to Mardocheus vnto the strete of the citye, whyche was before the kynges gate.

B And Mardocheus tolde hym of all that had happened vnto hym, and of the summe of syluer that Haman had promysed to weye downe into the kinges treasurye bicause of the Jewes, yf he wolde destroye them (and he gaue hym the copy of the kynges commaundement that was deuysed at Susan, to destroye them, ỹ he might shewe it vnto Esther) and so speake to her, and charged her, that she shulde go into the kynge, and make her prayer and supplicacion vnto him for her people.

C And when Hathath came in, he tolde Esther the wordes of Mardocheus. And agayne, Esther spake vnto Hathath, and commaunded him, to saye vnto Mardocheus: all the kynges seruauntes and the people in the landes of the kyng knowe that whosoeuer cõmeth within the court vnto the kynge, whether it be man or woman, whych is not called, the cõmaundement is, that the same shall dye: excepte the kynge holde oute the golden sceptre vnto hym, ✠ (in token of gracious mynde) for then he shall lyue. As for me, I haue not bene called to come nowe vnto the kynge thys thyrtye dayes.

D And they certifyed Mardocheus of Esthers wordes: and Mardocheus bad saye agayne vnto Esther: thynke not to saue thyne owne lyfe, whyle thou arte in the kynges house, before all Jewes: for yf thou holdeste thy peace at thys tyme, then shall the Jewes haue helpe and deliuraunce oute of an other place, and thou and thy fathers house shalbe destroyed. And who knoweth whether thou arte come to the kyngdome, for thys cause sake? Esther bad thẽ giue Mardocheus this answere: Goo thou thy waye, and gather al the Jues togyther ỹ are found at Susan, and fast ye for me, that ye eate not ne drynke in thre dayes, neyther day nor nyght. I and my damsels wyll fast lykewyse, and so wyll I goo into the kynge, whyche thynge is yet contrarye to the commaundement: and yf I perysshe I perysh. So Mardocheus went hys waye, and dyd all that Esther had commaunded hym.

¶ The.v. Chapter.

¶ Esther entreth into the kynge, and bydeth hym and Haman to a feast. Haman prepareth a gallous for Mardocheus.

AND on ỹ thyrd day it fortuned that Esther put on her royal apparell, & stode in the court of the kynges palace wythin, ouer agaynst the kynges house. And the kynge sat vpon his royall seate in ỹ kynges palace ouer against the gate of the house. And when the kynge sawe Esther the Quene stãding in the court, she foũd grace in hys syght. And the kynge helde out the golden sceptre that was in hys hande towarde Esther. So Esther stept forth, and touched the top of the sceptre. Then sayd the kyng vnto her What wylte thou Quene Esther? and what requyrest thou? aske euen the halfe of the empyre, & it shalbe gyuen the. And Esther answered: yf it please the kynge, let the king and Hamã come thys day vnto the banket, that I haue prepared for hym. And the kynge sayde: cause Haman to make haste that he may do as Esther hath sayd.

So the kyng and Haman came to the banket B that Esther had prepared, and the kynge sayde vnto Esther at the banket of wyne: what is thy petition, that it may be gyuen the? And what requyrest thou? Yf it be euẽ the halfe of the empyre it shallbe done.

Then answerede Esther, and sayd: my petition and desyre is, yf I haue foũde grace in the syght of the kynge, and yf it please the kynge to gyue me my peticion, and fulfyll my request, thã let the kynge and Haman come to the banket ỹ I shal prepare for them, and so wyll I do to morowe, as the kynge hath sayde.

Then wente Haman forth the same day ioy- C full and mery in his mynde. And when the same Hamã sawe Mardocheus in the kynges gate ỹ he stode not vp and kneled before hym, he was full of indignacion at Mardocheus. Neuertheless, Haman refrayned hym selfe: and when he came home he sent, & called for hys frendes, and zares his wyfe, and Hamã tolde them of the glory of hys rychesse, and the multitud of hys chyldren, and all togyther howe the kynge had promoted hym so greatly, & how that he had set hym aboue the princes and seruauntes of the kynge: Haman sayd moreouer: Yea, & Esther the quene D dyd let noman come in with the kyng to the bãket that she had prepared, except me. And to morowe am I bydden vnto her also with the kyng. But in all thys am I not satisfyed, as longe as I se Mardocheus the Jewe sytting at the kynges gate. Then sayd zares his wyfe and all his frendes vnto hym: Let them make a gallous of fyftye cubytes hye, and to morowe speake thou vnto the kyng, that Mardocheus maye be hanged theron: and go thou in merely with the king vnto the banket. And Haman was well cõtent wyth all, and caused the gallous to be made.

¶ The.vi. Chapter.

¶ The kynge turneth ouer the Chronicles, and fyndeth the fidelitie of Mardocheus: & then to the confusion of Hamã, cõmaundeth Mardocheus to be had in honour.

THe same nyght could not ỹ kyng slepe and he cõmaunded to bryng ỹ chronicles & stories: whych when they were red before the king, they happened on the place, where it was written howe

Esther.ii.d * Mardocheus had tolde that Bigthana, and Theres the kynges two chamberlaynes (which kept the threscholdes) sought to laye handes on kynge Ahasuerus. And the kynge sayd: What worshyp & good haue we done to Mardocheus therfore? Then sayd the kynges seruauntes that mynystred vnto hym: There is nothynge at all done for hym. And the kyng sayd: Who is in the courte? (for Haman was gone in to the courte without, before ỹ kynges house) that he mygbt speake vnto the kyng to hange Mardocheus on the tree (that he had prepared for hym). And the kynges seruauntes sayd vnto him: beholde, Haman standeth wout in the courte. And the kyng sayd: let hym come in. And when Haman came in, the kynge sayd vnto hym: What shall be done vnto the man whom ỹ kyng wold fayne bringe vnto worshyp? Haman thought in his herte: Whom delyteth the kynge to bringe vnto worshyp more then me? And Haman answered the kynge: Let the man whom the kyng pleaseth to bringe vnto worshyp, be brought hyther: that he may be arayed wt the royal garmentes, which the kynge vseth to weare: and the horse that the kynge rydeth vpon, and that the crowne royall may be set vpon his head. And let this rayment and horse be delyuered vnder the hande of one of the kynges princes, that they may aray the man withall (whom the kynge is disposed to bringe to honour) and cary hym vpon the horse thorow the strete of the cytie, and proclayme before him: thus shall it be done vnto the man whome the kynge pleaseth to bringe to honour.

C And the kynge sayd: make haste, and take as thou hast sayd: the rayment and the horse: and do euen so vnto Mardocheus the Jewe, that sytteth before the kynges gate, & let nothyng fayle of all that thou hast spoken. Then toke Haman the rayment and the horse, and arayed Mardocheus, and brought hym on horsebacke thorow the strete of the cytie, & proclaymed before hym: Euen this shall it be done to the man whom the kynge is disposed to honour. And Mardocheus D came agayn to the kynges gate: but Haman gat hym home in all the haste mournyng bareheded, and tolde zares his wyfe & all his frendes euery thynge that had happened hym. Then sayd his wyse men, and zares his wyfe vnto hym: Yf it be Mardocheus of the sede of the Jewes, before whom thou hast begon to fall, thou shalt not preuayle agaynst hym, but shalte surely fall before hym. And whyle they were yet talkynge with hym, came the kynges chamberlaynes, and caused Haman to make haste, to come vnto the banket that Esther had prepared.

C The. vii. Chapter.

C The Quene bydeth the kynge and Haman agayns and prayeth for her selfe & her people. She accuseth Haman, and he is hanged on the gallous, whyche he had prepared for Mardocheus.

A And the kynge & Haman came in to the banket that Quene Esther had prepared, and the kyng sayd vnto Esther on the second day at the banket of wyne: What is thy petycyon, (Quene Esther) that it may be gyuen the? And what requyrest thou? Yee aske euen halfe of the empyre, and it shall be done. And Esther the Quene answered, & sayd: Yf I haue founde grace in thy syght (O kynge) and yf it please the kynge, then graunte me my lyfe at my desyre, and my people for my petycyons sake: for we are solde, I and my people, to be destroyed, to be slayne, and to perysshe. And wolde God that we were solde to be bondmen B and bondwomen, then wolde I holde my tonge: for the enemy pondreth not the kynges harme. The kynge Ahasuerus answered, and sayd vnto Quene Esther: Who is he? and where is he, that dare presume in his mynde to do after that maner? And Esther sayd: the enemy and aduersary is this wycked Haman.

Haman was exceedyngly afrayd before ỹ kyng C & the Quene. And the kyng arose frō the banket and from the wyne in his displeasure, & wente in to the palais garden. And Haman stode vp, and besought Quene Esther for his lyfe: for he sawe that there was a myschefe prepared for hym of the kynge alredy. And when the kynge came agayn out of ỹ palays garden, into ỹ place where they dranke wyne, Haman had layde hym vpon the bed that Esther sat vpon. Then sayd ỹ kyng wyl he force ỹ Quene also before me in ỹ house? As soone as that worde went out of the kynges D mouth, they couered Hamās face: and Harbona one of ỹ chamberlaynes that stode before ỹ king sayd: behold, there standeth a galous in Hamans house. l. cubites hye, which he had made for Mardocheus, that spake good for ỹ kyng. The kyng sayd: hang hym theron. So they hanged Hamā on the galous, that he had made for Mardocheus. Then was the kynges wrath pacifyed.

C The. viii. Chapter.

C After the death of Haman was Mardocheus exalted, and then are there comfortable letters sent vnto the Jewes.

The same day dyd kyng Ahasuerus gyue A the house of Haman the Jewes enemye vnto Quene Esther. And Mardocheus came before the kyng: for Esther tolde how that he belonged vnto her. And the kynge put of his fynger a rynge whiche he had taken frō Haman, and gaue it vnto Mardocheus. And Esther set Mardocheus ouer the house of Haman. And Esther spake yet more before the kyng: and fell downe at his fete weppynge, and besought hym that he wolde put awaye the wyckednes of Haman the Agagite, & his deuyce that he had ymagined agaynst the Jewes. And the kyng *(according to the maner) held out the golden scepter to- *a warde Esther, *(wherby was declared a token of gra- *b ciousnesse.) Then arose Esther, and stode before 25 the kynge, and sayd: Yf it please the kynge, and yf I haue founde grace in his syght, and yf it be acceptable before the kynge, then let it be wrytten, that the letters of the deuyce of Haman the sonne of Amadatha the Agagite may be called agayne: whiche letters he wrote to destroye the C Jewes, which are in all the kynges landes. For how can I suffre and se the euyll, that shall happen vnto my people? Or how can I loke vpon the destruction of my kynred?

And the kynge Ahasuerus sayd vnto Quene Esther:

Esther and to Mardocheus the Jewe: Beholde I haue gyuen Esther the house of Haman, whō they haue hanged vpon a tree, bycause he layed hand vpon the Jewes. Wryte ye also for the Jewes, as it lyketh you in the kynges name, and seale it wyth the kinges rynge, (for the wrytinges that were wrytten in the kinges name, and sealed with the kynges rynge, durst nomā disannull.) Then were the kynges scribes called at ỹ same tyme, euen in the thyrd moneth, that is the moneth * Siuan, on the .xxiii. daye.

*Maye. D And it was wrytten (accordynge to all as Mardocheus cōmaunded) vnto the Jewes and to the princes, to the deputies and captaynes in the lādes whych are from India vnto Ethiopia namely an hundred and seuen and twentye landes, vnto euery one accordyng to the wrytynge therof, and to euerye people after theyr speache, and the Jewes accordynge to theyr wrytynge and language.

And he wrote in the kyng Ahasuerus name, and sealed it with the kynges rynge. And by postes that rode vpon horses, and swyfte younge mules sent he the wrytynges wherin the kynge graunted the Jewes (in what cityes soeuer they were) to gather them selues togither, & to stande for theyr lyfe, and for to roote out, to slaye and to destroye al the power of the people and lande that wold trouble them wyth chyldren and women, and to spoyle theyr good vpon one daye in all the landes of kynge Ahasuerus, namely, vpon the thyrtenth daye of the twelueth moneth, Februarye whyche is the moneth * Adar.

E The summe of the wrytting was, how there shulde be a cōmaundemente gyuen in all landes, and publyshed amonge all people, and that the Jewes shulde be ready agaynste that daye, and to auenge them selues on theyr enemyes. And so the postes that rode vpō the swyft horses and mules made haste with all spede, to execute the kynges worde: and the cōmaundement was deuysed in Susan the chefe citye.

 And Mardocheus went out * (from the palace) from the kynge in royall apparel of yelowe and white, and with a great crowne of golde, being arayed wyth a garment of sylke and purple, and the citye of Susan reioyced and was glad, and vnto the Jewes there was come * (a newe) lyght and gladnesse, ioye and worshyp. In all landes and cityes, into what place so euer the kynges worde and commaundement reached, there was ioye and myrth, prosperitye and good dayes amonge the Jewes: in somuche that many of the people of the lande became of the Jewes belefe and the feare of the Jewes came vpon them.

¶ The .ix. Chapter.

¶ At the cōmaundement of the kynge, the Jewes put theyr aduersaryes to death: The sonnes of Haman are hanged. The Jewes kepe a feast daye in remembraunce of theyr deliueraunce.

IN the twelueth moneth, that is ỹ moneth Adar, vpon the thyrtenth daye of the same, when the kynges worde and commaundemente shulde be done, euen vpon the same day that the enemyes shuld haue destroyed the Jewes, to haue oppressed them, it turned contrary wyse, euen that the Jues shuld subdue theyr ennemyes. For they gathered the Jewes togyther in theyr cityes wythin all the landes of kyng Ahasuerus, to lay hande on such as wold do them euyll, and no man coulde withstande them: for the feare of them was come ouer all people. And all the rulers in the landes, and princes and deputyes & officers of the kyng, promoted the Jewes, for the feare of Mardocheus came vpon them. For Mardocheus was great in the kynges house, and the report of him was noysed in al landes, howe he encreased and grewe.

Thus the Jewes smote all theyr enemyes wō a sore slaughter, and slue and destroyed and dyd after theyr wyl vnto suche as were theyr aduersaryes. And at Susan the chefe city slue the Jewes, and destroyed fyue hundred men, and slue Pharsandatha, Dalphon Asphatha, Pharatha Adalia, Aridatha, Pharmastha, Arisai, Aridai and Vaizatha the ten sōnes of Haman, the sonnes of Hamadata the enemye of the Jewes: but on hys goodes they layed no handes. At ỹ same tyme was the kynge certyfyed of the nombre of those that were slayne in ỹ citye of Susan. And the kyng sayd vnto Quene Esther: The Jewes haue slayne and destroyed fyue hundred men in the cetye of Susan, and the ten sonnes of Hamā what haue they done (thynkeste thou) in other landes of the kynge? And what is thy petition, that it maye be gyuen the? Or what requyreste thou more to be done? Esther answered: Yf it please the kyng, let hym suffre the Jewes to morowe also to do accordynge vnto thys dayes cōmaundemente, that they maye hange Hamans ten sonnes vpon tree. And the kynge charged to do so, and the commaundement was deuysed at Susan, and they hanged Hamans ten sonnes. E For the Jewes that were in Susan gathered them selues togyther, vpon the fourtenth days of the moneth Adar, and slue thre hundred men at Susan, but on theyr goodes they layed no handes: As for the other Jewes that were in the kynges lādes, they came togyther, and stode for theyr lyues, that they myght haue rest frō theyr enemyes: and slue of theyr enemyes fyue & seuentye thousande: howbeit, they layed no hādes on theyr goodes. Thys they dyd on the thyrtenth daye of the moneth Adar, and on the fourtenth daye of the same moneth rested they: whych day they helde wyth feastynge and gladnesse. But the Jewes that were at Susan came together both on the thyrtenth daye, and on the fourtenth, and on the fyftenth daye of the same they rested and held that daye wyth feastyng and gladnes. And therfore the Jewes that dwelt in the vilages and vnwalled townes, helde the fourtenth daye of the moneth Adar, wyth gladnesse and feastynge, and kepte holye daye, and euerye one sent gyftes vnto an other. D

And Mardocheus wrote these actes, & sente the wrytynges vnto al the Jewes that were in all the landes of kyng Ahasuerus, both nye and far, that they shulde make a lawe amonge them selues, and holde the fourtenthe, and fyftenth

Esther and to Mardocheus the Jewe: Beholde I haue gyuen Esther the house of Haman, whō they haue hanged vpon a tree, bycause he layed hand vpon the Jewes. And the kynge charged to do so, and the commaundement was deuysed at Susan, and they hanged Hamans ten sonnes. E For the Jewes that were in Susan gathered them selues togyther, vpon the fourtenth days of the moneth Adar, and slue thre hundred men at Susan, but on theyr goodes they layed no handes: As for the other Jewes that were in the kynges lādes, they came togyther, and stode for theyr lyues, that they myght haue rest frō theyr enemyes: and slue of theyr enemyes fyue & seuentye thousande: howbeit, they layed no hādes on theyr goodes. Thys they dyd on the thyrtenth daye of the moneth Adar, and on the fourtenth daye of the same moneth rested they: whych day they helde wyth feastynge and gladnesse. But the Jewes that were at Susan came together both on the thyrtenth daye, and on the fourtenth, and on the fyftenth daye of the same they rested and held that daye wyth feastyng and gladnes. And therfore the Jewes that dwelt in the vilages and vnwalled townes, helde the fourtenth daye of the moneth Adar, wyth gladnesse and feastynge, and kepte holye daye, and euerye one sent gyftes vnto an other. D

daye of the moneth Adar, as the dayes wherin the Jewes came to rest from theyr enemyes, and as a moneth wherin theyr payne was turned to ioye, and theyr sorowe in to an holy daye, and that in those dayes they shoulde make feastes, and gladnesse, and one to sende gyftes vnto an other, and to distribute vnto the poore.

¶ And the Jewes were content with it that they had begon to do, and that Mardocheus wrote vnto them: how that Haman the sonne of Hamadatha all the Jewes enemy, had deuysed agaynst the Jewes, how he myght destroy them and caused to cast Phur (that is a lot) for to put them in feare, & to bryng them to nought, and how Esther wente and spake to the kynge, that thorowe letters his wycked deuyce (whiche he ymagined agaynst the Jewes) myght be turned vpon his owne head, and how he and his sonnes were hanged on tree. For the whiche cause they called this daye Phurim, bycause of the name of the lot, and bycause of all the wordes of this wrytynge: and what they them selues had sene, and what had happened vnto them.

¶ And the Jewes set it vp, and toke it vpon them and theyr sede, and vpon all suche as ioyned them selues vnto them, that they wolde not mysse, but obserue those two dayes yerely, accordynge as they were wrytten and appoynted: how that these dayes are not to be forgotten, but to be kept of chylders chyldren amonge all kynredes in all landes and cytyes. They are the dayes of Phurim, which are not to be ouerslypt amonge the Jewes, and the memorypall of them ought not to perysh from theyr sede.

And Quene Esther the doughter of Abihail and Mardocheus the Jewe wrote with all authoritie (to confyrme the seconde wrytynge of Phurim) and sent the letters vnto al the Jewes in the hundred and seuen and twenty landes of the empyre of Ahasuerus, with frendly & kaythfull wordes, to confyrme these dayes of Phurim in theyr tyme appoynted, accordynge as Mardocheus the Jewe and Esther the Quene had appoynted them. And they bounde theyr soule and theyr sede to fastynge and prayer. And Esther stablysshed the wordes of these lottes, as it is wrytten in the booke.

¶ And the kyng Ahasuerus layde tribute vpon the lande, and vpon the yles of the see. And all that he dyd by his power and authoryte, and the great worshyp of Mardocheus, whiche the kynge gaue hym, be they not wrytten in the Chronicles of the kynges of Media and Persia? For Mardocheus the Jewe was the seconde nexte vnto kynge Ahasuerus, & great amonge the Jewes, and accepted amonge the multitude of his brethren, as one that seketh the welth of his people, and speaketh the best for all his sede.

¶ The. xi. Chapter.

¶ Job is vniustly reprehended of Sophar. God is incomprehensyble. He is mercyfull to the repentaunt.

Then answered Sophar the Naama thyte, and sayde: Shuld not he that maketh many wordes, be aunswe-red? Shulde he that bableth muche be commended therin? Shulde men gene eare vnto the onely? Thou wylt laugh other men to scorne, and shall no body mocke the out shame, and then shouldest thou be sure, and haue no nede to feare.

Then shuldest thou forget thy mysery, and thynke nomore vpon it, then vpon the waters that runne by. Then shoulde the residue of thy lyfe be as cleare as the noone daye, and sprynge forth as the morninge. Then myghtest thou

Then Job answered, and sayde: Then (no haue vnderstanding as wel as ye, and am no lesse then ye. Yea, who knoweth not these thynges? Thus he that calleth vpon God, and whome God heareth, is mocked of hys neygh-boure: the godly and innocent mã is laughed to scorne. Godlynes is a lyght despysed in the hartes of the ryche, and is set for them to stomble v-sperytie: & they that malycyously medle agaynst God, dwell without care in those thynges that God hath geuen rychely with his hande.

Aske thy catell, and they shall enfourme the he withholde the waters, they drye vp. Yf he let them go, they destroye the earthe. With hym is strength and wysdome: he knoweth both the de ceyuer, and hym that is deceyued.

He caryeth awaye the wyse men, as it were a spoyle, and bryngeth the Judges out of theyr wyttes. He taketh awaye the subiection of the people fro theyr kynges: and gyrdeth theyr loynes with a bande. He leadeth awaye the greate men into captiuyte, and turneth the myghty vp syde downe. *He taketh the verye from out of

LO, all thys haue I sene wyth myne eye, herd with myne eare, and vnderstande it. Loke what ye knowe, that same do I know also, nether am I inferyor vnto you. Neuertheles, I talke with the Almyghtie, & my desyre is to comen with God. As for you ye are workemasters of lyes, & vnprofytable ✱ physycions altogether. Wolde God ye kept your tonge, for then myght ye be taken for wyse men. Nowe heare my chyding, and ponder the sentence of my lyps.

Do ye speake iniquite agaynst God, & talke agaynst hym with disceyte? Wyll ye not accept the person of hym? Or wyl ye contende wt God? Shall that helpe you when he calleth you to rekenyng? For as one mā mocketh an other, so do ye mocke hym. He shall punyshe you, & reproue you, yf ye do secretly accept any persone. Shall he not make you afrayde, when he sheweth hym selfe? Shall not his terryble feare fal vpon you? your remembraunce is lyke vnto a sparke, and your bodyes lyke the clay.

¶ Holde your tonges, for my sake, that I also maye speake, and my sorowe shalbe the lesse. Wherfore do I beare my flesh in my teth, ✱ and put my soule in mine hādes? Lo, though he slaye me yet wyl I put my truste in hym. But I ✱ wyl reproue myne owne wayes in his syght he shal make me whole: & there maye no ypocryte come before hym. Heare my wordes, and ponder my sayenges with your eares. Beholde, now haue I prepared my iudgement, & knowe that I shal be founde ryghteous. What is he, that wyll go to lawe wyth me? or ✱ (Let hym come) that I maye nowe holde my tonge, and dye. Neuertheles, graunte me two thynges, and then wyll I not hyde my selfe from the.

Wythdrawe thyne hande from me, and let not the fearfull drede of the make me afrayde. And then call me, and I wyll answere: or els let me speake, and geue me thou an answere. How many are my mysdedes & synnes? Let me know my transgressions and offences? Wherfore hydest thou thy face, and holdest me for thyne enemye? Wylt thou be so cruell and extreame vnto a fyenge leafe, and folowe vpon dry stubble? for thou lapest sharpely to my charge, and punishest me ✱ for the synnes of my youthe. ‡ Thou puttest my fete also in the stockes: and lokest narowly vnto all my pathes, and markest ỹ steppes of my fete where as I (notwithstandynge) muste consume lyke as a foule carcon, and as a clothe that is motheaten.

¶ Job discrybeth the lyfe of man, and prophecyeth of the resurrection. Hope susteyneth the godly, tyll they obteyne that they loke for.

MAn that is borne of woman, hathe but a short tyme to lyue, and is full of mysery. He commeth vp and is cut downe lyke a floure. He flyeth as it were a shadowe, and neuer cōtynueth in one state. Dost thou open thyne eyes vpon suche one, & bryngest me in thy iudgemēt? Who can make it cleane, that cōmeth of an vncleane thynge? No body. ✱ The dayes of mā surely are determyned, the nombre of hys monethes are knowen only vnto the. Thou hast appoynted hym his boundes, which he can not go beyonde. Go frō hym that he maye reste (a tyme) vntyll his daye come: whiche he loketh for, lyke as an hyrelynge doeth.

Yf a tre be cut downe, there is some hope yet that it wyll sproute, and shote forth the braunches agayne. For though ỹ rote of it be waren olde, and the stocke therof be dead in ỹ grounde yet when it getteth ỹ sent of water, it wyl bud and bringe forth bowes, lyke as a tree that is planted. But as for man, when he is dead, perysshed and cōsumed away, what becōmeth of hym?

The floodes when they be dryed vp, and ỹ ryuers when they be emptye, ar fylled agayne thorowe the flowyng waters of the see: but when man slepeth, he ryseth not agayne (of hys owne strength) ✱ vntyll the heauen perysh: he shal not wake vp, nor ryse out of his slepe. O that thou woldest kepe, and hyde me in the hell, vntyl thy wrath were stylled, and to appoynte me a tyme, wherein thou myghtest remembre me. Maye a deade man lyue agayne? ✱ All the dayes of my lyfe wyll I wayte styl, tyll my chaungyng shal come. Thou shalte call me: and I shall answere the, ‡ despyse not thou the worke of thyne owne handes.

For nowe thou nōbrest all my goynges, yet be not thou to extreame vpon my synnes. My iniquite is sealed vp, as it were in a bagge: but be mercyfull vnto my wyckednes. The moūtaynes fall awaye at the last, the rockes are removed out of theyr place, ỹ waters pearce thorow the very stones by lytle & lytle, ỹ floudes washe awaye the grauell and earth. And destroyest ỹ the hope of mā? Thou preuaylest styll agaynst hym, so that he passeth awaye: thou chaungest hys estate, and puttest hym from the. And whether his chyldren come to worshyp or no, he can not tell. And yf they be men of lowe degree, he knoweth not. Whyle he lyueth: hys flesshe muste haue trauayle, and whyle the soule is in hym, he muste be in sorowe.

¶ Elyphas reprehenderh Job because he asserteth wysdō and puretnesse to hym selfe. He discryeth the curse that falleth on the wycked, rekenyng Job to be one of ỹ nombre.

THen answered Eliphas the Themanite and sayde: Shall a wyse mans answere be the scyence of the wynde, and fyll any mans belly, as it were the wynde of the Easte? Shall he reproue with a worde that is nothing worth wroth, and speake the thynges: whiche can do no good? As for shame, thou hast set it aside, els woldest thou not make so many wordes before God, but thy wickednesse teacheth thy mouth, and so thou hast chosen ꝑ crafty tonge. Thine owne mouth condēpneth the, & not I: yea, thine owne lyppes shape an answere agaynste the.

Arte thou the fyrst mā, that euer was borne Or wast thou made before the hyls? hast thou herde the secrete councell of God that all wysedome is so lytle for the? What knowest thou ꝑ we knowe not? And what understandest thou, but we can the same? With vs are both old and aged men: yea, suche as haue lyued longer then thy father.

B Thynkest thou it a small thynge of the consolacions of God? With the is a lyuinge worde. Why doth thyne hart so be witch ꝑ. And wherfore wynkest thou wyth thyne eyes, that thy mynde is so puft vp agaynst God, & lettest such wordes go out of thy mouth? What is mā, that he shuld be cleane? what hath he (which is borne of a woman) wherby he myght be rygh teous?

Job.iiii.b. xl.Pet, ii.b *Beholde he doth not trust his sayntes: yea, the very heauens are not cleane in his syght. Howe much more then an abhominable and vyle mā, which drynketh wickednes lyke water? I wyl tell the, heare me: and I wyl shewe the ꝑ I haue sene: whiche wyse men haue tolde, and hath not ben hyd from theyr fathers vnto whome only ꝑ erth was geuē & no straūger went amōge thē.

C Gen.iiii.b. The *vngodly soroweth all ꝑ dayes of his lyfe as it were a woman with a chylde, and the nombre of a tyrauntes yeares is vnknowen. A fearfull sounde is euer in his eares, and when it is peace, yet feareth he destruccyon. He beleueth neuer to be delyuered oute of darkenesse, for the swearde is alwaye before his eyes. When he goeth forth to get his liuynge, he seeth playnely ꝑ the daye of darkenesse is at hande. Sorow and carefulnesse wyl make him afrayde, & compasse hym rounde aboute, lyke as it were a kynge wt his hoste ready to the batayle. For he hath stretched out his hande agaynste God, & armed hym selfe agaynst the almyghtye. He runneth proudlye vpon hym, and with a stycke necke fyghteth he agaynste hym: where as he coureth his face wyth fastenesse, and maketh his bodye well lykynge. Therfore shall his dwellynge be in desolate cityes, and in houses which no man inhabyteth, but are become heapes of stones. He shall D not be ryche, nether shall his substaunce contynue, nor encrease vpō earth. He shal neuer come oute of darkenesse, the flame shall dryye vp hys braunches. with the blast of the mouth of God, shall he be taken awaye. He beleueth not that he is in vanyte, and yet he is out of the waye, & vanite shalbe his recompence.

He shall perysche, afore hys tyme be worne out, and his braunche shall not be grene. He shal be plucked of as an vntimely grape frō ꝑ wyne: and shall let his floure fall, as the olyue doth. For the congregacyon of ypocrytes shalbe desolate and vnfrutefull, and the fyre shall consume the houses of suche as are gredy to receyue gyftes. *He conceyueth trauayle, and beareth vanitie, and theyr bodye bryngeth forth deceyte. Gal.vii.b. Ephe.iii.a

The.xvi. Chapter.

Job repetyng his myserie, sayth that he suffereth more then his wyckednes hath deserued.

Job answered and sayd: I haue ofty A mes herde suche thynges, mysera ble geuers of comforte are ye, all ꝑ sorte of you. Shal not vayne wordes yet come to an ende?

Or wast thou yet any more to saye? I coulde speake, as ye do also. But wold God that your soule were in my soules stede: then shoulde I heape vp wordes agaynst you, & shake my hed at you. I shulde comforte you with my mouth, and release your payne with the talkyng of my lyppes. (But what shall I do) For all my wordes, B my sorowe wyl not cease: and though I holde my tonge, yet wyl it not departe from me. But now that God hath sent me aduersite, thou hast troubled all my congregacyon.

And that thou hast fylled me wyth wrynkles, my flesh is record, and my leanesse ryseth vp agaynst me, & beareth wytnes agaynst me. He is angrye at me, he hateth me: and gnasheth vpon me wyth hys teeth. Myne enemye skouleth vpon me with his eyes.

They haue opened their mouthes wyde vpō C me, *and smytten me vpon the cheke despytefully, they gather them selues together agaynste me. God hath put me in prayer wyth the vngodlye, and delyuered me into the handes of ꝑ wycked. I was in welth, but he hath brought me to nought. He hath taken me by the necke, he hath rente me, and sette me as a marke for hym selfe. Hys archers compasse me roūde about: he wounded my loynes, and doth not spare. My bowels hath he poured vpon the grounde. He hath gyuen me one wounde vpon another, and is fallen vpon me lyke a gyaunte. I haue sowed a sackecloth vpon my skynne, and lye wyth my heare in the duste. Iob.xvi.b. in xx.xxii.b in xx.xxix.g

My face is swollen with weppynge, & myne D eyes is the shadowe of death. Howbeit there is no wyckednesse in my handes, but my prayer is cleane. O earth, couer not thou my bloude, and let my crienge fynde no rowme.

For lo, my wytnesse is in heuen: and he that knoweth me, is aboue in the heygth: My frendes geue me many wordes to scorne: and myne eye poureth out teares vnto God. O that a bodye myght pleate wyth God, as one man doeth wyth another: yet the nombre of my yeares is come, and the waye that I must gois at hande, from whence I shall not turne agayne.

The.xvii. Chapter.

Job sayeth that he consumeth awaye, and yet doeth patyently abyde it.

My breathe stynketh, my dayes are A shortened. I am harde at deathes dore. Frowarde men are wyth me, and myne eye must contynue in the bytternesse of them. O delyuer me, and loke out one to be my suretye in thy syghte. What is he that knoweth who wyl promes for me?

me? For thou hast witholden their hartes from vnderstandynge: therfore shalt ꝑ not set (them) vp on hye. He prompteth hys frendes parte of hys good, but hys owne chyldren spende it. He hath made me as it were a byworde of the people: where as a fore I was theyre tope. Myne eye is dymme for verye heupnesse, and all my strength is become lyke a shadowe. Vertuous men therfore shal wel consyder this, and the innocent shall take parte agaynst the ypocryte.

¶ The ryghteous also wyll kepe hys waye, & he that hath cleane handes, wyll euer be stronger and stronger. As for you, turne you, and get you hence (I praye you) seynge I can not fynde one wyse man amonge you: My dayes are past and my counsayles and thoughtes of my harte are vanyshed awaye, chaungynge the nyght into daye, and the lyght into darkenesse. Though I tarye neuer somuch, yet the graue is my house, and I haue made my bed in the darke. I call corrupcyon my father, & the wormes call I my mother and syster. What helpeth then my longe tarynge? Or who hath consydered the thynge, ꝑ I loke for? All that I haue shall go downe into the pyt, and lye wyth me in the dust.

¶ Wyldad rehearseth the paynes of the vnfaythfull and wycked.

Then aunswered Wildad the Suhite, and sayd: when wyl ye make an ende of youre wordes? Marke well, and then we wyll speake. Wherfore are we counted as beastes, and reputed so vyle in your syghte? He destroyed hymselfe wyth hys anger? Shal the earth be forsaken, or any stone removed out of hys place, bycause of the? Yea, the lyght of ꝑ vngodly shalbe put out? and the sparke of hys fyre shall not burne. The lyght shalbe darke in hys dwellynge, & his candell shalbe put out wyth hym. Hys presumptuous goynges are kepte in, and his owne counsel shal cast hym downe. For his fete are taken, as it were in the net, and he is at hys wyttes ende. Hys fote shalbe holden in the snare, and it shall catche them that be thyrsty of bloud: The snare is layde for hym in the grounde, and a pytfall in the waye.

¶ Fearfulnesse shall make hym afrayde on euery syde, that he shal not know, where to get out. Hunger shalbe hys strengthe: myschyefe shall hange vpon hym. He shalt eate the strengthe of hys owne skynne, euen the fyrst borne of deathe shall eate hys strength. Hys hope shalbe rooted out of hys dwellynge, verye fearefulnesse shall bringe hym to the kyng. Other men shall dwel in hys house (but shall be none of hys) and brymstone shalbe scattred vpon his habitacyon. Hys rootes shalbe dryed vp byneth, and aboue shall his braunche be cut downe: His remembraunce shal perysshe from the earth, and he shal haue no name in the strete: they shall dryue hym frō the syghte into darkenesse, and cast hym cleane oute of the worlde. He shall nether haue chyldren nor kynsfolkes amonge hys people, no, nor any posterye in his dwellynges. They that come after hym, shalbe astonyed at hys daye, and they that go before, shal be afrayde. Suche are nowe the dwellynges of the wycked, and this is the place of hym that knoweth not God.

¶ Iob reciteth his miseryes and greuous paynes. He prophecyeth of the generall resurrecyon.

Iob answered, and sayde, how longe wyl ye vexe my soule, and trouble me wyth wordes? Lo, ten tymes haue ye reproued me: and are not ashamed for to laughe me so to scorne: yf I go wronge, I go wronge to my self. But yf ye wyll enhaunce your selues agaynst me, & accuse me to be a wycked person, because of the shame that is come vpon me: knowe this then, that it is God that hath handled me so violently, and hath compassed me aboute wyth his net. Yf I * complayne of the vyolence done vnto me, I can not be heard. And yf I cry, there is no sentence geuen with me. He hath hedged vp my vyce, that I can not passe, and he hath set darkenesse in my pathes. * He hathe spoyled me of myne honoure, and taken the crowne away fro my heade. He hath destroyed me on euery syde, & I am vndone: My hope hath he taken away fro me, as it were a tree pluckt vp by the roote. His wrath is kyndled agaynst me: he taketh me, as thoughe I were hys enemye.

Iob. 1.a.ii.

His men of warre came together, wyth me made their way ouer me, and beseged my dwellynge rounde about. * He hath put my brethren farre away from me, and such as were of myne acquayntaunce, are become straūgers vnto me. * Myne owne kynsfolkes haue forsaken me, & my frendes haue put me oute of remembraunce. The seruauntes and maydens of myne owne house, toke me for a straūger: and I am become as an alcaunt in their syghte.

pſ. xxxviii. c

I called my seruaunt, and he gaue me no answere: no though I prayed him wyth my mouth. Myne owne wyfe myght not abyde my breath & I was fayne for to speake fayre for the chyldrē of myne owne body. Yea, the chyldren despysed me. And when I was gone frō them, they spake euell vpon me. All suche as were my moste familyers, abhorred me: and they whome I loued best, are turned agaynst me. My bone hangeth to my skynne, and my flesche is awaye, only there is lefte me the skynne about my teth. Haue pytie vpon me, haue pytie vpon me, (O ye my frēdes) for the hāde of God hath touched me. Why do ye persecute me as God doth, and are not satisfyed of my flesche.

O that my wordes were nowe wrytten: O that they were put in a booke: wolde God they were grauen wyth an yron penne in leade, or in stone to contynue. For I am sure, that my redemer lyueth, and that I shal ryse out of the earth in the latter daye: that I shalbe clothed agayne wyth thys skynne, and se God in my flesche. Yea I my selfe shall beholde hym, not wt others, but with these same eyes. My raynes are consumed wythin me, dyd not ye saye: Why doeth he suffre persecucyon? Is there founde an occasyon in me? But beware of the swearde, for the swerd wyl be auenged of wyckednesse: & be sure, that there is a Judgemente.

¶ Sophar sayeth, that the vnsaythfull, the couetous, and the wycked shall haue a shorte ende.

THen answered Sophar the Naamathite, and sayde: For the same cause do my thoughtes compell me to answere. And why? my mynde is redye wythin me. I haue suffycyentlye heard thy checkynge and reproke, therfore am I purposed to make answere after myne vnderstandynge. Knowest thou not thys, namely, that from the begynnyng (euer sence the creacyon of man vpon earth) the gladnesse of ỹ vngodlye hath bene shorte, and that the iope of ypocrytes contynued but the twynklyng of an eye? Though he be magnifyed vp to ỹe heauen, so that his heade reacheth vnto the clowdes, yet at a turne he perysshed for euer, in so muche ỹ they which haue sene hym, shall saye: Where is he? Ye shall vanysshe as a dreame: so that he can no more be founde, and shall passe awaye as a vysyon in the nyght. So that ỹ eye which sawe hym before, shall haue no more syght of hym, and his place shall knowe hym no more. Hys chyldren shall be fayne to agree wyth the poore, and hys handes shall restore theyr goodes.

25 From hys youth hys bones are full of pleasures, but nowe shall it lye downe wythin hym in the earth. Whē wyckednes was swete in his mouth, he hyd it vnder hys tonge. That he fauoured, that wolde he not forsake, but kepte it close in his throte. The breade that he dyd eate, is turned to the poyson of the serpentes, wythin his body. The rychesse that he deuoured, shal he parbrake agayn, for God shal drawe them out of hys belly, he shall sucke the gall of serpentes, and the adders tonge shall slaye hym: so that he shall nomore se the ryuers and brookes of hony and butter. The thynge that other men haue laboured for, shall he restore agayne, and shal not eate it vp.

¶ Great trauayle shall he make for rychesse, but he shall not enioye them. And why? he hath oppressed the poore, and not helped them: houses hath he spoyled, and not buylded them. His belly coulde neuer be fylled, therfore shall he perysh in hys couetousnesse. There shall none of hys meat be lefte behynde, therfore shall no mā loke for hys prosperyte. When he had plenteousnesse of euerye thynge, yet was he poore, thoughe he was helped on euery syde.

D For though the wycked haue neuer so much to fyll hys belly, yet God shall sende his wrath vpon him, and cause his indignacyon to rayne ouer hym: so that yf he flye the yron weapons, he shalbe shot wyth the stele bowe. The arowe is taken forth, and gone out of ỹ quyuer, and a glysterynge sweard thorowe the gall of hym, feare shal come vpon him. There shal no darknesse be able to hyde hym. An vnkyndlyd fyre shall cōsume hym, and loke what remayneth in hys house, it shalbe destroyed. The heauen shal declare hys wyckednesse, & the earth shall take parte agaynst him. The substaūce that he hath in hys house, shalbe taken awaye and perysh, in the daye of the Lordes wrath. * This is the porcyon vpon that the wycked man shall haue of God, & the herytage that he maye loke for of God: bycause of hys wordes. Job.xrbis

¶ Job reyseth the prosperyte of the wycked, and after declareth theyr sodayne ruyne and destruccyon.

IOb answered and sayde: O heare my wordes, and that shalbe my comforte of you. Suffre me a lytle, that I maye speake also, and then laughe my wordes to scorne. * (yf it lyke you.) Is it for mannes sake that I make this disputacyon? Whyche yf it were so, shoulde not my sorete be then sore in trouble? Marke me well, and be abashed, and laye your hande vpon your mouth For when I consyder my selfe I am afrayde, & my flesshe is smytten with feare. * Wherfore do wycked men lyue in helth and prosperyty, come to theyr olde age, and increase in ryches: Their chyldren lyue in theyr syght, and theyr generacyon before theyr eyes. Theyre houses are safe from all feare, and the rodde of God doeth not smyte them. Theyr bullocke gendreth, and that not out of tyme: theyre cowe calueth, and is not vnfrutefull. Psa.xrrrii.a Jere.xii.a.

They sende forth theyr chyldren by flockes and theyr sonnes led the daunce. * They beare wyth them tabrettes and harpes, and haue instrumentes of musycke at their pleasure. They spende theyr dayes in welthynesse: but sodaynly they go downe to hell. They saye also vnto God, go from vs: we despyse not the knowledge of thy wayes. * Who is the Almyghtye, that we shulde serue hym? And what profyte shulde we haue to submytte our selues vnto hym? Lo, there is vtterlye no goodnesse in them, therfore I wyll not haue to do with the counsayle of the vngodly. Howe ofte shal the candle of the wycked be put out? howe oft commeth theyr destruccyon vnto them? O what sorowe shal God gyue them for theyr part in his wrath? Yea they shal be euē as haye before the wynde, and * as chaffe that the storme carryeth awaye. 15 Exap.v.c. Psalm.l.b.

And though God saue theyr chyldren from suche sorowe, yet wyll he so rewarde them selues, that they shall knowe it. Theyr owne destruccyon and mysery shall they se wyth theyr eyes, and drynke of the fearful wrath of the Almyghtye. For what careth he what becōmeth of his housholde after hys death, when the nombre of hys monethes is cut shorte? In as muche then as God hathe the hyest power of all, who can teach hym any knowledge? One dyeth now when he is myghtye, and at hys best, ryche, and in prosperytie, euen when his bowels are at the fattest, and hys bones full of marye. An other dyeth in sorowe and heynesse, and neuer hadde good dayes. They shall slepe bothe alyke in the earth, & the wormes shall couer them. Behold, I knowe wat ye thynke, yea: and the subtyltye that ye ymagyn agaynst me. For ye say, where is the prynces palace? & where is the dwellyng of the vngodly? haue ye not asked them that go by the way? Doubtlesse, ye can not denye theyr tokens, that * the wycked is kept vnto the day of destruccyon, and that the vngodlye shall be brought forth to the daye of wrath. Who darre reproue hym for his waye to his face? Who wyl rewarde hym, for the vngracyousnesse that he doth? Yet shall he be brought to hys graue, and dwel amonge the heape of the deade. Then shal he be layne to be buryed amonge the stones of ꝑ playne. All men also must folow hym, and there are innumerable gone before hym. How vayne then is the comforte that ye gyue me? Doth not falshed remayne in all your answers?

THen Eliphas the Themanyte gaue answere, and sayd: May a man be profytable vnto God, as he ꝑ is wyse maye be profytable to hym self? Is it any auauntage vnto the Almyghtye, that thou arte ryghtuous? Or shall it profyte hym, that thou makest thy wayes parfyte? Is he afrayde to reproue the, and to steppe forth with the into iudgement? Is not thy wyckednesse great, & thyne vngracyous dedes innumerable? For thou hast taken the pledge from thy brother for noughte, and robbed the naked of theyr clothynge: To suche as were werp, hast thou gyuē no water to drynke, and haste withdrawen breade from the hongrye. Shulde suche one thē as vseth violēce wronge and oppression (doynge all thynges of parcialite, and hauing respect of persons) dwel in the lande? Therfore art thou compassed aboute wyth snares on euerye syde, and sodenly vexed wyth feare: shuldest thou thē se no darknesse? Shulde not the waterfloude runne ouer the? Now * bycause that God is hyer then the heauens, and bycause thou sayst that the starres are so hye, wyle thou therfore saye: Tush, how shuld God know Doth his dominyon reach beyonde the cloudes? ¶ Tushe, the cloudes couer hym that he maye not se, and he dwelleth aboue heauē. As for the remnaunt of them, the fyre hath consumed it.

Therfore reconcyle the vnto God, & be content, so shall all thynges prosper with ꝑ ryght well. Receyue the lawe at hys mouth, and laye vp hys wordes in thyne harte. ¶ The.xxiii.Chapter.

¶ Job affyrmeth that he both knoweth & feareth the power and sentence of the Iudge, and sayth that he hathe walked in his ryghteousnesse.

THen Job answered, and sayde: My saying is yet this daye in bytternesse, and my hande heuy, bycause of my gronynge. O that I myght se hym, and fynde hym O that I myght come before his seate to pleate my cause before him, and to fyl my mouth with argumentes. That I myght knowe, what answere he wolde gyue me: and that I myght vnderstand what he wolde saye vnto me. Wyll he pleate agaynst me wyth hys greate power and strength? No, but he wyll make me the stronger. He that is iust, shal entre dysputacyon wyth hym, and my iudge shal delyuer me for euer. Behold, thoughe I go before, I fynde hym. If I come behynde, I can get no knowledge of hym: If I go on ꝑ lefte syde where he doth his worke I can not attayne vnto hym. C Maye he be a ruler, that loueth no ryghte? Or maye he that is a very innocent man, do vngodlye? Is it reason that thou shouldest saye to the kynge: Thou arte wycked, or thou arte vngodlye, and that before the princes? * He hath no respecte vnto the persones of the lorde lye, and regardeth not the ryche more then the poore. For they be all the worke of hys handes. In the twynckelynge of an eye shal they dye: and at mydnyght when the people and the tyrauntes rage, then shall they perysshe and be taken awaye wythout handes: And why? * hys eyes loke vpon the wayes of man and he seyth all hys goynges. There is no darkenes nor shadow of death, that can hyde the wycked doers from hym. For no man shalbe suffered to go into iudgement wyth God.

Many one: yea innumerable doeth he punysshe, and setteth other in theyr steades. Therfore shall he declare theyr workes, he shal turne the nyghte, and they shalbe destroyed. They that were in the steade of Sears, dealt lyke vngodlye men: and therfore he punished them, because they turned backe from hym, and wolde not consyder all hys wayes. In so muche that they haue caused the voyce of the poore to come vnto hym, and nowe he heareth the complaynt of suche as are in trouble.

D Yf he graunt pardone, who wyll condemne? And yf he hyde awaye hys countenaunce, who shalbe able to se it? whether it be to the people or to any man, thus wyll he do. For the vngodlynesse of the people, doth God make an ypocrit to raygne ouer them. For so muche then as I haue begonne to talke of God, I wyll not hynder the. Yf I haue done amysse, enforme me thou me: Yf I haue done wronge, I wyll leaue of. Can he do nothynge wythout the? For thou haste reproued hys iudgement. Thou also haste thyne owne mynde, and not I. But speake on what thou knowest. Let men of vnderstandyng tell me, and let a wyse man hearken vnto me. As for Job he hath neyther spoken to the purpose: nor wyselye. O father, let Job be well tryed, because he hathe answered for wycked men: yea, aboue hys synne he doth wyckedlye: triumpheth amonge vs, and multyplyeth hys wordes agaynst God.

ELihu spake moreouer, and said. Thinkest thou it ryght, that thou sayest: I am ryghteous before God? For thou sayest. What aduauntage wyll it be vnto the, and what profyte shalte thou haue of my synne. Therfore wyll I gyue answere vnto the, and to thy companions wyth the: loke vnto the heauen, and beholde it: consyder the cloudes, whych are hyer then thou.

Yf thou hast synned, what hafte thou done a-
B gaynst hym? Yf thyne offences be many, what hast thou done vnto hym? Yf thou be ryghteous what gyuest thou him? Or what wyl he receiue of thyne hande? Of suche an vngodlye personne as thou, and of the sonne of man that is ryghteous as thou pretendest to be? ther is a great crye and cõplaynt made by them that are oppressed wyth violence, yea euery mã complayneth vpõ the crueltye of tyrauntes.

For suche a one neuer sayeth: Where is God that made me? and that gyueth vs occasion to prayse hym in ỹ nyght? Which gyueth vs more vnderstandynge then he doth the beastes of the earth, and teacheth vs more then he doth ỹ foules of heauen.

D Yf any suche complayne, no man gyueth answere, and that bycause of the wyckednesse of proude tyrauntes. But yf a man call vpõ God, doth not he heare hym? Doeth not the Almyghtye accepte hys erye? When thou speakest then, shulde not he pardoue the, yf thou open thy selfe before hym, & put thy trust in hym? Then vseth he no violẽce in hys wrath, neither hath he pleasure in curious and depe inquisicions. Therfore doth Job open his mouth but in vayne, and foolyshly doth he make so many wordes.

The.xxxvi. Chapter:

Elihu sheweth wherfore God punysheth and correcteth.

ELihu proceaded forth in hys talkynge, and sayd: Holde the styll a lytle, & I shall shewe the what I haue yet to speake on Gods behalfe. I wyl open vnto the yet more of myne vnderstandynge, and proue my matter ryghteous. And truely, my wordes shall not be vayne, seynge he is wyth the that is perfyte in knowlege, behold: the great God casteth awaye no man, for he hym selfe is myghtye in power & wysedome.

As for the vngodly, he shal not preserue him but shall helpe the poore to theyr ryght. He shal turne hys eyes awaye from the ryghteous, but as kynges shal they be in theyr trone: he shal stablyshe them for euer, and they shalbe exalted.

But yf they be layed in preson and chaynes, or bounde wyth the bondes of trouble, then wyll he shewe them theyr worke and ỹ synnes wherwyth they haue vsed cruel violence.

B He wyth punyshynge and nurtrynge of thẽ roũdeth thẽ in the eares, warneth them to leaue
c.xxxvi.b of from theyr wyckednesse, and to amende. * Yf they nowe wyll take hede and serue hym, they shall were out theyr dayes in prosperite, & theyr yeares in pleasure: and ioye. But yf they wyll not herken, they shall go thorowe the swearde, and perysshe or euer they be aware. As for suche as be fained ypocrites, they shal heap vp wrath for thẽselues: for they cal not vpõ hym, though they be hys prysoners. Thus shall theyr soule perysshe in foolyshnesse, and theyr lyfe shalbe cõdemned amonge the fornicatours. The poore shall he delyuer out of hys affliccion, and roũde them in the eare when they be in trouble. Euen so shal he kepe the (yf thou wylt be contente) frõ the bottomlesse pyt that is beneth: and yf thou wylte holde the quyete, he shall fyll thy table wyth plenteousnesse.

gement of the vngodlye, yea, euen such a iudgement and sentence shalt thou suffre.

For then shall not thy cause be stylled wyth crueltye, nor pacifyed with many gyftes. Thinkest thou, that he wyll regarde thy rychesse? he shall not care for golde, nor for al them that excel in strength. Prolonge not thou the tyme, tyl there come a nyght for the, to set other people in thy steade. But beware that thou turne not aside to wyckednesse and synne, whiche hetherto thou hast chosen more then mekenesse. Beholde, God is of a myghtye hye power: Where is ther suche a gyuer and lawe geuer as he? Who wyll reproue hym of hys waye? Who wyl saye vnto hym: thou hast done wronge.

He can spreade out the cloudes (a couerynge of hys Tabernacle) and cause hys lyght to shyne vpon them, and to couer the bottome of the see. By these thynges gouerneth he hys people, and geueth them aboundaunce of meate. Wyth the cloudes he hydeth the lyght: & at hys commaundement it commeth agayne. The ryssynge vp therof sheweth he to hys frendes, and to the catell.

The.xxxvii. Chapter.

mooued out of hys place. Heare then the sounde of hys voyce, and the noyse that goeth oute of hys mouth. He gouerneth euery thing vnder the heauen, and hys lyghte teacheth vntothe ende of the worlde. A ronrynge voyce followeth hym: for hys glorious maiestye gyueth suche a thonder clappe, that (thoughe a man heare it) yet maye he not perceyue it afterwarde. It gyueth an horrible sounde when God sendeth out hys voyce: great thynges doeth he whyche we can not comprehende. * When he commaundeth the snowe, pf.cxlvii.b it falleth vpon the earth: As soone as he gyueth the rayne a charge, immediatly the showers haue theyr strength, and fall downe.

He

¶ He sendeth feare vpon euerye man, that they myght know theyr owne worckes. The beastes crepe into theyr dennes, and take theyr rest: out of the South commeth the tempest, and colde out of the North.

At the breath of God the frooste commeth, and the waters are shed abrode. He maketh the cloudes to do theyr labour, in gyuynge moystnesse, and agayne with his lyght he dryueth awaye the cloude. He distributeth also on euerye syde, accordynge as it pleaseth hym to deale out his worckes: that they maye do, whatsoeuer he commaundeth them thorowe the whole worlde whether it be to punysh any land, or to do good vnto them that seke hym.

¶ Herken vnto this (O Job:) stand styll, and consyder the wonderous worckes of God. Arte thou of counsayle with God, when he doth these thynges? When he causeth the lyght to come forth of his cloudes? Art thou of his counsayle, when he spreadeth out the cloudes? Hast thou the perfecte knowledge of his wonders? And howe thy clothes are warme, when the lande is styll thorowe the South wynde? Hast thou holpen hym to spreade out the heauen, whiche is to loke vpon, as it were cast out of cleare metall? Teache vs what we shal saye vnto hym, for we D are vnmete bycause of darkenesse. Shall it be tolde hym what we saye? Shulde a man speake or shoulde he kepe it backe? For euerye man seeth not the lyghte that he keepeth cleare in the cloudes, whiche he clenseth when he maketh the wynde to blowe: Golde is brought oute of the north, but the prayse and honour of Gods feare commeth from God him selfe. It is not we that can fynde out the almyghtye: for in power, equitie and ryghtousnesse: he is hyer then can be expressed. Let men therfore feare him, for there shal no man se him, that is wyse in his owne cõceyt:

NO man is so cruell that is hable to styre hym vp. * Who is hable to stande before me? Or who hath gyuen me any thyng afore hande, that I maye rewarde hym agayne? All thynges vnder heauē are myne: I feare him not whether he threaten or speake fayre. Who lyfteth hym vp, or stryppeth him out of his clothes or who taketh hym by the bytte of his bridle? Who openeth the doore of his face? For he hathe horrible teeth rounde about. His body is couered with scales, as it were with shyldes lockt in B kept and well compact togyther. One is so ioyned to an other, that no ayre can come in: Yea, one hangeth so vpon an other, and stycketh so togyther, that they can not be sondred. His nesynge is lyke a glysteryng fyre, and hys eyes lyke the morynge ſyne. Out of his mouth go torches, and oute of his nostrelles there goeth a smoke, lyke as out of an hote sethynge pot. MY herte sheweth me the wyckednes of the vngodly, ỹ *there is no feare of God before hys eyes. For he flatreth him self in his owne sight, tyl his abhominable synne be foũd out. The wordes of his mouth are vnryghteous & full of dyscepte: he hath left of to behaue him self wysely & to do good. He ymagyneth myschefe vpon his bed, and hath set him selfe in no good way, neither doth he abhorre any thing that is cupl. Thy mercy O Lord, reacheth vnto the heauen, & thy faythfulnesse vnto the cloudes. Thy ryghteousnesse standeth lyke the stronge mountaynes: thy iudgemẽtes are lyke the greate depe. Thou Lorde shalte saue both man and beest. How excellẽt is thy mercye O God! & the chyldren of men shall put their trust vnder the shaddowe of thy wynges. They shalB be satysfied with ỹ plentousnesse of thy house, & thou shalt gyue thẽ drynke of thy pleasures, as out of the ryuer. For with the is ỹ well of lyfe, & in thy lyght, shall we se lyght. O continue forth thy louyng kindnesse vnto them that knowe the, & thy ryghteousnesse vnto thẽ that are true of herte. O let not the foote of pryde come agaynst me: and let not the hãde of the vngodly cast me downe. NOLITE EMVLARE.

A Psalme of Dauid

FRet not thy selfe bycause of the vngodlye: neyther be thou enuyous agaynst the cupll doers. For they shall soone be cut downe lyke the grasse, & be wythered euen as the grene herbe. Put ỹ thy trust in the Lorde, and doo good: dwell in the lãd & verely thou shalt be fed. Delyte thou in the Lorde, & he shall gyue the thy hertes desyre. Commit thy way vnto ỹ Lord, & put thy trust in hym, & he shall brynge it to passe. He shall make thy ryghteousnesse as cleare as the lyght, & thy iust dealynge as the none daye.

Holde the styl in ỹ Lord, and abyde pacyently vpon him: but greue not thy selfe at him whose B waye doth prosperе agaynst the man ỹ doth after euell counsayles. Leaue of from wrath, & let go displeasure: fret not thy selfe, els shalte ỹ be moued to do cupl. Wycked doers shalbe roted out: & they that pacyently abyde the Lorde, those shall enherit the land. Yet a lytle whyle, and the vngodly shalbe clene gone: thou shalte loke after his place: & he shalbe away. But ỹ meke spirited shal possesse the earth, & shalbe refreshed in the multitude of peace. The vngodly eteth coũsayll against the iust, & gnasheth vpõ him wyth his teeth. The Lord shal laugh hym to scorne, for he hath seene, that hys daye is cõmyng. The vngodly haue drawen out ỹ sweard, & haue bẽded their bowe, to cast downe the poore & nedye, & to slaye such as be of right conuersacion. Their sweard shal go thorowe their owne hert, and their bowe shalbe broken.

A small thynge that the ryghteous hath, is better then great rychesse of the vngodly. For the armes of the vngodly shalbe broken, and ỹ Lord vpholdeth the ryghteous. The Lord knoweth the dayes of the godlye, and their enheritaunce shall endure for euer. They shall not be confounded in the perilous tyme, & in the D dayes of derth they shal haue ynough. As for ỹ vngodlye, they shall perysh: and the enemies of the Lord shall consume, as the fat of lãbes, yea, euẽ as the smoke shall they consume awaye. The vngodly boroweth ãd payeth not againe, but the ryghteous is mercyfull and liberall. Such as be blessed of God, shall possesse ỹ lãde, & they that be cursed of him, shalbe roted out.

*Though he fall, he shall not be caste awaye, for the Lorde vpholdeth hym with his hãde. I E haue bene younge, & nowe am olde: and yet sawe I neuer the ryghteous forsaken, nor hys seede beggynge theyr breade. * The ryghteous is euer mercyfull, and lendeth, and his seed is blessed. Flye from cupll, and do the thynge that is good: and dwel for euer. For the Lorde louyth the thinge that is ryght, he forsaketh not hys ỹ be godly, but they are preserued for euermore: *(The vnrighteous shalbe punyshed:) as for the seed of the vngodly, it shalbe rooted oute. The ryghteous shall enherit the lande, and dwell therin for euer. * The mouth of the ryghteous is exercysed in wysdome, & his tonge wyl be talking of iudgement. The lawe of hys God is in his hert, and his goynges shal not slyde. The vngodly seeth the ryghteous & seketh occasyon to slaye hym. The Lorde wyll not leaue him in hys hande, nor condempne hym when he is iudged. Hope thou in the Lorde, and kepe hys waye, & he shall promote ỹ, that thou shalte possesse the lande: when the vngodly shal perysh, ỹ shalt se it. I my selfe haue seue the vngodlye in great power, & florysshynge lyke a grene bay tree: I wente by and loo, he was gone: I sought him, but *(hys place) coulde no where be foũde. Kepe innocencye, and take hede vnto ỹ thynge that is ryght, for that shal brynge a mã peace at the laste. As for the transgressours they shall perysh togyther, and the ende of ỹ vngodlye is, they shalbe roted out at the last. But the saluacyon of the ryghteous commeth of the Lorde, which is also their strength in the tyme of trouble. And ỹ Lord shal stand by thẽ, & saue thẽ: he shall delyuer them from the vngodly, & shal saue thẽ, bycause they put theyr trust in hi

Howe thou haſt dryuẽ out ſ Heathen wt thy hãde, & planted thẽ in: howe ſ haſt deſtroied the nacions, & caſt thẽ out. * For they gat not the Deute.ix.a lande in poſſeſſyon thorowe their owne ſweard, neither was it their owne arme ſ helped them. But thy ryght hãde, & thyne arme, & the lighte of thy coũtenaunce, becauſe thou haddeſte a fauoure vnto thẽ. * Thou art my kyng (O God) pſa.xcviii.a ſende helpe vnto Iacob. Thorowe the wyl we B ouerthrowe our enemyes, and in thy name wyl we tread thẽ vnder that ryſe vp agaynſt vs. For I wyll not truſt in my bowe: it is not my ſweard that ſhall helpe me. But it is thou that ſaueſt vs from our enemy, & putteſt them to cõfuſyon that hate vs. We make oure booſt of God all ſ day lõge, & wyll prayſe thy name for euer. Sela. But nowe thou art farre of, & putteſt vs to confuſyon, and * goeſt not forth wyth pſal.xl.c our armies. Thou makeſt vs to turne our backes vpõ oure enemies, ſo ſ they which hate vs, ſpoyle oure goodes. Thou letteſte vs be eaten C vp lyke ſhepe, & haſt ſcatred vs amonge ſ Heathẽ. Thou ſelleſt thy people for naught, & takeſt no moneye for thẽ. Thou makeſt vs to be rebuked of oure neyghboures, to be laughed to ſcorne, & had in deriſiõ, of thẽ that are rounde aboute vs. * Thou makeſt vs to be a byworde pſa.lxxix.a amõge the Heathẽ, & that the people ſhake their heades at vs. My cõfuſion is dayly before me, & the ſhame of my face hath couered me. For the voyce of the ſlaũderer & blaſphemer, for the enemy & auenger. And though al this be come D vpõ vs, yet do we not forgette the, nor behaue our ſelues frowardly in thy couenaunt. Our herte is not turned backe, neyther oure ſteppes gone out of thy way. No not when thou haſte ſmytten vs into ſ place of dragons, & couered vs wt the ſhadowe of death. Yf we haue forgottẽ the name of our God, & holdẽ vp our hãdes to any ſtraũge god: Shal not God ſearch it out? for he

They cōpassed me about also wt wordes of hatred, & fought againste me wythout a cause. For ỳ loue that I had vnto them, lo, they take nowe my contrary part: but I geue my self vnto prayer. Thus haue they rewarded me euyll for good: and hatred for my good wyll. * Set thou an vngodly man to be ruler ouer hym, ‡ and let Sathā stande at hys ryght hande. Whē sentēce is geuen vpon him, let him be cōdempned: & let his prayer be turned into synne. * Let his dayes be fewe, and let an other take his office. Let his chyldrē be fatherlesse, and hys wyfe a wyddowe. Let hys childrē be vagaboūdes, & begge their bread: let thē seke it also out of desolate places. Let the extorcioner consume al that he hath: & let ỳ straūgers spoyle hys labour. Let there be no man to pytie him, nor to haue compassion vpon hys fatherlesse chyldren. Let his posteritie be destroyed, and in the nexte generaciō let his name be cleane put out. Let the wyckednesse of his fathers be had in remembraunce in the syght of the Lord: and let not the synne of his mother be done away. Let them alway be before ỳ Lord: that he maye roote out the memoryall of them from the earth. And that because his mynde was not to do good: but persecuted ỳ poore helpelesse man, that he myght slaye hym that was vexed at the hert. His delyte was in cursyng, and it shall happen vnto hym: he loued not blessynge: therfore shall it be farre from hym. That other men be not fylled with thy goodes, and yͭ thy labours come not in a straūge house. Yea, that thou mourne not at yͭ last (whē thou hast spēt thy body and lusty grene youth) and thē say: Alas, why hated I nurtoure? why dyd my hert despise correction? Wherfore was not I obedyent vnto the voyce of my teachers, and herkened not vnto thē that enfourmed me? I am come almost into all myschefe in yͭ middest of the multitude & congregacyon. Let thy well be blessed, and be glad wyth the wyfe of thy youth. Louynge is the hynde, and frendly is the roo: let her breastes alwaye satisfye the, and holde the euer content with her loue. Why sonne, why wylt thou haue pleasur in an harlot, & embrace the bosome of another woman? *For euery mans wayes are open in the syght of the Lorde, and he pondreth al their goynges. The wyckednesse of yͭ vngodly shal catche him selfe, and with the snares of his owne synnes shall he be trapped. He shall dye without amendemente, and for hys greate foolyshnesse he shall go astraye.

(Whoso regardeth lesynges, feedeth the wynde: and doeth but folowe byrdes that haue taken theyr flyght.)

Whoso gathereth in Sommer, is wyse: but he that is slouggish in haruest, bringeth him selfe to confusyon. Blessynges are vpon the heed of the ryghteous, and the mouth of the vngodlye kepeth myschefe in secrete. * The memoryall of the iust shall haue a good reporte: but ꝑ name of the vngodly shall stynke. A wyse man wyl receyue warnynge, but a pratynge foole shalbe punyshed. ‡ He that leadeth an innocente lyfe, walketh surely: but whoso goth a wrōge way, shalbe knowen. * He that wynketh wyth hys eye, wyll do some harme: but he that hath a foolysh mouth, shalbe beaten. The mouthe of a ryghteous man is a well of lyfe: but the mouth of the vngodly kepeth myschefe in secrete.

Euyll wyll stryreth vp stryfe: * but loue coneareth the multitude of synnes. In the lyppes of hym that hath vnderstandynge a man shall fynde wisdome, but the rod belōgeth to ꝑ backe of the foolysshe. Wyse men lay vp knowledge, but the mouth of the foolysh is nye destruccion. The ryche mans goodes are hys stronge holde, but their owne pouertie feareth the poore. The ryghteous laboureth to do good, but the vngodly vseth hys encrease vnto synne. To take hede vnto the chastenynge of nourtour, is the waye of lyfe but he that refuseth to be reformed, disceyueth hym selfe. * Dyssemblynge lyppes kepe hatred secretly: and he that speaketh anye sclaundre, is a foole. Where moch bablynge is, there must nedes be offēce: and he that refrayneth his lippes, is wyse. An innocent tonge is a noble treasure: but the herte of the vngodlye is nothynge worthe. The lyppes of the ryghteous fede a whole multitude: but fooles shall dye in theyr owne foolye. The blessynge of ꝑ Lord maketh ryche men * as for careful trauayl it doth nothyng therto. A foole doeth wyckedly, and maketh but a sporte of it: but wysdome ruleth the man that hath vnderstandyng. The thynge that the vngodlye are afrayed of, shall come vpon them, but the ryghteous shall haue theyr desyre. The vngodly passeth when the tempest commethe: but the ryghteous remayneth sure for euer. As vynegre is to the teeth, and as smoke is vnto the eyes, euē so is a slouggysh person to them that sendeth hym forth.

The feare of the Lorde maketh a longe lyfe, but the yeares of the vngodly shalbe shortened.

The patient abydynge of the ryghteous shal be turned to gladnesse: but the hoope of the vngodly shall perysh. The waye of the Lord geueth curage vnto the godly, but it is a feare for wycked doers. ‡ The ryghteous shall neuer be ouerthrowē, but the vngodly shal not remayne in the lande. * The mouth of the iust wyll be talkinge of wysdō, but the tonge of ꝑ frowarde shall perysshe. She is vp in the nyght season: to pꝛoupde meate foꝛ her housholde, & foode foꝛ her maydens. She consydereth londe, and byeth it, and wyth the fruite of her handes she planteth a vyneyarde. She gyrdeth her loines with strength, & courageth her armes. And yf she perceaue that her houswyfery doth good, her candle goth not out by nyght. She layeth her fyngers to ỹ spyndle: and her hande taketh holde of the dystaffe. She openeth her hand to the pooꝛe, yea she stretcheth foꝛth her handes to such as haue nede. She fareth not that the colde of wynter shall hurt her house, foꝛ all her household folkes are clothed wt skarlet. She maketh her selfe fayꝛe oꝛnamentes, her clothynge is whyte sylke and purple. Her husbande is moche set by in the gates, whē he sytteth amonge the rulers of the lande. She maketh cloth of sylke: and selleth it, and delyuereth gyrdels vnto the marchaunt. Strengthe and honoure is her clothynge, and in the latter daye she shall reioyse. She openeth her mouth wt wisdom, & in her tonge is the lawe of grace. She loketh well to ỹ wayes of her housholde: & eateth not her bꝛead wt ydelnes. Her childꝛē shall aryse, & call her blessed: & her husbande shall make moch of her. ¶ All that is in thys worlde is but vanytie.

THese are the wordes of the preacher the sonne of Dauid, kyng of Ierusalē. * All is but moost vayne vanitye (sayeth the preacher) and all is mooste vayne (I saye) and but playne vanitye. For what els hath a man of all the laboure that he taketh vnder the sonne? One generacio passeth away, another cōmeth: but the earthe abydethe styl. The sunne aryseth, the sunne goth downe, & returneth to hys place, that he may there ryse vp agayne. The wynde goth towarde ꝑ south, and turneth vnto ꝑ north, fetcheth his cōpasse, whirleth about, & goeth forth, and hys circuyte returneth agayne to hym selfe. * All floudes runne into the see, & yet is the see it selfe not fylled: for loke vnto what place the waters runne, thence they come to flowe agayne. All thynges are so harde to be knowen that no man can expresse them. * The eye is not sayshyed wt sight: ꝑ eare is not fylled wyth hearinge. ‡ The thing that hath ben, cōmeth to passe agayne: and the thynge that hath ben done, shalbe done againe: There is no newe thynge vnder the sunne. Is there any thynge wherof it may be sayd: lo this is newe? For it was longe agoo in the tymes ꝑ haue ben before vs. The thynge that is past is out of remembraunce: Euē so the thynges that are for to come, shall nomore be thoughte vpon among them that come after. Thus haue I cōsidred al these thynges ꝑ come to passe vnder the sunne: and lo, they are al but vanitye & vexacion of mynde. The crooked can not be made streyght, nor the thynge that is vnperfect, cannot be accōpted wyth thynges that are perfect. I cōmuned wyth myne owne hert, sayinge: lo, I am come to a great estate, & haue gotten more wysdome, then all they that haue ben before me in Ierusalem. Yea, my herte had great experyence of wysdome & knowledge, for ther vnto I applyed my mynde, that I myght knowe what were wisdom and vnderstāding, what were errour & foolyshnesse: and I perceaued, that thys was also but a vexacio of mynd: for where moch wysdom is, there is also great trauayl and dysquietnesse: and the more knowledge a man hath, the more is hys care.

A THen sayd I thus in my hert: Nowe go to, I wyl take myne ease, & haue good dayes. But lo, that is vanity also: in so moch, that I sayde vnto ꝑ man gyuē to laughter: ꝑ arte mad, & to mirthe: what doest thou? So I thought in my hert, to geue my flesh vnto wyne, and agayne to applye my mynde vnto wysdom, & to conprehended folyshnesse vntyll the tyme that (amonge all the thynges whych are vnder the Sūne) I myght se what were beste for men to do, so lōge as they lyue vnder heauen.

* I made gorgious fayre workes. I builded my houses, and planted vineyardes. I made me orchardes & gardens of pleasure & plāted trees in them of all maner frutes. ‡ I made pooles of water, to water the grene & frutefull trees wal. I bought seruauntes and maydens: and had a great housholde. As for catell and shepe, I had more substaunce of them, thē all they that were before me in Ierusalem. I gathered syluer and golde together euen a treasure of kyndes & lādes. I prouyded me syngers and womē, whyche coulde playe on instrumētes, to make mē mirth & pastyme. I gat me psalteries & songes of muscke. And I was greater, & in more worshyp then all my predecessours in Ierusalem. Yet for wisdome remayned with me: and loke whatsoeuer myne eyes desyred, I let them haue it: & wherin soeuer my herte delyted or had anye pleasure, I witheldeit not from it. Thus my hert reioysed in all that I dyd: & this was my porcio of al my trauayll. But when I consydred all the workes that my hādes had wrought, and all the labour that I had taken therein: lo, all was but vanytie and vexacyō of mynde, & nothynge of anye value vnder the Sunne.

Then turned I me to cōsydre wysdome, errour & foolyshnesse (for what is he amōge mē, ꝑ myght be cōpared to me the kynge in such workes?) & I sawe that wysdome excelleth foolyshnesse, as farre as lyght doeth darkenesse. a vayne thynge & great myserie. For what getteth a man of all the labour and trauayle of his mynde, that he taketh vnder the sunne, but heuinesse, sorowe, and dysquietnesse all the dayes of hys lyfe? Insomoch, that his herte can not reste in the nyght: thys is also a vayne thynge. *Is it not better then for a man to eate & drynke, & hys soule to be merry in hys labour? Yea, I sawe that thys also was a gyft of God. Eccl.v.d

For who wyll eate or go more lustely to hys worke then I? And why? God gyueth to ꝑ mā that is good before hym, wysdome, vnderstandynge and gladnesse: but vnto the synner he gyueth werynesse (and superfluous care) that he maye gather, and heape together the thynge that afterwarde shalbe gyuen vnto him, whom it pleaseth God. This is no wyse a vayne thynge: yea a very dysquyetnesse and vexacion of mynde. ℞

The.iii. Chapter.

All thynges come in their tyme, and passe away in theyr tyme.

EVery thing hath a time: yea, al that is vnder ꝑ heauē hath hys conuenient season. There is a time to be borne, & a time to dye There is a tyme to plāte, and a tyme to plucke vp the thinge ꝑ is planted. A tyme to slaye, & a tyme to make hole. A tyme to breake downe, & a time to build vp. A tyme to wepe, and a tyme to laughe. A tyme to mourne, and a tyme to daunce. A tyme to cast awaye stones, and a tyme to gather stones together. A tyme to embrace, and a tyme to refrayne from embracynge. A tyme to wynne, & a tyme to lese. A tyme to spare, and a tyme to spende. A tyme to cut in peces, & a tyme to sowe together. ℞ *A tyme to kepe silence, & a tyme to speake: A tyme to loue, and a tyme to hate. Eccl.yy.a xxxi.e.xxxiii.a

A tyme of warre, and a tyme of peace. What hath a man els (that doth any thynge) but werynesse and labour? For as touchynge the trauayle and carefulnesse, whiche God hath geuen vnto men, I se that he hath geuen it them, to be exercysed in it. All this hath he ordeyned maruelous goodlye, to euery thynge hys due tyme. He hath planted ignorāunce also in the hertes of men, that they shulde not comprehende the grounde of hys workes which he doth from the begynnenge to the ende. So I perceyued, that in those thynges there is nothynge better for a man, then to be mery and to do well as longe as he lyueth. For all that a man eateth and drynketh: yea, whatsoeuer a man enioyeth of all hys labour, that same is a gyft of God. I cōsydred also that whatsoeuer God doeth, it continueth ℭ for euer. And that nothynge can be put vnto it, nor taken from it, and that God doeth it to the intent, that mē shoulde feare hym. *The thing that hath bene, is nowe: and the thynge that is for to come, hath ben afore tyme, for God restoreth agayne the thynge that was past. Moreouer, I sawe vnder the sunne vngodlynesse in ꝑ stede of iudgement, and iniquity in stede of rightwysnesse. Then thought I in my mynde: God shall seperate the ryghteous frō the vngodly, & then shalbe the tyme and iudgement of al counsayles and workes. I communed wyth myne owne herte also, concernyng the childzen of mē: howe God hath chosen thē, and yet letteth the appeare, as though they were beastes: for it happeneth vnto men as it doth vnto beastes: & as ꝑ one dyeth, so dyeth ꝑ other: yea, they haue both one maner of breth: so that (in thys) a mā hath no preeminence aboue a beast but all are subdued vnto vanytie. Eccl.d.d

They go all vnto one place, for as they be al of dust, so shal they all turne vnto dust agayne. ℞

*Who knoweth the spirite of man that goth vpward, & the breath of the beast ꝑ goth downe to the earth? Wherfore I perceyue that there is nothyng better for a man, then to be ioyfull in hys labour: for that is hys portyon. But who wyll bryngе hym to se the thynge that shall come after hym? Sapi.iii.a

The.iiii. Chapter.

The mysteryes of the innocent, The superfluous labours of men. The childe that is poore and wyse. &c.

SO I turned me, and* consydred all the vyolente wronge that is doone vnder the sunne: and behold, the teares of suche as were oppressed: and there was no man to comfort them, or that wolde delyuer and defende thē from the violence of their oppressours. Wherfore I iudged those that are deed, to be more happye then those that be alyue: yea, hym ꝑ is yet vnborne to be better at ease then they bothe, because he seeth not ꝑ miserable workes that are done vnder the sunne. Agayne, I sawe that all trauayle and dylygence of labour that euerye man taketh in hande, was done of enuye against his neyghboure. Thys is also a vayne thynge, an a veracyon of mynde. The fole foldeth hys handes together, and eateth vp his owne flesshe. Habacuc.i.a Eccl.b.b ℞

One handefull (sayeth he) is better wyth reste, then both the handes full wyth labour & trauayle of mynde. Moreouer, I turned me, and beholde yet another vanitie vnder ꝑ sunne.

There is one man, no moo but hym selfe alone, hauynge neyther chylde nor brother: yet is there no ende of hys carefull trauayle: hys eyes cannot be satisfyed wyth ryches, ℞ (yet doth he not remembre hym selfe, and saye:) For whom do I take such trauayle? For whose pleasure do I thus consume awaye my lyfe? Thys is also a vayne and myserable thynge. Therfore two are better then one: for they maye well enioye the profyt of theyr labour. For yf one of them fall, hys companyon helpeth hym vp agayne: But woo is hym that is alone: for yf he fall, he hath not another to helpe him vp. Agayne, whē two slepe together, they are warme: but howe can a body be warme alone? One maye be ouercome, but two maye make resystaunce. ℭ

A threfolde gable is not lyghtelye broken. A poore chylde beynge wyse, is better then an olde kynge that doeteth, and cannot beware in tyme to come.

*Some one commeth out of pryson, and is made a kynge: & another whych is borne in the ℞ kyngdō Gene.xli.b i.Re.xbi.c iii.re.xiii.c ii.pa.xxxiii.c ℞ Dittero.xxb.a kyngdome commeth vnto pouerty. And I perceyued that all men liuyng vnder the sunne, go wyth the seconde chylde, that shall stande vp in the stede of the other. As for the people that haue bene before him, and ꝑ come after him they are innumerable. And they that come after hym shall not reioyse of him. Thys is also a vaine thynge & vexacyon of mynde. Whē thou commest into the house of God, kepe thy fote, & drawe nye, that God whyche is at hande maye heare: * that thou gyue not the offrynges of fooles: for they knowe naught but to do euell.

¶ An admonicion to beware of rashe communicacyon. We ought not to maruayle at the oppressyon of the poore. The couetous is not satysfyed wyth hys ryches.

BE not hasty wyth thy mouthe, & let not thyne herte speake anye thynge rashly before God. For God is in heauē, and thou vpō earth, therfore let thy wordes be fewe. For where moch carefulnesse is, there are many dreames: & where many wordes are, there men may heare fooles. * Yf thou make a vowe vnto God be not slacke to performe it. As for foolysh vowes he hath no pleasure in them: Yf thou promyse anything, paye it: for better is it that thou make no vowe, thē that thou shuldest promyse, & not pay. Suffre not thy mouth to cause thy flesshe for to synne, neyther say thou before the Angel: that it is thy ignorannce. For then God wyl be angry at thy voyce, & destroye al the workes of thyne hādes. And why? Wher as are many dreames & many wordes, there are also dyuers vanityes: but loke that thou feare God. * Yf ꝑ seeste the poore to be oppressed, and wrōgfully dealt withall, so that equitye and ryghte of the lawe is wrested in the lande, maruayll not thou at such a thyng, for one great man kepeth touche wyth another, and the myghtye men are in auctorytie ouer the poore. The increase of ꝑ earthe vpholdeth all thynge: yea the kyng him selfe is mayntayned by husbandrye. He ꝑ loueth money wyll neuer be satysfyed wyth moneye: and whoso delyteth in ryches shall haue no profyt therof. This is also a vayne thynge. Wher as moch richesse is, there are many also that spēde thē away. And what pleasure more hath he ꝑ possesseth them, sauynge that he maye loke vpō them with hys eyes? A labouryng man slepeth swetely, whether it be lytle or moch ꝑ he eateth, but the aboundaunce of the rych, wyl not suffre him to slepe. Yet is there a sore plage, whych I haue sene vnder the sūne, (namely) ryches kept to the hurt of hym that hath them in possession. For oft tymes they perysh wyth hys greate myserye & trouble: and yf he haue a chyld, it getteth nothynge. * Lyke as he came naked out of hys mothers wombe, so goth he thether agayne: & carryeth nothynge away wyth hym of all hys labour. Thys is a mysrable plage that he shal go away eue as he came. What helpeth it him then that he hath laboured in the wynde? All ꝑ dayes of his life also he dyd eate in the darke, wt greate carefulnesse, sycknesse, & sorowe. * Therfore me thynke it a better and a fayrer thyng, a man to eate and drynke and to be refresshed of al hys labour, that he taketh vnder the sunne all the dayes of hys lyfe which God geueth him, for thys is hys porcyon. For vnto whōsoeuer God gyueth rychesse, goodes and power, he gyueth it hym to enioye it, to take it for hys porcion, and to be refreshed of hys laboure: thys is the gyfte of God. For he thinketh not moch howe longe he shall lyue, for asmoche as God filleth his hert wyth gladnesse.

¶ The mysery of the ryche and couetous. The dyfference of a foole and a wyse man.

THere is yet a plage vnder ꝑ sūne, & it is a general thynge amōge men: whē God geueth a mā richesse, goodes & honoure so ꝑ he wanteth nothinge of all that hys harte can desyre, and yet God geueth hym not leaue to enioye the same, but another man spendethe them This is a vayne thing & a miserable plage. Yf a man beget hundred chyldren, & lyue many yeres, so that his dayes are many in nombre, & yet can not enioye hys good, neyther be buryed, as for him I saye: that vntymely byrth is better then he. For he cōmeth to naught, & spēdeth hys tyme in darckenesse, & his name is forgotte. Moreouer, he seeth not the sunne, & knoweth not of it: & yet hath he more reste then the other. Yea, though he liued two thousande yeres, yet hath he no good lyfe. Come not all to one place? All ¶ the labour ꝑ a mā taketh is for him selfe, & yet his desyre is neuer fylled after his mynde. For what hath the wyse more thē ꝑ fole. What helpeth it ꝑ pore, ꝑ he knoweth, to walk vs fooles before the lyuinge? The cleare sight of the eyes is better then ꝑ the soule should walke after desyres of the lust. Howbeit, this is also a vayne thing, & a disquietnesse of mynde. The thynge ꝑ hath bē is named already, & knowē ꝑ it is euen man him selfe, neither may he go to lawe wt hym ꝑ is myghtier then he. Many thynges there be ꝑ encrease vanytie: & what hath a man els? For who knoweth what is good for mā lyuynge, in the dayes of hys vayne lyfe, whych is but a shadowe? Or who wyll tell a man what shal happen after hym vnder the Sunne.

¶ The.vii. Chapter.

¶ That whych passeth our strengthes and wyttes, ought we not to seke after.

* GOod name is more worth, then precyous oyntment, and ꝑ day of death is better thē ꝑ day of byrth. It is better to go into an house of mournyng, then into a banketynge house. For there is the ende of all men: & he that is lyuynge, taketh it to herte: grauytie is better then to laughe: for when the countenaunce is heuy, the hert is reformed. The hert of ꝑ wise is in ꝑ mourning house, but ꝑ herte of the foolysh is in the house of myrth. * It is better to gyue care to ꝑ chastenynge of a wyse man, then to heare the songe of fooles. For the lawghyng of fooles is like ꝑ cracking of thornes vnder a pot. And that is but a vayne thynge.

The

25 The wyse man hateth wronge dealyng: & abhorreth the hert that coueteth rewardes. Better is it to cõsidre ꝑ ende of a thyng then the begynnyng. The pacient of spirite is better then the hye mynded. Be not hastely angry in thy mynde, for wrath resteth in the bosome of fooles. Saye not thou: What is the cause, that the dayes of the olde tyme were better then they ꝑ be nowe? for that were no wyse question. Wisdome with enheritaunce is good: yet better is it wt them that wythoute care maye beholde the Sunne. For wisdõ defendeth as wel as mony, & the excellente knowledge & wysdome geueth lyfe vnto him that hath it in possession. Cõsidre the worke of God, howe ꝑ no man can make ꝑ thynge streyght whych he maketh croked.

C Use wel the tyme of prosperitie, & remembre the tyme of myshortune: for God maketh ꝑ one by the other, so ꝑ a man can fynde nothyng els. All thynges haue I consydred in ꝑ tyme of my vanitye: that the iuste man perysheth for hys righteousnesse sake, & the vngodly lyueth in his wyckednesse. Therfore, * be thou nether to righteous nor ouerwyse that thou perish not, be nether to vnrighteous also nor to foolysh, lesse ꝑ dye before thy tyme. It is good for the to take hold of this, & not to let that go out of thy hãde For he ꝑ feareth God, cõmeth forth wt them al.

Wisdõ geueth more courage vnto the wyse, then ten myghty men of the cytie: * for there is not one iust vpon earth ꝑ doeth good & synneth not. Take no hede vnto euery worde that is spoken, lest thou heare thy seruaunte curse the: for thyne owne hert knoweth that thou thy self also hast oft tymes spoke euell by other men. All these thinges haue I proued in wysdome: for I thought to be wyse * but she went farther from me then she was before: yea, and so depe that I myght not reach vnto her. I applyed my mynd also vnto knowledge, & to seke & searche out science, wysdom & vnderstanding: to knowe ꝑ foolishnesse of the vngodly, & the errour of dotinge fooles. And I founde, that * a womã is bytterer then death, for she hath cast a brode her herte as a net that men fyshe wyth: & her handes are cheynes. Whoso pleaseth God, shall escape frõ her: but the synner wyll be taken wyth her.

C The.viii. Chapter.

C The kynges commaundemente ought to be obeyed. Gladnesse is one of the chefe thynges vnder the sunne.

Ioh.iv.d

A Who is wyse? Who hath knowlege to make an answere? A mãs wysdõ * maketh his face to shyne: but vnshamefastnesse putteth it out of fauour. I muste kepe the kynges cõmaundement, & the oth that I haue made vnto God. Be not hasty to go out of his syght, and se thou continue in no euell thynge, for whatsoeuer it pleaseth him that doth he. Lyke as when a kyng geueth a charge, hys commaundement is myghtie: Euen so, * who maye saye vnto hym: what doest thou? * Whoso kepeth the cõmaundemente, shall fele no harme, but a wyse mans hert discerneth the tyme and iudgement. For euery thynge wyll haue oportunitye & iudgement, & thys is the thynge that maketh men ful of carefulnesse, and sorowe. And why? a mã knoweth not what is for to come: for who wyll tell him? Neither is there any man that hath power ouer the spirite, to kepe styll the spirite nor to haue any power in the tyme of deathe: is it not he also that can make an ende of the battaple: neyther maye vngodlynesse delyuer the that medle wythall.

Ecle.viii.a

All these thynges haue I consydred, and applyed my mynde vnto euerye worke ꝑ is vnder the sunne: howe one man hath lordshyp vpõ another to hys owne harme. For * I haue sene often the vngodly brought to their graues: & yet they haue returned into the cytie agayne, and came from the place of holy men, which in ꝑ cytie were growen out of memory, as were those also ꝑ lyued well. Thys is also a vayne thinge: because now that euell workes are not hastely punyshed, the hert of man gyueth hym selfe ouer vnto wyckednesse. But though he an euell personne offende an hundred tymes, & God defer, geuynge him longe lyfe: yet am I sure, that it shall go wel wyth thẽ that feare God, because they haue him before their eyes. Again, as for the vngodly, it shall not be well wyth him, neyther shall he prolonge his dayes, but euen as a shadowe: so shall he be that feareth not God.

Yet is there a vanitye vpon earth: There be iust men, vnto whom it happeneth, as though they had the workes of the vngodly. Agayne, there be vngodlye, wyth whom it goeth as though they had ꝑ workes of the righteous. Thys haue I called also a vayne thing. Therfore I commende gladnesse, because a mã hath no better thynge vnder the Sunne, then to eate and drynke, and to be mery: for that shal he haue of hys labour all the dayes of hys lyfe, which God geueth hym vnder the Sunne. And so I applyed my minde to learne wisdome, and to knowe the trauayl that is in the world (and that of suche a fassyon, that I suffred not myne eyes to slepe, neyther daye nor nyght) I vnderstode of all the workes of God, but it is not possyble for a man to attayne vnto the workes ꝑ are done vnder the Sunne: and though he bestowe hys labour to seke them oute, yet can he not reache vnto them: yea, though a wyse man wolde vndertake to knowe them, yet shall he not fynde them.

C The.ix. Chapter.

C A man wotteth not by the ryghteousnesse of hys owne workes, whether he be worthy of loue or hate. A mã ought to lyue merely wyth hys wyfe. A prayse of wysdome.

For all these thynges purposed I in my mynde to seke oute. The ryghteous & wyse: yea, and theyr seruãtes also, are in ꝑ hand of God: & ther is no man that knoweth eyther loue or hate, but all thinges are before the. It happeneth vnto one as vnto another: it goth with the ryghteous as Job.ix.c wyth the vngodly: * wyth the good and cleane, as wyth the vncleane: wyth hym that offreth, as wyth him that offreth not, lyke as it goeth with the verteous, so goth it also wyth the synner. As it happeneth vnto the periured, so happeneth it also, to hym that is afrayed to be forsworne. Amonge al thinges that come to passe vnder the sunne: this is a misery that it happeneth vnto all alyke. This is the cause also that the hertes of men are full of wyckednesse, and madde foolyshnesse is in theyr hertes, as longe as they lyue, vntyll they dye.

B And why? as longe as a man lyueth, he hath an hope: for a quycke dogge (saye they) is better then a deed Lyon: for they ẏ be lyuynge, knowe that they shal dye: but they that be deed, knowe nothynge: neyther deserue they any more. For their memoriall is forgotte, so that they be neyther loued, hated nor enuyed: neyther haue they any more parte in the worlde in all that is done vnder the sunne. Go thou thy waye then, eate thy bread wyth ioye, & drynke thy wyne with a glad hert, for thy workes please God. Let thy math.vi.b garmentes be alway whyte, * and let thy heede lacke no oyntemente.

Prou.b,c * Lyue thy self to lyue ioyfully with thy wife whom thou louest, al ẏ dayes of thy lyfe which is but vayne, that God gyueth the vnder the sunne, all the dayes of thy vanitye: for that is thy porcion in thys lyfe, of all thy labour & trauayle that thou takest vnder ẏ Sunne. What soeuer thou takest in hande to do, that do wyth all thy power, for in the graue that thou goeste vnto, there is neyther worke, counsayle, knowledge, nor wysdome.

C So I turned me vnto other thinges vnder ẏ Sunne, & I sawe, ẏ in running it helpeth not to be swyft: in battayle it helpeth not to be stronge: to fedyng, it helpeth not to be wyse: to ryches, it helpeth not to be subtyll: to be had in fauour, it helpeth not to be cõynge: but that all lyeth Luk.xxi.d. in tyme & fortune. For * a mã knoweth not his tyme, but lyke as the fysshe are taken wyth the angle, & as ẏ byrdes are caught with the snare. Euen so are men taken in the perylous tyme, when it commeth sodaynly vpon them.

D Thys wysdome haue I sene also vnder the sunne, & me thought it a greate thynge. There was a lytle cytie, and a fewe men wyth in it: so there came a great kynge & besyeged it, & made great bulwarkes agaynst it. And in the cytie there was found a poore mã (but he was wyse) which wyth hys wysdome delyuered the cytie: yet was there no body that had anye respect to such a symple man. Then sayd I: wysdõ is better then strength. Neuertheless, a simple mans wysdome is despysed, and hys wordes are not heard. A wyse mans counsayl that is folowed in scylence, is farre aboue the cryinge of a captayne amonge fooles, * For wysdome is bet-

The .x. Chapter.

The dyfference betwyxt a fole and a wyse man. Fortunate & happy is that realme: whych hath a wyse prynce.

A Deed fly pe doeth corrupte swete oyntmẽt, & maketh it to stinck. Euen so ofte tymes he that is made for wisdome & honour, is abhorred because of a lytle foolyshnesse. A wyse mans hert is vpon the ryght hande, but a fooles hert vpon ẏ left. A foole wyll shewe him self when he goeth by the waye: yet thynketh he that euerye man doth as foolyshly as him selfe. Yf a prynce spyrite be geuen the to beare rule, * be not negrom.xii.b lygent then in thyne office: for he that can take cure of hym self, auoydeth great offences.

B An other plage is there, whyche I haue sene vnder the sunne: namely, the ignorannce that is commenly amonge princes: in that a foole sytteth in great dignitye, & theryche are set downe beneth: I haue sene seruaũtes ryde vpõ horses. & prynces goinge vpon their fete as it were seruauntes. * But he that diggeth vp a pytt shall prꝛo. xxvi.b
ecc.xxvii.b fall therin himself: and whoso breaketh downe the hedge, a serpent shall byte hym. Whoso remoueth the stones, shall haue trauayle withal: & he ẏ heweth wood, shalbe hurte therwyth.

C When an yron is blunt, & the poynt not sharpened, it must be whet agayne, & that wt might: Euẽ so doth wisdõ folowe diligẽce. A babler of hys tonge is no better then a serpent that stynge-geth wythout hyssynge. The wordes out of a wyse mans mouth, are gracious: but the lippes of a foole wyl destroye him self. The beginning of his talking is foolishnesse, & the last worde of hys mouth is starke madnesse. A foole is full of wordes, & a mã can not tell what shall come to passe, who wyll then warne him of it that shall folowe after hym? The labour of the foolysh is greuous vnto thẽ, whyle they knowe not howe to go into ẏ cytie. C Woo be vnto ẏ (O ẏ lande) D whose kynge is but a chylde, & whose princes are early at their bãkettes. But well is the (O ẏ lande) whose kyng is come of nobles, & whose princes eate in due seasõ, for necessitie & not for lust. Thorowe slouthfulnesse the balkes fall downe, & thorowe ydle hãdes it rayneth in at ẏ house. Mirth maketh mẽ to laugh, & * wyne mapsal.civiii.b keth them merye: but vnto moneye are all thynges obedyent. Wish the kynge no euell in thy thought, & speake no hurt of ẏ ryche in thy prꝛeuy chambre: for a byrde of the ayre shal betray thy voyce, and wyth her fethers shall she bewraye thy wordes.

The .xi. Chapter.

Lyberalitie ought to be dystrybute vnto the nedye.

A Lay thy breed vpõ wete faces, and so shalt thou fynde after many dayes. Geue parte seuen dayes, and also vpon ẏ .viii. for ẏ knowest not what misery shall come vpon earth. Whẽ the cloudes are ful, they poure out rayne vpon ẏ earth. And whẽ ẏ tree falleth (whether it be toward ẏ South or North) in what place soeuer it fall, there it lyeth. He that regardeth the wynde, ¶ Cease not thou therfoze wyth thy handes to sowe thy seede, whether it be in the mozning oz in the euenynge: foz thou knowest not whether thys oz that shall prospere, & yf they both take it is the better. The lyght is swete, & a pleasaũt thynge is it foz the eyes to loke vpon ꝑ Sunne. Yf a man lyue many peares, and be glad in thẽ all, let hym remembze the dayes of darkenesse, D whych shalbe many, and that foloweth: al thinges shalbe but vanyte. Be glad then (O thou ponge man) in thy youth, & let thy hert be merye in thy ponge dayes: folowe the wayes of thyne owne herte, and the lust of thyne eyes but be ꝑ sure, that God shall bzynge the into iudgemẽte foz all these thynges.

25 I charge you, O ye daughters of Jerusalem that ye wake not vp my loue, nor touch her, tyl she be content her selfe. What is she thys, that commeth vp from the wyldernesse: and leaneth vpō her loue? I wake the vp amonge the appell trees, where thy mother conceaued the, where thy mother (I saye) broughte the into the worlde. O set me as a seale vpon thyne hert, & as a seale vpon thyne arme: for loue is mighty as the death, and gelousy as the hell. Her coles are of fyre, and a very flame of the Lorde: so that many waters are not able co quēche loue, C neyther may the stremes drowne it.

Yee, yf a man wolde geue all the good of hys house for loue, he shulde coūte it nothyng. Our syster is but ponge, and hath no brestes, what shall we do for our syster, when she shall be spoken for? Yf she be a wal, we shal buylde a siluer bulwarke there vpō: yf she be an open doore, we shall fasten her wyth bordes of Cedre tree. THe vysion of Esay the sonne of Amos, whych he sawe vpō Juda and Jerusalem: in ý dayes of Uzia, & Joathan. Ahaz and Jehezikiah kynges of Juda.

Heare: O heauen, and herken o earth. For the Lord hath spoken. I haue norysshed & brought vp children, but they haue done wyckedly against me. The ore hath knowne hys owner, and the asse hys masters crybe: but Israel hathe receaued no knowlege, my people hath no vnderstandyng. Alas B for thys sinful natiō, a people of great iniquite: a frowarde generacyon vnnaturall children. They haue forsaken the Lorde, they haue prouoked the holye one of Israel vnto anger, & are gone backwarde. Wherby shuld ye be plaged anye more? For ye are euer fallynge awaye. The whole head is sycke and the herte is heuye. From the sole of the foote vnto the head, there is no whole parte in all youre body, but all are woundes, botches, sores, & stripes which can neyther be helped, bound vp, molified, nor eased wt anye ioyntemente.

Your lande lyeth waste, your cyties are brent C vp, your enemyes deuoure your lande, & ye must be fayne to stāde, & loke vpon it: & it is desolate, as it were wyth enemyes in a battayle. Moreouer, the daughter of Sion is lefte alone like a cotage in a vyneyard, lyke a lodge in a gardē of cucumbers, lyke a besieged cytie. And excepte the Lord of Hostes had left vs a fewe we shulde haue bene as Sodoma, & lyke vnto Gomorra. Heare the word of the Lord: ye Lordes of Sodoma: and herken vnto the lawe of oure God, thou people of Gomorra. Why offre ye so many sacrifices vnto me? I am full of the brēt offrynges of wethers, and of the fatnesse of fed D beastes. I haue no pleasure in the bloud of bullockes, lambes, & goates. When ye appeare before me, who requyreth you to treade wythin my proches? Offre me no mo oblacyons, for it is but lost laboure. Incense is an abhominable thynge vnto me. I may not awaye with youre newe Moones, youre Sabbothes & solempne dayes. Your fastynges are also in vayne. I hate your newe holy dayes and fastynges, euen fro my very herte. They make me wery, I can not abyde them. When you hold out your hādes, I wyl turne myne eyes from you. And though ye make many prayers, yet wyl I heare nothyng at all, seynge your handes are full of bloude.

Washe you, make you cleane, put awaye your E euell thoughtes out of my syght, cease from doynge of euell. Learne to do ryght, applye youre selues to equyte, deliuer the oppressed, helpe the fatherlesse to hys ryght, let the wydowes complaynt come before you. Nowe go to (sayth the Lorde) let vs talke together. Though your sinnes be as red as scarlet, they shalbe as whyte as snowe. And though they were lyke purple, they shalbe as whyte as woll. Yf ye be louynge & obedyent ye shall enioye the beste thynge that groweth in the lande. But yf ye be obstynate & rebellious, ye shalbe deuoured wt the sweard: for thus ý Lord hath promised wt his owne mouth

Howe happeneth it then ý the ryghteous cy- F tie (whyche was full of equytie) is become vnfaythfull as an whore? Ryghteousnesse dwelte in it, but nowe murtherers. The syluer is turned to drosse, and thy wyne myxe wyth water. Thy princes are wycked and companyons of theues. They loue gyftes altogether, and gape for rewardes. As for the fatherles, they helpe hym not to hys ryght, neyther wyll they let the wydowes causes come before them. Therfore sayth the Lord God of Hostes, the myghtie one of Israel: Ah, I must ease me of myne enemies, and auenge me of myne aduersaryes. I shal lay my hand vpon the, & burne out thy drosse from the fyneste and pureste, & put out all thy tyne, and set thy iudges agayne as they were somtyme & thy Senatoures as they were from the begynnynge. Then shalt thou be called the righteous cytie, the faythfull cytie. Sion shalbe redemed wyth

25 I charge you, O ye daughters of Jerusalem that ye wake not vp my loue, nor touch her, tyl she be content her selfe. What is she thys, that commeth vp from the wyldernesse: and leaneth vpō her loue? I wake the vp amonge the appell trees, where thy mother conceaued the, where thy mother (I saye) broughte the into the worlde. O set me as a seale vpon thyne hert, & as a seale vpon thyne arme: for loue is mighty as the death, and gelousy as the hell. Her coles are of fyre, and a very flame of the Lorde: so that many waters are not able co quēche loue, C neyther may the stremes drowne it.

Yee, yf a man wolde geue all the good of hys house for loue, he shulde coūte it nothyng. Our syster is but ponge, and hath no brestes, what shall we do for our syster, when she shall be spoken for? Yf she be a wal, we shal buylde a siluer bulwarke there vpō: yf she be an open doore, we shall fasten her wyth bordes of Cedre tree. I am a wall, & my brestes lyke towres, then was I as one that hath founde fauoure in his sight. D Salomō hath a vyneyarde at Baal Hamon, & thys vyneyarde delyuered he vnto the kepers: euery one for the frute therof shulde geue him a thousande peces of syluer.

My vyneyarde is in my syght: thou (O Salomon) must haue a thousande, and the kepers two hundreth wyth the frute. Thou that dwellest in the gardeyns, O let me heare thy voyce, that my companyōs maye herken to the same.

O get the awaye, my loue, and be as a Roo: or a ponge herte vpon the swete smellinge mountaynes.

THis is the worde ỹ was opened vnto Esay the sonne of Amoz vpon Juda & Jerusalem. It wyll be also in the laste daye, that the hyll wher the house of the Lorde is buylded, shalbe the chefe amonge hylles, and exalted aboue all lytle hilles. And all nacions shal preache vnto hym, and the multitude of people shal go, speaking thus one to another: vp, *let vs go to the hyll of the Lord and to the house of the God of Jacob: that he maye shewe vs hys way, and that we may walke in hys pathes. For ỹ lawe shall come out of Sion, & the worde of ỹ Lorde from Jerusalem, and shal geue sentence amōge the Heathen, & shall reforme the multitude of people: they shall breake theyr swearde also into mattockes, & their speares to make sythes. And one people shall not lyfte vp a weapon agaynste another, neyther shall they learne to fyghte from thence forthe.

¶ Come ye (O house of Jacob) let vs walke in the lyght of the Lorde. But thou hast forsaken thy people the house of Jacob, because they goo farre beyonde theyr fathers in Sorceres (whō they haue as the Philystines had) & in straunge childzen they thinke thē selues to haue ynough. And it shall bryng downe the pryde of man, and laye mans presumpteousnesse full lowe, & the Lorde shall onely haue the victorye in that daye. But the ydols shall vtterly be roted out. And they shall crepe into the caues and rockes & into the clyftes of harde stones, for feare of God, and for the glory of hys mayestie, when he ryseth to cōdempne the earthe. Feare not ye then anye man, whose brethe is in his nostrels. For what is he of reputacyon?

And Jerusalem shalbe a tabernacle for a shadowe, because of heate in the daye tyme: a place & refuge where a man maye kepe hym from wether and rayne.

The. v. Chapter.

Of Christ and hys vyneyarde, wyth an execracyon of couetousnes and dronkennes.

AOwe wyll I synge my beloued frendes a songe of my frendes, because of hys vyneyarde. My beloued frende hath a vyneyarde in a very frutefull plenteous groũde. Thys he hedged, thys he walled rounde aboute, and planted it wyth goodly grapes. In the middest of it builded he a towre, and made a wynepresse therin: And afterward whẽ he loked that it shulde bryng hym grapes: it brought forth thornes. Nowe therfore (O ye Citesens of Jerusalem & whole Juda:) Judge I praye you betwyxt me, & my vyneyarde. What more could haue ben done, for it ỹ I haue not done? Wherfore then hathe it geuen thornes: where I loked to haue had grapes of it?

Well, nowe I shall tell you howe I wyl doo B wyth my vyneyard. I wyll take the hedge frõ it, that it maye perish, and breake downe ỹ wal, that it maye be troden vnder fote. I wyll laye it waste, that it shal neyther be dygged nor cut, but beare thornes and breares. I wyll also forbydde the cloudes that they shall not rayne vpõ it. As for the vyneyarde of the Lorde of Hoostes: it is the house of Israell, and whole Juda is fayre plantynge. Of these he loked for equytie, but se there is wronge: for righteousnes, lo: it is but myserye.

Who vnto them that ioyne one house to ano C ther, and bryng one lande so nyghe vnto another, that the poore can get no more grounde & that ye maye dwell vpõ the earth alone. These thynges are in the eares of the Lorde of hoostes: shall not many greater & more gorgyous houses be so waste, that no man shall dwell in thẽ? And ten akers of vynes shal geue but a quarte, & thyrty bushels of sede shall geue but an Epha

Wo be vnto them, that ryse vp early to folowe dronkennes, and to them that continue so vntyll nyghte, and tyll they be fette on fyre wyth wyne. In those companyes are harpes & lutes, tabrettes & pypes, and wyne. But they regarde not the worke of the Lorde & cõsydre not the operacion of hys handes. Therfore cõmeth D my folke also into captyuytye, because they haue no vnderstandynge. Theyr glorye is dampshed wyth hũger, and theyr pryde is marred for thyrste. Therfore gapeth hell, and openeth her mouth maruelous wyde: that their pryde, boostyng, and welth, wyth such as reioyse ther in, maye descende into it.

Thus hath man a fall, and is brought lowe and the hygh loke of ỹ proud shalbe laid downe

But the Lorde of Hoostes shalbe exalted in iudgemente, and God that is holye, is praysed in ryghteousnesse: Then shall the shepe eate in order, & the ryche mens landes ỹ were layd waste, shall straungers deuoure. Wo be vnto them, ỹ drawe wyckednes vnto thẽ wyth cordes of vanitye & synne, as it were with a carte rope.

Wyrch vse to speake on thys manor: let him E make haste nowe, and go forth wyth hys worke, that we maye se it. Let the counsel of the holye one of Israel come, & drawe nye, that we maye knowe it. Wo be vnto them ỹ cal euell good, and good euell, wyrch made darkenesse lyght, & light darkenesse, ỹ make sowre swete, & swete sowre. Wo be vnto them that are wyse in theyr owne syghte, and thynke thẽselues to haue vnderstandyng. Wo be vnto them that are stroge to suppe out wyne, & expert men to set vp dronkennes. These geue sentence wyth the vngodly for rewardes, but cõdempne the iust cause of the ryghteous. Therfore lyke as fyre lycketh vp the strawe and as the flame consumeth the stubble: Euen so theyr rote shalbe as corruptiõ: and theyr blossome shall vanyshe awaye lyke duste:

dust: for they haue cast away the law of ꝑ Lord of Hostes, & blasphemed the worde of the holye maker of Israell.

F Therfore is the wrath of the Lorde kyndled also agaynst hys people, & he shaketh hys hãde at them: yee, he hath smytten, so that the hilles dyd tremble, And their karcases dyd lye in the opẽ stretes, lyke myer. And in all thys ꝑ wrath of God hath not ceassed, but hys hande is stretched out styll. And he shall geue a token vnto a straunge people: and call vnto them in a farre countre: and beholde, they shal come hastely wt spede. There shall not be one faynte nor feble amonge them, no not a sloggish nor slepery person. There shall not one of them put of the gyrdle from hys loynes, nor lowse the latchet of hys shoo. His arowes are sharpe, & al his bowes bent. His horse hoofes are lyke flynt, & his carte wheles lyke a stormy wynde. Hys crye is as it were of a Lyon, & he roareth lyke Lyõs whelpes. They shall roare, and hantche vp the praye, and no mã shall recouer it, or gette it frõ them. In that daye they shalbe so fearce vpon them, as the see. And yf we loke vnto the lande, beholde, it shalbe al darkenesse & sorowe. Yf we loke towarde heauẽ behold, it shalbe darcke.

¶The.vi.Chapter.

¶Esay sawe the glory of the Lorde, and was sent to preache the desolacyon of Iurye.

IN the same yeare that kynge Oziah dyed, I sawe the Lord syttynge vpon an hyghe and gloryous seate, & hys trayne fylleng the temple: And about hym stode Seraphins, wherof euery one had syxe wynges. Wyth twayne each couered his face, with twayne hys fete, & wyth twayne dyd he flye. They cryed also eche one to another on thys maner: holy, holy, holy is the Lorde of Hostes. The whole worlde is full of his glorye. Yee, the geastes and dorechekes moued at hys crynge and the house was full of smoke. Then B I sayd, O wo is me: For I am lost: inas moche as I am a man of vncleane lyppes, and dwel amonge people that hath vncleane lyppes also: for mine eyes haue sene ꝑ king & Lord of hostes.

Then flewe one of the Seraphyns vnto me haynge a hote cole in hys hande, whych he had taken from the aulter wyth the tonges and touched my mouth: and sayd, lo: thys hath touched thy lyppes, and thyne vnryghteousnesse is ta- ¶ ken awaye, & thy synne forgeuen. Also, I heard the voyce of the Lord saying on thys maner: Whom shall I sende, and who wyll be our messaunger? Then I sayde: here am I: sende me.

math.xiii.b mat. xiii.b Luk.viii.b act.xxviii.c Iohn.xii.f Rom.xi.b. And he sayde: go, and tell thys people: *ye shal heare in dede, but ye shall not vnderstande: ye shall playnly se and not perceaue. Harden the hert of this people, stoppe their eares, and shut theyr eyes ꝑ they se not wyth theyr eyes, heare not with their eares, and vnderstand not wyth their hertes, & cõuerte: and be healed.

Then spake I: Lorde, howe longe? he answered: vntyl the cyties be vtterly wasted without inhabitours, & the houses wythout men, tyll ꝑ lande be also desolate, and lye vnbuylded. For the Lorde shall take the men farre awaye, so ꝑ the lande shall lye waste a longe season, yet in it shall succede ten kynges, and the lande shall retourne and be layd waste. And as the Terebint tree and oke in wynter cast their leaues, and yet haue theyr sappe in them: so shall the holye sede continue in their substaunce.

IT happened in the tyme of Ahaz: ꝑ A sonne of Iotham, whych was ꝑ sõne of Uziah kynge of Juda: that* Razin the kynge of Siria, and Pechah ꝑ sonne of Romelyah, kyng of Israel, wẽt vp toward Jerusalẽ to besege it, but Razin was not able to wynne it. Nowe when the house of Dauid (that is Ahaz) hearde worde therof, that Sirya & Ephraim were cõfederate together hys herte quaked (yee & the hertes also of hys people) lyke as when a tree in the feldes is moued wyth the wynde. iiii.re sol. a ii.pa.xxviii a

Then sayde God vnto Esaye: go mete Ahaz (thou and thy sonne Sear Jasub) at the head of ꝑ ouerpole, in the fote path by ꝑ fullers groũde, and saye vnto hym, take hede to thy self: and be styl, but feare not, neyther be faynte herted, for these two tailes: that is for these two smoking fyrebrandes the wrath and furyousnes of Razin the Siryan, and Romelyes sonne: because that the kynge of Sirya Ephraim, & Romelyes sonne haue wyckedly conspyred agaynst the sayinge: We wyll go vp agaynste Juda, vexe them, and bryngе them vnder vs, & set a kynge ther, eeuen the sonne of Tabeel. B

For thus sayth the Lord God therto: It shal not so go forth: neyther so come to passe, for the heade cytie of the Siryans is Damascus, but ꝑ heade of Damascus is Razyn. And after fyue & thre score yeare, shall Ephraim be nomore a people. And the cytie of Ephraim is Samaria, but the heade of Samaria is Romelies sonne. Yf ye beleue not, it commeth of this: that ye are vnfaythful to God. Moreouer, God spake once agayne vnto Ahaz sayinge, requyre a token of the Lorde thy God, whyther it be towarde the depth beneth or towarde the heyghte aboue. Then sayde Ahaz: I wyl requyre none, neyther wyll I tempte the Lorde.

The Lorde answered: Then here to, ye of the ¶ house of Dauid: is it not ynough for you that ye be greuous vnto men, but ye muste greue my God also? And therfore the Lord shal geue you a token: Beholde a vyrgyne shall conceaue and beare a sonne, and (thou hys mother) shalte call his name Emanuel. Butter and hony shal he eate, that he maye knowe to refuse the euell, & chose the good. For or euer the chylde come to knowledge: to eschue the euel, and chose ꝑ good, the lande (that thou so abhorreste) shalbe desolate of bothe her kynges. The Lorde also shall sende a tyme vpon the, vpon thy people, & vpon thy fathers house (such as neuer came sence the tyme that Ephraim departed from Juda) thorowe the kynge of the Assyrians. For at ꝑ same tyme shall the Lorde whystle for the flyes that are about the water of Egypte, & for the Bees in the Assirians lande. These shall come & shall lyght all in the desolate valeyes, in the holes of stones: vpon all thorny and bushy places.

D And the same tyme: shal the Lorde shaue the heare of the head & the fete and the beard cleane of, wyth the rasure that he shal hyer beyond the water: namely, wyth the kynge of the Assirias. At the same tyme shal a mā lyue wyth a cowe, and two shepe. Thē because of the abundaūce of milke, he shall make butter and eate it. So that euery one whych remayneth in the lande, shall eate butter and hony. At the same tyme al vyneyardes (thoughe there be a thousande vynes in one and were solde for a thousande syluerlynges) shalbe turned to brearers and thornes. Lyke as they shall come into the lande with arowes and bowes, so shall all the lande become brears and thornes. And as for all hylles that are hewen downe, there shall not come vpō thē any feare of brears & thornes. But ỹ cattel shal be dryuē thyther, & the shepe shall fede there.

¶The. viii. Chapter.

¶The deliueraunce of the lande by Emanuell. The stone of offence, at whych many shall stumble,

A Moreouer, the Lorde sayde vnto me: Take the a great leafe, & wryte in it, as men do wyth a penne, make hasty spede to robbe, & haste to the spoyle. And I called vnto me faithfull wytnesse to recorde. Uziah the preest, & Zacharyah the sonne of Barachiah. After ỹ wente I vnto the prophetisse, that had conceaued and borne a sonne. Then sayde the Lorde to me: geue him thys name: a spedie robber: an hasty spoyler. For why, or euer the chylde shal haue knowledge to crye father, and mother: shal the riches of Damascus and the substaunce of Samaria be taken awaye by the spoyler, before the kinge of the Assirians.

B The Lorde spake also vnto me, sayinge: for so much as this people refuseth the styl renning water of Silo, and put their delyte in Razin & Romelies sonne: Beholde, the Lorde shal bryng myghty and great floudes of water vpō them: namely, the kynge of the Assirians wyth al his power: Whych shall clyme vp vpō all hys floudes, and renne ouer all theyr bankes. And shall breake in vpon Juda, flowynge and encreasing in power, tyll he gette hym by the necke. He shall fyll also the wydenes of thy lāde wyth his brode wynges, O Emanuel. Breake downe (o ye people of Assur) and ye shalbe brokē downe, herken to all ye of farre countrees.

¶ Muster you, and ye shalbe brokē downe, prepare you to battell & yon shalbe torne in peces: take your counsell together, yet must your coūsell come to naught, go in hāde withal, yet shal it not prosper: for God is wyth vs. For the Lorde spake thus to me in the powre of his hāde & warned me, sayinge vnto me: that I shoulde not walke in the waye of thys people.

He sayde moreouer, rounde wyth none of thē whosoeuer saye, ponder people are bounde together: feare thē not, neyther be afrayde of thē, but sanctifye the Lorde of hostes, let him be your feare and dread. For he shalbe the holy place to flye to, and stone to stomble at, the rocke to fall vpon, a snare and net to both ỹ houses of Israel, and the inhabytours of Jerusalem. And many shall stomble, fal: and be broken vpon hym: yee:, they shalbe snared and taken.

Nowe laye the wytnesses together and seale D ỹ lawe wyth my disciples. Thus wyl I wayt vpon the Lorde that hath turned hys face from the house of Jacob, and I wyll loke for hym. But lo, as for me: and the chyldren whyche the Lorde hath geuen me: we are a token and a wōder in Israel, for the Lord of hostes sake, which dwelleth vpon the hyll of Syon.

And yf they saye vnto you: aske counsell at ỹ Sothsayers, Wytches, charmers, and coniurers, then make them thys answere. Is there a people any where, that asketh not counsell at hys God? * Shulde men runne vnto the deade for the lyuynge? Yf any man wante lyghte, let hym loke vpon the lawe, and the testymonye, whether they speake not after thys meaning. Yf he do not thys, he stumbleth and suffreth hūger. And yf he ys suffre hunger he out of pacience, and blasphemeth hys kynge and hys God. Then loketh he vpwarde, and downewarde to the earth, & beholde: there is trouble & darknes, veracion is rounde about hym, and the cloude of errour. And out of suche aduersytie shall he not escape. Euen lyke as in tyme paste: it hathe bene well sene, that the lande of Zabulon and ỹ lande of Nephtaly (where thorowe the see way goeth ouer Jordane into the lande of Galilee) was at the fyrste in lytle trouble: but afterwarde sore vexed.

* Lu. xxiiii.

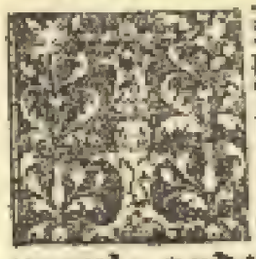
¶He prophecyeth of Christes natiuytye and dominyon.



The people that walke in darkenes A haue sene a great lyght. As for thē that dwel in the lande of ỹ shadow of death, vpon them hath the lyght shyned. Thou hast multiplyed the people and not increased theyr ioye. * They reioyse before the, euen as men make merry in har uest, and as men that haue gotten the victorye, when they deale the spoyle. For thou hast broken the yoke of the peoples burthē: the staffe of hys shoulder and the rodde of hys oppressoure, as in the dayes of Madian. * Psal. cxix. c

And truely euery battayll that the warriour B accomplysheth, is done wyth confused noyse, and defylynge theyr garmentes wyth bloude. But thys batayle shalbe wyth burnynge & cōsumynge of fyre. For vnto vs a childe is borne, and vnto vs a sonne is geuen. Upon hys shulder doth the kyngdome lye, & he is called wyth hys owne name wonderfull. The geuer of counsell, the myghtie God, the euerlastyng father, ỹ prince of peace, he shal make no ende to encrease the kyngdome and peace, and shall syt vpon the seate of David and in his kyngdome, to set vp ỹ same, and to stablysh it wyth equytie and righteousnes, from henceforthfore euermore. Thys

shall the gelowsy of the Lord of Hostes bringe C to passe. The Lorde sente a worde into Jacob, the same is come into Israel. And all the people of Ephraim shall knowe, and they that dwell in Samaria, that saye wyth pryde and hye sto-mackes, on thys maner. The tyle worke is fall len downe, but we wyll buylde it wyth squared stones. The molbery tymber is broken, but we shal set it vp agayne with Cedre. Neuertheles, the Lord shall prepare Razyn ꝑ enemy against them, and so ordre theyr aduersaryes, that the Sirians shall laye holde vpon them before, & the Philistines behinde, and so deuoure Israell wyth open mouthe.

After all thys is not the wrathe of the Lorde ceassed, but yet is hys hãde stretched oute styl.
For the people turneth not vnto him that chastyseth them, nether doo they seke the Lorde of hostes. Therfore hath the Lord roted out of Is rael both head and tayle, braunche and twygge in one daye. By the head is vnderstande the Senatoure and honourable man, an by ꝑ tayle the prophet that preached lyes: For all they whyche enfourme the people: that they be in a ryght case, such be dysceauers. Suche as men thyncke also to be perfecte amonge these, are but casteawayes.

D Therfore shall the Lorde haue no pleasure in theyr ponge men, nether fauour theyr fatherlesse and wyddowes. For they are all together ypocrytes and wycked, and all their mouthes spake folye. After all thys, is not the Lordes wrath ceassed: but yet hys hãde is stretched out styll. For vngodlynes burneth, as a fyre in the bryers and thornes. And as it were oute of a fyre in a wood: or a rede bushe, so ascendeth the smoke of theyr pryde. For by cause of the wrath of the Lorde of Hostes, is the lande full of dake-nesse, & the people be consumed, as it were with fyre no man doeth spare his brother, but he rob-beth on the ryght hande: and doeth hampshe, he eateth on ꝑ left hãde, & he shal not haue ynough

Euerye man shall eate the fleshe of hys owne arme. Manasses shal eat Ephraim, and Ephra im Manasses, and they both shall eate Juda.
After all this, is not the Lordes wrath ceassed, but yet is hys hande stretched out styll.

The.x.Chapter.

The threateneth the oppressours of the poore, and propher-cyeth agaynst Sennacherib.

A WO be vnto them that make vnrygh teous lawes, and deuyse thynges:
whych be to harde for to kepe: wher thorowe the poore are oppressed on euerye syde, & the innocentes of my people robbed of iudgemente: that wyddowes maye be theyr praye, and that they maye robbe the fatherlesse. What wyll ye do in tyme of the vysytacion, & when destruccyon shal come from farre? To whom wyl ye runne for helpe? and to whom wyl ye geue youre honoure, that he may kepe it? that when I wythdrawe my hande, ye come not amonge the prysonners, or lye amõge the dead? After all this doth not the wrath of ꝑ Lord ceasse, but yet is his hãd stretched out stil.
B Wo be also vnto Assur, whyche is a staffe of my wrath, in whose hande is the rod of my punyshmente. I shall sende hym amonge those hy-pocryticsh people, amonge the people that haue deserued my dyspleasoure shal I sende hym, that he may vtterly robbe them, spoyle thẽ, & treade them downe, lyke the myre in the strete. Howe beit, hys meanyng is not so, nether thynketh his hert on thys fassyon. But he ymagyneth on lye, howe he maye rote out and destroye moche people, for he sayeth: are not my prynces al kyn ges? Is not Calno as easye to wynne as Charchamis? Is it harder to conquere Hamath then Arphad? Or is it lyghter to ouercome Damascus, then Samaria? As who saye: I were hable to wynne the kyngdome of the Idolatrers and theyr goddes: but not Jerusalem, and Samaria. Shall I not do vnto Jerusalem & theyre ymages, as I did vnto Samaria & their ydols?

Wherfore the Lord sayeth: Assone as I haue C perfourmed my hole worke vpõ the hyll of Sy on & Jerusalem, then wyll I vyset the noble & stout hert of the king of Assyria with his proud lokes. For he sthãdeth thus in his owne concept:
Thys doo I thorowe the power of myne owne hande, and thorowe my wysdome: For I am wyse: I am he that remoue the landes of ꝑ people, I robbe theyr treasures: and (lyke one of ꝑ worthyes) I dryue them from theyr hye seates.
My hande hath founde oute the strength of the people, as it were a nest. And like as egges that were layed here & there, are gathered togyther.
So do I gather all countryes. And there is no-man that darre be so bold, as to touche a fether, that darre open hys mouth, or ones whysper.

Shall the axe boost it selfe agaynst him that D heweth therwyth? or doth the sawe make anye braggynge agaynst hym that ruleth it? That were euen lyke, as yf he rod dyd exalte it selfe a-gaynste hym that beareth it: or as though the staffe shulde magnifie it selfe, as wo say: it were no wood. Therfore shal the Lord of hostes send hym amonge his fatlynges, leanesse, and burne vp his glory, as it were wt a fyre. But the lyght of Israel shalbe that fyre, and his Sanctuarye shalbe the flame, and it shall kyndle and burne vp hys thornes and breers in one daye: yea, all the glory of hys woodes and feldes shalbe consumed wt bodye and soule: And they shalbe as an hooste of men, whose stãderd bearer fayleth.
The trees also of the felde which remayne, shal be of such a nombre, that a chylde maye tell thẽ.

After that day shal the remnaunt of Israel E and such as are escaped out of ꝑ house of Jacob, seke nomore comfort at hym that smote them, but wyth faythfulnesse & trueth shal they truste vnto the Lorde, the holy one of Israel. The rẽnaunt, euen the posterytie of Jacob shal cõuerte vnto God ꝑ myghtie one. For though thy people (O Israel) be as the sande of the see, yet shal the remnaunte of them conuert in hym. Perfect is the iudgement of hym that floweth in ryghte ousnesse, and therfore the Lord of hoostes shall perfectly fulfyll the thynge that he hath determined in the myddest of the hole worlde. Ther fore, thus sayth the Lord God of hostes: Thou my people

F my people, that dwellest in Syon, be not afrayed, for the kynge of the Assirians: he shall smite the wyth a rod, and shall wagge his staffe at ꝑ, as the Egyptians dyd some tyme: But soone after shall my wrath and myne indygnacion be fulfylled in the destruction of them.

Moreouer, the Lord of hostes shall prepare a scourge for hym, lyke as was the slaughter of Madian vpon the rocke of Oreb. And he shall lyft vp hys rod ouer the see, as he dyd somtyme ouer the Egyptians. Then shall hys burthē be taken from thy shoulders, and hys yoke frō thy necke: yea, the same yoke shalbe corrupt for very fatnesse. He shall come to Aiah, and goo thorowe towarde Mygron: at Michmas shall he lay vp hys harnesse, and go ouer the foorde.

Gibea shalbe theyr resting place: Ramath shal
G be afrayed: Gibea Saule shall flye away. The voyce of the noyse of thy horses (O daughter Gallim) shalbe heard vnto Lays and to Anothoth, which also shalbe in trouble. Madmena shall trēble for feare, but the cytezins of Gabim are manly, yet shall he remayne at Nob ꝑ daye. After that shall he lyft vp hys hande agaynste the mount of the daughter Syon, the hyl of Jerusalem. But se, the Lord God of hoostes shall take awaye the proude from thence wyth feare. He shall hewe downe the proude, and fell ꝑ hye mynded. The bushes also of the wood shall be roote oute wyth yron, and Libanus shall haue a myghtie fall.

¶ The.xi. Chapter.

¶ The prophecyeth of the natiuyte of Christe, and of hys people: of the remnaunt of Israel, and of the fayth of the Heathen or Gentyles.

A Nd there shal come a rod forth of ꝑ kynred of Jsai, and a blossom shal florysh out of hys rote. The spirite of the Lord shall lyght vpon hym: the spyryte of wysdom and vnderstandynge, the spyryte of counsayle and strēgth, the spirite of knowledge, and of the feare of the Lord: & shal make him feruēt in ꝑ feare of God.

For he shal not geue sentence, after the thing that shalbe brought before his eyes, neyther reproue a matter at the fyrst hearyng, but wt righ teousnesse shall he iudge the poore, and wyth po lynesse shal he reforme the symple of ꝑ world.

He shall smyte the worlde wyth the rodde of hys mouth, and wyth the breath of hys mouth shal he slaye the vngodly. Rygh teousnesse shal be the gyrdle of hys loynes: truthe and fayth fulnesse, the gyrdyng vp of hys reynes. The wolfe
B shall dwell wyth the lambe: and the Leoparde shall lye downe by the goate. Bullockes, lyons, and cattel shall kepe company together, so that a lytle chyld shall rule them.

The kowe & the beare shall fede together & there yōge ones shal lye together. The lyō shal eate strawe like the oxe or the kowe. The chyld whyle he sucketh shall haue a desyre to the serpentes nest, and whē he is weaned, he shall put hys hande into the cockatryce denne. No man shall do euel vnto another, no mā shall destroye another, in all the hyll of my holynesse. For the earth shalbe full of the knowledge of ꝑ Lorde, euen as the see floweth ouer wyth water.

And in that day shall the Gentyles enquyre C after the roote of Jesse whych shalbe set vp for a token vnto the people, & hys dwellynge shalbe gloryous. At the same tyme shall the Lorde take in hande agayne, to conquere the rēnaunt of hys people (whych shalbe lefte alyue) from ꝑ Assyryans, Egyptians, Arabyans, Moryans, Elamytes, Caldees, Aethiopyans: and from the Ilandes of the see. And he shall set vp a token amōge the Gentyles, and gather together the dispersed of Jsrael: yea, and the outecastes of Juda from the foure corners of the worlde. The hatred of Ephraim also & enemyes of Juda shalbe cleane roted out. Ephraim shal beare none euyll wyll to Juda, & Juda shall not hate Ephraim: but they both together shal flye vpō the shoulders of the Philistines toward ꝑ west, and spoyle them together that dwell toward ꝑ D East. The Idumytes and the Moabytes shall let theyr handes fall, and the Ammonites shalbe obedyent vnto them.

The Lord also shall cleane the tonges of the Egiptyans see, and wyth a myghty wynd shal he lyfte vp hys hāde ouer Nilus, and shal smite hys seuen streames, and make men go ouer drie shod. And thus shall there be a waye for hys people that remaynneth from the Assyrians, like as it happened to the Jsraelytes what tyme they departed out of the lande of Egypt.

¶ The songe of the church for the obteynynge of the victory and ouercommynge of the worlde.

SO that thē thou shalt say: O Lord A I wyll thanke the, for thou waste displeased at me: but refrayne thou from thy wrath, and comforte me. Beholde, God is my saluacyon in whō I wyll trust, & not be afrayed. For ꝑ Lord God is my strength and my songe, he also is become my saluacyon.

Therfore with ioye shall ye drawe water out B of the welles of the sauyoure, and then shall ye saye: gyue thankes vnto the Lord, call vpō hys name, declare hys counsayles amonge the people, kepe them in remēbraunce, for hys name is excellent. Synge prayses vnto the Lord, for he hath done great thynges, as it is knowen in all the worlde. Crye out, and synge thou ꝑ dwellest in Syon: for great is the holy one of Jsrael in the myddest of the.

¶ The prophecyeth the destruccyon of Babylon: the captyuytie and the commynge agayne of the people.

THys is the heuy burthen of Baby A lon, which Esay ꝑ sonne of Amos dyd se. Lyfte vp the baner vpon ꝑ hye hyll, call vnto them, holde vp your hande, that the prynces may go in at the doore. I haue sent for my deputyes & my gyauntes (sayth the Lorde) whych shal execute wrath: I wyll call for such as trymphe in my glorye. There is a noyse of a multitude in the mountaynes, lyke as of a great people, a rushynge as though the kyngdomes of the nacyons came together. (And the Lord of hostes musterth munstreth hys armye to battayle.) They come out of a farre country, from the ende of heauen: Euen the Lorde hym selfe wyth the instrumentes of hys wrath, to destroye ỹ hole lande. Mourne ye, for the day of the Lord is at hande and shall come as a destroyer from the almyghty. Therfore shall all handes be letten downe & all mens hertes shal melt away, they shal stand in feare, carefulnesse and sorowe shal come vpon them, and they shall haue payne, as a woman ỹ trauayleth wyth chyld. One shalbe abasshed of an other, & theyr faces shal burne lyke the flame of fyre. Behold, the daye of the Lord shall come terryblye, and full of indignacyon, furoure, and wrath to make the lande waste, and to roote out the synners therof. For the starres and planetes of heauē shal not geue theyr lyght, the sūne shalbe darkened in the ryspynge, and the moone shall not shyne wyth his lyght. And I wyll punyshe the wyckednesse of the worlde, and ỹ synnes of the vngodly, sayth the Lord.

¶ The hye stomackes of the proude wyl I take awaye, and wyll laye downe the boostyng of tyrannes. I wyll make a man dearer then fyne golde, and a man to be more worth then a golden wedge of Ophyr. Therfore I wyl shake the heauen, and the earth shal remoue out of her place: in the wrath of the Lord of hostes, and in the day of hys fearefull indygnacyon. And Babylon shalbe as an hunted or chaced doo, and as a shepe that noman taketh vp. Euery mā shall turne to hys owne people, and flye ech one into hys owne lande. Whoso is founde alone, shalbe shot thorowe. And whoso gather together shal be destroyed with the swerde.

* Theyr chyldren shalbe slayne before theyr eyes, theyr houses spoyled, & theyr wyues rauyshed. For lo, I shall bryng vp the Medes agaynst them, whych shall not regarde syluer, nor be desyrous of gold. Wyth bowes shal they destroye the ponge chyldren, & haue no pyty vpon women wyth chylde, & theyr faces shall not spare the chyldren. And Babylon (that glory of kyngdomes and beautye of the Caldees honoure) shalbe destroyed euen as God destroyed Gen.xix.c. * Sodō & Gomor. It shall not endure for euer, neyther shal there be any more dwellyng there, from generacyon to generacion.

The Arabyans shall pytche no tentes there neyther shall the shepherdes make theyr foldes there any more: but fearfull wylde beastes shal lye ther, & the houses shalbe full of great owles. Estriches shall dwell there, & apes shall daunce there, wylde cattes shall crye in the palaces, and dragons shalbe in the pleasaunte houses. And as for Babylons tyme it is at hande, & her dayes shall not be prolonged.

¶ The returne of the people from captiuytie. The prosperytye of the peple of God, & affliccyon of theyr enemyes. The pryde & fall of Babylon.

FOr the Lorde wyll be mercifull vnto Jacob, and wyll yet chose Israel agayne, and set them in their owne lande. Straungers shall cleaue vnto thē, & get thē to ỹ house of Jacob

The people shall take thē and carye thē home to theyr owne lande. And make them to enherit the house of Israel in the lande of the Lord, that they may be seruauntes & handemaydens of the Lord. They shall take those prysonners whose captyues they had ben afore and rule those that had oppressed them. When the Lord nowe shall bryng the to rest frō the trauayle, feare, & hard bondage, that thou wast ladē wythal: thē shalt thou vse thys mockage vpon the kynge of Babylon, & saye: How happeneth it that ỹ oppressour leaueth of? Is the golden tribute come to an ende? The Lord hath broken the sceptre of ỹ vngodly, and the rod of the lordly. Which whē he is wroth smyteth the people wyth contynuall strokes, & tyranously raygneth ouer ỹ heathen, whom he persecuted wythout compassyō. And therfore the whole worlde is nowe at rest, and quyetnesse: and men synge for ioye.

Yea, euen the fyre trees & Cedres of Lybanus, reioyse at thy fall, saying: Nowe that thou art layed downe, there come no mo vp to hewe downe vs. Hell also beneth trembleth to mete the at thy commyng, and for thy sake hath raysed hys deed, & all myghtye men and prynces of the earth. All kynges of the earth stande vp frō their seates, ỹ they may al answere, and speake vnto the. Arte thou become weake also as we? art thou become like vnto vs? Thy pompe and thy pryde is layed downe into the pyt, and so is the melody of thy instrumētes. Wormes be layed vnder the, & wormes be thy couerynge.

Howe art thou fallen from heauen (O Lucifer) thou fayre morynge chylde? howe hast ỹ gotten a fall euen to the grounde, & arte become weaker then the people? For thou saydest in thyne hert: I wyll clyme vp into heauē, and exalt my throne aboue, beyde the starres of God. I wyll syt also vpon the holy mount toward ỹ North, I wyl clyme vp aboue the cloudes, and wylbe lyke the hyghest of all. Yet thou shalt be brought downe to the depe of hell. They that seke the shall narowly loke vpō the, & thynke in thē selues, saying: Is this the mā that brought all landes in feare, and made the kyngdomes afrayed? Is thys he that made the world in a maner waste, and layed the cyties to the grounde, whych let not hys prysonners go out?

The kynges of the nacyons lye euerye one in hys owne house wyth worshyppe, and thou art cast out of the graue lyke a fylthye abhominable braunche: lyke as deed mens raymente that are shot thorowe wyth the sweard and go downe to the stones of the depe: as a deed coorse that is troden vnder fete: and art not buryed wt them. Euen because that thou hast wasted thy lande, and destroyed thy people. The generacyō of the wycked shalbe without honoure for euer. Let there a way be sought to destroy theyr chyldren, that be in their fathers wyckednesse that they come not vp agayne to possesse the lande, & fyll the worlde full of enemyes.

I wyll stande vp agaynste them (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) and root out the name and rēnaunte, sonne, and sonnes sonne of Babylon (sayth

(sayth the Lorde) and wyll geue it to the Otters, & wyll make water puddles of it. And I wyll swepe them out with the besome of destruccyon, sayth the Lorde of hostes. The Lorde of hostes hath sworne an oth, saying: It shal come to passe as I haue determined, and shalbe fulfilled as I haue deuysed. So that Assyria shall I destroy in my lãde, and vpon my mountaynes wyl I treade hym vnder fote. Wherethorowe hys yoke shall come frõ them and hys burthen shalbe takẽ frõ their shulder. Thys deuise hath God taken thorowe the hole world: and thys is hys hande stretched out ouer all people. For yf the Lord of hostes determyne a thynge: who is able to dysanull it? And yf he stretcheth forthe hys hande, who maye holde it agayne?

G The same yeare that kyng Ahas dyed, God threatened on thys maner: Reioyse not (thou whole Palestina) because the rod of hym that beateth the is broken: for oute of the serpentes rote there shal come an adder, & the frute shalbe a fyrye flyinge worme. But the fyrsteborne of the poore shalbe fed, and ỹ symple shall dwel in safetye. Thy roote also wyl I destroye wt hũgre, & it shall slay thy remnaũt. Mourne thou porte, wepe thou cytie, for (O whole lande of Palestina) thou art layed waste, for there shall come from the north a smoke that not one alone may abyde in hys place. Who shall then answere the messengers of the Gentyles? For the Lorde hath stablysshed Syon, and the poore of his people that be therin, do put theyr trust in hym.

¶ The.xv.Chapter.

A THis is ỹ heuy burthẽ vpõ Moab. Ar of Moab was destroied & ouerthrowẽ in ỹ night sealõ. Kyr also in Moab was destroyed, & perysshed in ỹ nyght. They wẽte vp to the idols house euen to Dibõ to ỹ hye places to wepe for Nebo, & Moab did mourne for Medba: All their hedes were balde, and all theyr berdes shauen.
B In theyr stretes are they gyrded aboute wyth sackcloth. In all the toppes of theyr houses and stretes shalbe nothynge but mournynge & weppynge. Hesbon and Eleale shall cry, that theyr voyce shalbe herde vnto Jahaz. The worthyes also of Moab shall bleate oute, and crye for very sorowe of theyr myndes: Wo shal my herte be for Moabs sake. They shall flye vnto the cyttie of Zoar which is lyke a fayre younge bullock of thre yere olde, for they shal go vnto Luith weppynge. Euen so by the way towarde Horonaim they shall make lamentacion for their vtter destruccyõ. For the waters of Nimrim shal be dryed vp, by reason wherof the grasse is wythered, the herbes destroyed, & the grene thinges gone. For the residue that he hath done, they are sorye. As for their substaunce, the enemyes
D they haue caryed them to the brooke of ỹ wyllowes. For the crye went ouer the whole lande of Moab: vnto Eglaim & vnto Ber, Elim was ther nothyng but mournyng, because ỹ waters of Dimõ wer ful of bloud for Jỹ Lord shal sẽde more bloude vpõ Dimõ, & Lyõs vpõ ỹ rẽnaũte of the lande, & on them ỹ are escaped frõ Moab.

A SEnde the Lorde of the worlde a lãbe from the rocke that lyeth towarde ỹ deserte, vnto the hyll of the daughter Syon. For as for the daughters of Moab, they shalbe as a tremblynge byrde that is put out of harnest, for they shall carye them vnto Arnon: gather your coũsayll, come together in iudgement, couer vs wyth your shadow in the myddaye, as the nyght doeth hyde ỹ chaced, and bewraye not them that are fled, let my
B persecuted people dwell amonge you, Moab, be thou theyr refuge agaynst the destroyer: for the aduersarye is brought to noughte, the robber is vndone, the tyraunt is wasted out of the lande. And in mercy shall the seate be prepared, and he shall syt vpon it in the trueth in the tabernacle of Dauid, iudgynge and sekynge iudgemente, and makynge haste vnto ryghteousnesse. We haue herd of ỹ pryde of Moab, he is very proud, presumpteous, arrogant, and ful of indignacyon and vayne are hys lyes. Therfore shall Moab make lamentacion because of the Moabites (that shalbe slayne) yea, they shal wayle all together. Because of the foundacions of ỹ cytie ỹ is made of brycke, shall ye complayne: euen ye lame people that are left onely behynde.

C For the vynes of Hesbon are cut downe: As for the vyne of Sybna, the lordes of ỹ heathen haue broken downe her pryncipall braunches: they are come euen vnto Jazer, they wente on wanderynge vnto the wyldernesse. Her goodlye braũches were thrown downe as they wente ouer the see. Therfore wyl I mourne for Jazer, & for the vyne of Sibna. I wyll poure my teares vpon the, O Hesbon and Eleale, for ỹ crye of thyne enemyes is fallen vpõ thy sommer fruites, and vpon thy haruest. The mirth and chere is taken away out of the plentyful felde, and in the vynepardes, there shalbe no ioye nor gladnesse.
D The treader shall treade out no wyne in the presses, the sõge of theyr merye chere haue I layed downe, Wherfore, my bowels shall rõble lyke an harpe for Moabs sake, and myne inwarde partes, for the cyties sake that is made of bryckе. And it shall come to passe, that when it is sene that Moab shalbe made werye of hys hyl chapels, he shal come to hys tẽple to praye, but he shall not be able. So then, thys is the sayinge that the Lorde hath spokẽ concernyng Moab, syns that tyme. But nowe the Lorde hath spoken, sayinge: In thre yeres, which shal be as the yeres of an hyred seruaunte, shall the glory of Moab be turned into confusyon, thorowe oute all hys multytude, whyche is verye great. And that whyche remaynyeth, shalbe very small and feble.

A THis is the heuy burthẽ vpon Damascus: beholde, Damascus is taken away, to be nomore a cytie, but shalbe a heape of broken stones. The waste cyties cytyes of Arder shalbe foldes for catell, whyche shall lye there, and there shalbe none to frape the awaye: Ephraim also shall nomore be stronge, and Damascus shall nomoare be a kyngedome, and the remnaunt of Syria shalbe as the glorye of ỹ chyldren of Israel, sayth the Lord of hostes And in that daye it shall come to passe, that Jacob shalbe made verye poore, and the fatnes of hys flesshe shal waxe leane. And he shalbe as one that gathereth vp corne in heruest, euē lyke him whose harme reapeth the eares of corne.

He shalbe also lyke him that gathereth eares of corne in the valley of Raphaim. Some gathe rynge in dede shall there be lefte in it, euen as in ỹ shakynge of an olyue tree, there remayne two or thre beries in the toppe of the vttermost bow and foure or fyue in the brode fruytefull braunches thereof sayth the Lorde God of Israel.

B Then shall man turne agayne to hys maker and hys eyes shal haue respect to the holy one of Israel. As for the aulters whyche are hys owne handewoorcke, he shal not regarde them, and the thynges that hys fyngers haue made (as groues and ymages) those shall he not cast hys eye vnto. In that daye shall theyr stronge cytyes be as the forsaken shrubbes and braunches, which they lefte, because of the chyldren of Israell: and the lande shalbe desolate. Because thou hast forgotten God thy saluacion, & hast not bene mynd full of thy strong rock: therfore shalt thou set pleasaunt plantes, and shalt graffe the braunche of an other mannes vyne. In that daye shalt thou make thy plant to growe, and early in the morynge shalt thou make thy seede to florysh. The harueste shalbe gone in the daye of enheritaunce and there shalbe sorow wythout hope of cōfort:

C Wo shalbe to the multytude of much people, whych shall make a sounde lyke the noyse of the see. And the violence of the nacions, which shal rage lyke the rushynge in of many waters: Euē lyke many waters shall ỹ people rage. God shal rebuke hym, and he shall flye farre of. He shalbe chased away lyke as drye strawe vpon the mountaynes before the wynde: and lyke a thyng that turneth before the storme at euen, beholde, ther is trouble: and or euer it be morynge: loo, he is gone. Thys is the porcyon of them that oppresse vs, and the lot of them that robbe vs.

C The.xviii.Chapter.

C A prophecye agaynst Egypt.

A Wo that lande that trusteth vnder the shadowe of wynges, ỹ lande whych is beyonde the waters of Ethyopia Sendynge messaungers by the see, euen vesselles of redes ouer the water. Get you hence (ye spedye messaungers) to a nacyon that is scatered abroade, and robbed of that they hadde, a fearfull people from theyr begynnyng hytherto: a nacyō troden downe by litle and lytle, whose landes the flodes haue spoyled. All ye inhabytoures of the worlde and indwellers of the earthe, looke vp when he setteth a token in the mountaynes, and herken when he bloweth wyth the trompe. For so the Lorde sayde vnto me: as for me, I will take my rest, and loke vpon the matter in my habitacyon, lyke a faire heate after the rayne, and lyke a cloude of dewe in the heate of harueste.

For afore the harueste when the braunche is growen, there shall come rype frupte oute of the floure: and he shall cut downe the increase with sythes, and the braunches shall he take awaye wyth hookes, Thus shall they be lefte together vnto the foules of the mountaynes & to the beastes of the earth: for in sommer the bryrdes shall remayne vpon it, & euery beast of the lande shall be vpon it in the wynter. In that tyme shal there a presente be brought vnto the Lorde of hostes euen a people that is scatered abroade, and robbed of that they hadde, that same people whych haue bene fearfull from theyr begynnynge hytherto, a nacyon troden downe by lytle and lytle whose lande the floudes haue spoyled, to ỹ place of the name of the Lorde of hooستes, euen to the mount Syon.

C The prophecye agaynst Egypt.

A The heuye burthen of Egypte: Beholde, the Lord rydeth vpon a swifte cloude, and shall come into Egypte and the Idols of Egypte shall tremble at the presence of hym, and the herte of Egypte shall quake in the mydd este of her. And I wyll set the Egyptyans one agaynst another, so that one brother shal fyght agaynst another, and one neyghboure agaynste another, Cytye agaynste Cytye, and Realme agaynste Realme. The mynde also of Egypte shalbe cleane wythout councell wythin it selfe, and the deuyce that they take wyll I destroye, so ỹ they shall seke councell at Idols, and at sorcerers, at workers wyth spretes and at sothsayers. And the Egyptians wyll I geue ouer into the hande of a maruelous cruell lord, and a myghtye kyng shall haue dompynyon ouer them, sayth the Lord God of Hooستes: the waters of the see shal fayle and ỹ ryuer shall decrease, and be dryed vp. The waters shalbe drawen out: the ryuers of Egipt shalbe emptyed and dryed vp, the redes and flagges shabe cut downe. B

The gresse in the ryuer & by the ryuers banck and all that groweth by the ryuer shall wyther away, and be broughte to naught. The fyshers also shall mourne, and all they that cast angle into the water, shal make lamentacion, and they ỹ laye forth theyr net beside the waters shalbe rooted out. Moreouer, they that worke in flax and make fyne workes: shalbe confounded: & so shal they that weue open workes. For they yt open workes shalbe euen destroyed, & al they ỹ make pondes and stues for fyshe shal come to naught.

But ye foolysshe prynces of Zoan, ye wyse coūsaylers of Pharao, whose wytte is turned to foolyshenes, howe say ye vnto Pharao. I am come of wyse men, and of auncyente kynges? Where are nowe the wyse men? Let thē tell the (yf they can) what the Lord of hooستes hath deuysed vpon Egypte. C

The prynces of Zoan are become foles, ỹ prynces of Noph are dysceaued, they haue dysceaued

Egypte, euen they that were taken for the cheke kynred therof. In the myddest of it hath ỹ Lorde poured the spyrete of wyckednesse, and they haue dyscreaued Egipt in euery worcke therof: euẽ as a dyroncken mã stackereth in his vompte. Nether shall the heade or tayle, the braunch or rede be able to do any worcke in Egipt. In that day shal Egipte be lyke vnto wemen, It shalbe afrayed and stande in feare at the mocyon of the hand of the Lorde of hoostes, wheych he shaketh ouer it. And Egypt shalbe afrayed of the lande of Juda so that euery one wheyche maketh mencyon of it, shalbe afrayed thereat because of the councell of the Lorde of hoostes wheyche he deuysed for it.

In that daye shall fyue cytyes in the lande of Egypt speake ỹ language of Canaan, & sweare by the Lorde of hostes, the cytye of desolacyon, shalbe called one of them In that daye shal ỹ aultare of the Lorde be in the myddes of the land of Egypt, & this tytle besyde it: VNTO THE LORDE And it shalbe a token and a wytnesse vnto the Lorde of hooستes in the lande of Egypte. For they shal crye vnto the Lorde, because of such as trouble them, and he shal send them a Sauyour and a greate man to delyuer them.

D And the Lorde shalbe knowen in Egypt, and the Egyptians shall knowe the Lorde in ỹ daye and do sacrifyce & oblacion: yee, they shal vowe a vowe vnto the Lorde, and performe it. The Lorde also shal smyte Egipte sooze, & heale them agayne: and they shalbe conuerted vnto ỹ Lorde and he shalbe intreated of them, and shall heale them. In that daye shall there be a comen waye oute of Egypte into Assyrya, and Assyrya shall come into Egypt: and Egypte into Assyria: so ỹ the Egyptyans and the Assirians shal serue the Lorde together, In that daye shal the nacyon of Israel be the thyrde wyth Egypt and Assyrya, and they shalbe blessed in the myddes of ỹ lande wheyche lande the Lorde of hooستes hath blessed sayinge: blessed is my people of Egypte: Assur also is the worcke of myne handes: and Israell is myne enherytaunce.

The. xx. Chapter

Agaynst Egypte and Ethyopia.

A Nno the yeare that Thartha came vnto Asdod (when Sargon the kynge of Assiria had sent him) & had fought agaynst Asdod, and taken it. At the same tyme spake the Lorde by ỹ hand of Esaye the sonne of Amos, sayinge: Goo, and take of the sackecloth from thy loynes, and put of thy shooe from thy foote. And he dyd so, walkynge naked and barefoote.

And the Lorde sayde: lyke as my seruaũte Esay hath walked naked and barefote for a sygne and wonder thre yeares vpon Egypte. And Ethyoppa: Euen so shall ỹ kynge of Assyrya take awaye oute of Egypte and out of Ethiopia, chyldren and olde men, naked and bare fote, wh̃ theyr loynes vncouered, to the great shame of Egypt

They shalbe brought in feare also, and asha 25 med one of another: Ethyopia of Egypte and Egypt of Ethyopia, consyderynge what glory they were in afore. And they ỹ dwell in the same Ile, shall saye in that daye: Behold, thus are we regarded. Whyther shall we flye for helpe, that we maye be delyuered from the kynge of Assyria And howe shall we escape?

The. xxi. Chapter:

Agaynst Babylon, Idumea, and Arabya.

THe burthen of the waste see, Euen as the stormie wether that passeth thorowe at the none daye, to come from the wyldernes, from that horrible lande. A greuous vision was shewed vnto me: Let one dyssceatefull offender come agaynste another, and one destroyer agaynste another. Vp Elam, laye seege thou of Media, all theyr gronynge haue I layde downe. Therfore are my loynes fylled wyth sorowe: heupnes hath taken holde vpon me as the panges of a woman that is trauaylynge: It made me stoupe when I hearde it, and it vexed me when I sawe it. My hert panted, fearfulnes came vpon me. The nyght of voluptuousnesse, hath he turned agaynste me into feare. Whyle B they garnyshed the table, the watchman loked: And whyle he was eatynge and drynckynge (it was sayde) vp ye Captaynes take you to youre shylde. For thus hath the Lorde sayde vnto me, Go, and set a watcheman, to tell what he seeth. And he sawe a charet wheych two horsmen sat vpon, with the carpage of anasse, and the carpage of a camel: So he loked and toke very dylygent hede. And the Lyon cryed, Lorde, I stande waytyng al the hole day, & am appointed to kepe my watch euery nyght. And beholde, here commeth a charet of men, wyth two horsemen. And he answered & sayde: Babylon is fallen, it is fallen, and the ymages of her goddes hathe he smytten downe vnto the grounde. Thou art he whom I must thresh, and thou belõgest to my corne floze Thys that I hearde of the Lorde of hooستes the God of Israell haue I shewed vnto you.

The burthe of Duma: he calleth vnto me out of Seyr: Watcheman what haste thou espyed C by nyght? Watchman what haste thou espyed by nyght? The watchman sayd: The morynng commeth, and so doth the nyght. Yf ye wyl aske any question, then aske it: returne & come agayn

The burthen concernynge Arabya: In ỹ plaisaunt grounde of Arabya shall ye tary all nyght euen in ỹ stretes of Dedanim. The inhabytours of the lande of Thema brought for the water to him that was thyrsty, they preuented hym with theyr breade that was fled awaye. For because of sweardes are they become fugytyue, euen for the drawen sweard, and for the bente bowe and because of the grenousnes of warre. For thus hath the Lorde sayde vnto me:

There is yet a yeare accordynge to the yeares of an hyred seruaunt and all the glorye of Cedar shal fayle. And the nombre of them that shal escape frome the bowes: shalbe punyshed by the myghtye chyldren of Cedar, for so the Lorde god of Israel hath spoken.

because of the destruccion of the daughter of my people. For thys is a daye of trouble, of ruyne, & the destruccyon that the Lorde wyll brynge to passe in the valley of vysyon, breakynge downe the cytye, and cryinge vnto the mountaynes.

B Elā hare ỹ quyuer wyth a charet of fotemen & of horsmen, the cytye of Kyr shewed the shylde open. Thy chefe valleye also was full of charettes, and the horsmen set theyr faces dyrectlye to warde the gate, And in that daye dyd the enemy take awaye the bewtye of Juda, & then dyddest thou loke towarde the armoure of the house of ỹ forest. Ye haue sene also the broken places of the cytye of Dauyd, howe that they are many, and ye gathered together ỹ waters of the lower pole
As for the houses of Jerusalem, ye haue nōbred theyr fathers house, all vesselles both great and small, & all instrumentes of measure & musyke.

In that daye (sayeth the Lorde of hoostes) shal the nayle that is fastened in ỹ sure place, departe on it, shulbe pluckt awaye: for so the Lorde hath spoken.

¶ A prophesy agaynst Tyrus, and a promysse that it shalbe restored agayne.

A The burthen of * Tyre: Mourne ye shyp pes of Tharsis, for there cōmeth such destruccyon, that ye shall not haue an house to entre into: Oute of the lande of Citym haue they knowelege of thys plage.
Be styll ye that dwell in the Ile, the marchaunes of Zydon, and such as passe ouer the see, haue made the plenteous. The corne that groweth by the greate waters of Nilus, and the frutes of ỹ ryuer were her vitayles, so that it became a com men marte of the nacyons. Be ashamed thou Zidon, for the see, (euen the strength of the see,) hathe spoken, sayinge: I haue not trauyled nor brought forth chyldren, nor nourysshed vp yonge men or brought vp vyrgyns.

When tydynges commeth to the Egyptyans, they shalbe sorye for the rumoure that goeth of Tire. Get you to Tharsis, mourne ye that dwel in the Ile. Is not thys that glorypous Cytye of yours, whyche hath bene of olde antyquyty. Her to mynyshe all them that be proude vpon earthe Get the oute of the lande vnto the daughter of

¶ A prophecy of tribulacion to come vpon ꝑ world because of synne

1 BEholde, the Lorde maketh the earthe waste and emptye: he turneth it vpsyde downe, and scatereth abroade the inhabytours thereof, And the preaste shalbe as the people, and the master as the seruaunt, the mastresse lyke the mayde, the seller lyke the byer: he that lendeth vpon vsury, lyke hym that borroweth vpon vsury: the credytoure as ꝑ detter: The worlde shalbe cleane wasted and vtterly spoyled, for so the Lorde hath spoken. The earth is sorye, and consumeth away: the worlde is feble and perysheth, the proude people of the earth are come to naughte. The earth also is become vnpurifyable vnder the enhabytours ther of, which haue trangressed the lawes, chaunged ꝑ ordynaunce, broken the euerlastyng couenaũt

2 Therfore hath the curse consumed the earthe & they that dwell therin, are fallen into trespasse Wherfore the enhabitours of the earth are perysshed wyth drought, & fewe men are left behynde The wyne fayleth: the wyne hath no myght, all they that haue bene mery of hert are come to mournyng. The myrth of tabrettes is layd downe, the noyse of such as haue made mery, is ceassed, the ioye at the Herpe is at an ende. They shall dryncke no more wyne wt̃ myrth, strong drincke shalbe bytter to them that dryncke it. The cyty of vanytye is broken downe, euery house is shut vp, that no man maye come in. In the stretes is there a crynge because of wyne, all chere is vanysshed awaye, the myrth of the worlde is gone: in the cytye is lefte desolacyon, and the gate is

For in the myddes of the worlde, euen among the people, it shall come to passe, as at the shakynge of Olyues: and as the grapes are when the vine heruest is done: They shal lyft vp their voyce, and make a mery noyce, and in magnifynge of the Lorde, shal they crye oute of the weste Wherfore prayse ye the Lorde in the valleys, euen the name of the Lorde God of Israel, in the Iles of the see. From the vttermost parte of the earth haue we hearde prayses & myrth, because of the ryghteous. And I sayde: I knowe a thyng in secrete: wo is me, the transgressours haue offended: the transgressours haue greuously offended. Fearefulnes, the pyt, and the snare are vpon the, O thou ꝑ dwellest on the earth. It wyl come to passe that whosoeuer escapeth ꝑ fearful noyse shall fall into the pyt. And he that commeth vp: out of the pyt, shalbe taken wyth the snare, For the wyndowes from on hygh are open, and the foundacyons of the earth are moued,

The earth is vtterly broken downe, the earth hath a sore rupne, the earth quaketh exceadyngly. The earth shall releth to and fro, lyke a dronkarde, & shalbe remoued lyke a tẽt (of one nyght) and the iniquite therof shalbe heape vpon it. It shall fall and not ryse vp agayne. And in that daye shall the Lorde vyset the hoost aboue that is on hye, and the kynges of the worlde ꝑ are vpõ the earth. And they shalbe gathered together, as they that be in prison: and they shalbe shut vp in ward, and after many dayes shal they be visited

THou arte the Lorde my God, I wyl magnyfye the, I wyl geue thankes vnto thy name. For ꝑ hast brought wonderfull thynges to passe, accordynge to thyne owne councels truly and faythfully.* Thou hast made of a cytye an heape of stones & brought a strõge towne into decay. The habytacyon of straungers hast ꝑ made to be no cytie, nether shal it be buylded any more Therfore shall the myghtye people geue glorye vnto the, the cytie of the valeaunt heathen shal feare the. Esa.xxv.a

Lyke as ꝑ bryngest heate downe out of a dry place: so shalt thou suppresse the noyse of alyaunts. The heate is the shadowe of the clonde, the braunch of the myghtye shalbe brought lowe. And in this mountayne shal the Lorde destroy ꝑ couerynge, ꝑ al the people are wrapped in, & the hangynge ꝑ is spred vpon all nacyons. *As for death he hath destroied it for euer: And the Lorde God shall wype awaye teares from all faces, & the rebuke of hys people shall he take away out of al ꝑ earth. For so ꝑ Lord hath sayde B Luk.xiiii.d Ose.xiii.a. Apoca.vii.c xi cor.xv.f and.xvi.c.

And in that daye it shalbe sayde: Loo, thys is oure God, we haue wayted for hym,* & he shall saue vs. Thys is the Lorde in whome we haue hoped, we wylbe mery and reioyce in the saluacyon that commethe of hym. For in thys mountayne shall the hande of the Lorde ceasse & Moab shalbe threshed vnder him, euen as strawe is threshed vpon the grounde. THus hath the Lorde spoken, euen the kynge of Israell and his redemer, the Lorde of hoostes * I am the fyrst and the last, and wythout me is there no God. Yf any be lyke me, let him cal for ỹ thyng past, and openly shewe it, and lay it playne before me, what hath chaunsed synce I appoynted the people of the worlde, & what shalbe short ly, or what shall come to passe, in tyme longe to come, let thē shewe theſe thinges. Be not abashed nor afrayed for haue not I euer told you hether to & warned you? Ye can beare me recorde youre selues. Is there any God excepte me? or any maker that I shulde not knowe hym?

Esa.xlii.a Apoc.xvi.c Esa.xliii.b Apo.i.b Esa.xlviii.c

All keruers of ymages are but vayne, and the karued ymages that they loue, can do no good. They muste beare record them selues, that (seing they cā nether se, nor vnderstand: they shalbe cō founded. * Who dare then make a God, or fashyon an ymage, that is profytable for nothynge?

Esa.xlii.b

Esa.xlv.b Apoc.xvi.c * Beholde al the felowe shyppe of them muste be brought to confusyon. And truly as the worcke masters of them are men, they shalbe gathered together, they shall stande, tremble, and be confounded one wyth another. The smyth maketh an axe, and tempereth it wyth hoote cooles, and fashyoneth it wythe hammers, and worketh it wyth all the strenghte of hys armes: yee, sometyme he is faynte for very hunger, and so thurstye that he hath nomore power. The carpenter (or ymage karuer) taketh measure of the tymber, & spreadeth forth hys lyne: he maketh it wyth some coloure, he planeth it, he ruleth it, and squareth it, and maketh it after the ymage of a man: and accordynge to the bewtye of a man that it maye stande in the temple.

¶ Moreouer, he goeth out to hewe downe Cedre trees. He bringethe home Elmes and Okes and takynge a bolde courage, he seketh oute the best tymber of the wodd. He hym selfe hath planted a pine tree, which ỹ raine hath swelled, which wodde serueth for men to burne. Of thys he taketh and warmeth hym selfe with al: he maketh a fyre of it to bake breade. And afterwarde maketh a god thereof, to honoure it, and an ydoll to knele before it. One peace he burneth in the fyre wyth another he rosteth flesshe, that he maye eat rost hys belly full: wyth the thyrde he warmeth hym selfe, and sayeth Aha. I am wel warmed I haue bene at the fyre. And of the reſydue he maketh hym a God, & an ydoll for hym selfe. He kneleth before it, he worshippeth it, he prayeth vnto it, and sayth: delyuer me, for thou arte my God. * Esa.xliii.c

* Yet men nether consyder nor vnderstande, because theyr eyes be stopped, that they cannot se: and theyr hertes, that they cannot perceaue. They pondre not in theyr myndes, for they haue nether knowlege nor vnderstandynge to thinke thus. I haue brent one pece in the fyre. I haue baked breade wyth the cooles therof, I haue rosted flesshe wyth all: and eaten it: shall I nowe of the reſydue make an abhominable Idoll, and fall downe before a rotten pece of wodde? Thus he doth but lese hys labour: and hys hert whyche is dysceaued doth turne hym aſyde, so that none of them can haue a fre conscience to thincke may not I erre?

Consyder thys (O Jacob and Israel) for thou art my seruaunt. I haue made the, that thou my ſelfe serue me. O Israell for get me not * As for thyne offences, I haue dryuen them awaye, lyke the cloudes, and thy synnes as the myst: Turne the agayne vnto me. For I haue redemed the. D Esa.xliii.b

Reioyce ye mountaynes and woodes, wyth all the trees therof, for the Lord hath redemed Jacob, and wyll shewe hys mercy vpon Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord thy redemer Gen.ii.a Esa.xlv.c euen he that fashyoned the frome thy mothers wombe. * I the Lorde do all thynges my selfe a lone. I onely spread oute the heauens, and I only haue layde the foundacyon of the earth by myne owne selfe. I destroye the tokens of wytches and make the sothsayers fooles. As for the wyse I turne them backwarde, and make theyr connynge foolyshenes.

He doth set vp the purpose of hys seruaunte and fulfylleth the councell of hys messaungers, Concernynge Jerusalem he sayeth: It shalbe inhabyted. And of the cytyes of Juda: They shalbe buylded agayne, and I wyll repayre theyr decayed places: He sayeth to the grounde: be drye And I wyll drye vp the water floudes, he sayth of Cyrus: He is my hearde man, so ỹ he shall fulfyll all thynges after my wyll. He sayth also of Jerusalem: It shalbe buylded, and of the temple it shalbe fast grounded.

What parte hath my beloued in my house seinge he hath wrought abhompnacyon, seruynge many Goddes? * The holye flesh offerynges in the temple are gone from the O Juda, and thou when thou hast done euell makest thy bost of it. * The Lord called the a grene Olyue tre, a fayre one, a fruitfull one, a goodly one: but wyth great clamor hath the enemye set fyre vpon it and the braunches of it are destroyed. The xii Chapter

¶ The prophet marueleth greatly at the prosperytye of the wycked, although he confesse God to be ryghteous. The Jewes are forsaken of the Lorde. He speketh agaynst Curates, and preachers that seduce the people. The Lord threateneth destruccion vnto the nacions that bordered vppon Jurye: which troubled and vexed it,

A Lorde, thou arte moare ryghteous, then that I shulde dysputte wyth the. Neuertheles, lette me talke wyth the in thynges resonable. * howe happeneth it, that the waye of the vngodly is so prosperous: and that it goeth so wel wyth them whych (wythout anye shame) offended & lyue in wyckednesse? Thou plantest them they take roote, they growe, & bryng forth frute They bost much of the, yet arte thou farre from theyr raynes. But thou Lorde (to whome I am wel knowen) thou that hast sent and proued my hert * take them away, lyke as a flocke is caryed to the slaughter house, and peynt them for the day of slaughter. Howe longe shall the land mourne * and all the herbes of the felde perysshe, for the wyckednes of them that dwel therin.

The catell and the byrdes are goone: yet saye they tushe. * God wyll not destroye vs vtterlye Seinge thou arte werye in runnynge wyth the fotemen, howe wylt thou then renne wyth horses? in a peaceable sure land thou mayest be safe But howe wylt thou do in the furyous pryde of Jordane? For thy brethren and thy kinred haue altogether dysppsed the: and cryed out vpon the in thine absence * Beleue them not, though they speake fayre wordes to the. As for me (I saye) I haue forsaken myne owne dwellinge place, and lefte myne heritage. My lyfe also that I loue so well haue I geuen into the handes of myne enemyes. * Myne heritage is become vnto me, as a lyon in the wod, It cryeth out vpon me, therfore haue I forsaken it. Myne heritage is vnto me, as a speckled byrde, a byrde of dyuerse colores is vpon it. Come and gather ye together all beastes of the felde, Come that ye may eate it vp * Diuerse herdmen haue broken downe my ‡ vyneparde, and troden vpon my portyon. Of my pleasaunt portion, they haue made a wyldernes and desert. They haue layde it waste: and newe that it is waste, it syghethvnto me. Yee, the whole lande lyeth waste, & no man regardeth it. The destroyers come ouer the heath euery waye, for that swerd of the Lorde doth consume from that one ende of the lande to the other, and no flesh hath reste. They haue sowne wheate, and reaped thornes. They haue taken heritage in possessyon, but it doethe them no good. And the prophetes were ashamed of youre fruytes, because of the great wrath of the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde vpon all myne euell nevghboures, that laye hande vpon myne heritage, whych I haue possessed, euen my people of Israel: Beholde, I wyll plucke them (namelye Israel) out of theyr lande, and put out the house of Juda from among them. * And when I haue rooted them out. I wyll be at one wyth them agayne: and I wyll haue mercy vpon them: ‡ and bryng them agayne, euerye man to hys owne heritage, and into hys lande. And yf they (namely that trouble my people) wyll learne the wayes of them, to sweare by my name. The Lordlyueth (lyke as they learned my people to sweare by Baal) then shal they be reckened amonge my people. But yf they wyll not obeye, then wyl I rote out the same folke, and destroye them sayth the Lorde.

I haue sene also amonge the prophetes of Jerusalem foule aduoutrye, and presumpteous lyes. They take the moost shameful men by the hande, flatterynge them, so that they cannot returne from their wyckednes. All these vnto me are vnto me as Sodome, and as the inhabytours of Gomorre.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes

Vnt thus shall ye saye euery one to another G and euery man to his brother. What answere hath the Lorde geuen? what is the Lordes commaundemente? And as for the burthen of the Lord: ye shal speake nomore of it, for euery mannes owne worde is his burthen because ye haue altered the wordes of the lyuing God, the Lord of hoostes oure God.

Thus shall euery man saye to the prophetes, what answere hathe the Lorde geuen the? Or what sayeth the Lorde? And not once to name the burthen of the Lorde. Therfore thus sayeth the Lord. For so muche as ye haue vsed this tearme the burthen of the Lorde where as I notwithstandynge sente vnto you, and forbad you to speake of the Lordes burthen.

¶ Jeremye prophecyeth that they shalbe in captyuyte .lx. yeares and .v. because they contemned and despysed the worde of God He threwth them that after the .lx. and .v. yeares, the Babylons shalbe destroyed. The destruccyon of all nacyons is prophecyed. He mouyth the Pycalles of the nacyons to waylynge.

A Sermon that was geuen vnto Jerempe, vpon al the people of Juda, In the forthe yeare of Jeokym the sonne of Josias king of Juda that was in the firste yeare of Nabucho donosor kynge of Babylon. Whych sermon Jerempe the Prophete made vnto all the people of Juda, and to all the enhabytours of Jerusalem, on this maner.

From the thyrtene yere of Josyas the sonne of Amon kynge of Juda, vnto this present day (that is euen thre and twintie yeare,) the worde of the Lorde hath ben commyttted vnto me.

* And so I haue spoken to you, I haue rysen vp earlye, I haue geuen you warnynge in season but ye wolde not heare me, + Though the Lorde hath sente his seruauntes, all the prophetes vnto you in season: Yet wold ye not obeye, ye wold not enclyne youre eares to heare.

He sayde: * turne agayne euerye man from hys euell waye, and from youre wycked ymagynacyons, and so shall ye dwell for euer in the lande that the Lorde promysed you, and youre forefathers. And go not after straūge goddes, serue them not, worshyppe them not, and angre me not with the workes of youre handes: then wyll I not punysh you. Neuertheles, ye wolde not heare me (sayeth the Lorde) but haue defyed me with the workes of your handes, to youre owne greate harme.

Wherfore, thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes * because ye haue not herkened vnto my word Loo, I wyll sende out, and cal for al the people that dwell in the North (sayeth the Lorde) and wyll prepare Nabuchodonosor the Kynge of + Babylon my seruaūte, and wyll bringe them vpon this land, & vpon al that dwel therin, and Therfore, tell them al these wordes, and saye vnto them: * The Lorde shall crye from aboue, and let hys voyce be herd from hys holy habytation. Wyth a great noyse shall he crye from his court regall: he shall gyue a greate voyce, (lyke the grapegatherers) and the sound therof shalbe herde vnto the endes of the world. For the Lord hathe a iugement to gyue vpon all people, and wyll holde hys court of iustice with all flesh, and punyshe the vngodly: sayth the Lorde.

Joel.iij.c Amos.i.b

For thus sayth the Lord of hostes: * Behold a myserable plage shall goo from one people to an other, and a great stormye water shall aryse from all the endes of the earth. And the same daye shall the Lorde hym selfe slaye them, from one ende of ẏ erth to an other. B And after this maner shalt thou speake vnto them. Thus sayth the Lord: yf ye wyll not obeye me, to walke in my lawes whych I haue gyuen you and to heare the wordes of my seruauntes ẏ prophetes whome I sent vnto you, rysynge vp tymelye, and styll sendynge. How darrest thou be so bold, as to saye in the name of the Lorde: it shall happen to this house as it dyde vnto Siloh: and this cytye shalbe so waste, ẏ no mā shall dwell therin.

C And whē al the people were gathered about Jeremy in the house of the Lorde, the princes of Juda herde of this rumour, and they came soone out of the kynges palace, into the house of the Lorde, and sat them downe before the * newe dore of the Lorde. The xxxi. Chapter.

¶ The prophecyeth that the people of Israel shal be restored agayne vnto theyr prosperite. To be turned from synne is the gyfte of God. The byrth of Christ is prophecyed. All the wycked shall dye in theyr wyckednes. The newe Testament and couenaunt is prophecyed. The Christen are taughte & instructe of the Lorde. Oure synnes shalbe so remitted, that they not once be thought on God protesteth that he wyl call of the Jewes. The buylduynge agayne of Jerusalem.

THus sayth the Lorde* the people of I A

Thou shalt take thy tabrets agayn, and go forth with them that leade the daunce. Thou shalte plante vynes agayne vpon the hylles of Samaria, & the grape gatherers shall plant, and comenly eate of it.

B For the dayes shall come when the watchemen vpon the mount of Ephraim shall crye, a-

Beholde, I wyll bryng them agayne from out of the north lande, and gather them from the endes of the worlde, with the blynde and lame that are amonge them, with the women that be great with chylde, and suche as be also delyuered: and the company of them that come agayne, shall be great.

They shall come weppynge & with mercyfull pitye wyl I bryng them hyther agayne, I wyll leade them to the ryuers of water in a straygbt

Gen.xlviii.d Israels father, & † Ephraim is my first borne.

Heare the worde of the Lorde, O ye Gentyles, preache in the yles, that lye farre of, and saye: he that scatered Israel, shall gather hym togyther agayne, and shall kepe hym, as a shepherde doth his flocke. For the Lorde hath redemed Jacob, and ryd hym from the hande of the violent, and they shall come, & reioyce vpon the hyll of Sion, and shall haue plenteousnesse of goodes, whiche the Lorde shall gyue them. Namely, wheate, wyne, oyle, yonge shepe & calues. And theyr conseyence shall be as a well watred garden, for they shall no more be hungry.

C Then shall the mayde reioyce in the daunce, yee, bothe yonge and olde folkes. For I wyll turne theyr sorowe into gladnes, and wyll comforte them from theyr sorowes: and make them ioyfull. I wyll powre plenteousnesse vpon the hertes of the preastes, & my people shal be satisfyed with my goodnes, sayth the Lorde.

Jerem.iii.c Mat.ii.c Thus sayth the Lorde: * the voyce of heynesse, weppyng & lamentacion was herde on hye euen of Rachel, mournyng for her childzen. and wold not be cõforted, bycause they were away.

But now sayth the Lord, leaue of from weppynge and crienge, withholde thyne eyes from teares, for thy labour shall be rewarded, sayth the Lord. And they shal come agayne out of the lande of theyr enemyes: Yee, euen thy posteritye shall haue consolacyon in this, sayth the Lorde, that thy childzen shall come agayne in to theyr owne lande. Moreouer, I herde Ephraim, that was led away captyue, complayne on this maner. Esr.xxc * O Lorde, thou hast correct me, & thy chastenynge haue I receaued, as an vntamed calfe. Jere.b.c zacha.i.a † Conuert thou me, and I shal be conuerted: for thou art my Lorde God: Yee, as soone as thou turnest me, I shall reforme my selfe: & when I vnderstand, I shall smyte vpon my thygh. ¶ The.xxxii Chapter.

¶ Jeremy is cast into the pryson, because he prophecyed that ỹ cytye shuld be taken of the kynges of Babylon: by the felde that Jeremye bought at the commaundement of the Lorde, is signyfyed, that the people shulde come agayne to theyr owne possessyon. The people of God are hys seruauntes and he is theyr Lorde. To feare Gods Goddes gyfte, to the entent that synnes maye be eschewed.

A THese wordes spake the Lord vnto Jeremye, in the tenthe yere of Zedekiah kyng of Juda: whyche was the eyghtene yere of Nabuchodonozor, what tyme as the kynge of Babylons hoost layde syege vnto Jerusalē But Jeremye the Prophete laye bounde in the court of the pryson, whyche was in the kyng of Judaes house: wher Zedekiah ỹ kyng of Juda cau
xxxviii.a of thys maner: Thus sayth the Lorde: * Behold, I wyll delyuer thys cytye into the handes of the kynge of Babylon, whych shall take it. As for Zedekiah the kynge of Juda, he shall not be able to escape the Chaldees: but surely he shal come into the handes of the kynge of Babylon whyche shall speake wyth hym mouthe to mouth: and one of them shall loke another in the face. And Zedekiah shalbe caryed vnto Babylon, and there shall he be, vntyll the tyme that I vysyt hym sayth the Lorde. But yf thou takest 25 in hande to fyghte agaynste the Chaldees thou shalt not prospere.

And Jeremye sayde: thus hath the Lord spoken vnto me. Behold, Hananeel, the sonne of Sellum thyne vncles sonne, shall come vnto the and requre the to redeme the lande that lyeth in Leui.xxv.b Anathoth vnto thy selfe * for by reason of kynDeu.xxiii.a red it is thy ryght to redeme it, and bye it oute.
Ruth.iiii.a And Hananeel, myne vncles sonne came to me in the court of the pryson, accordyng to the worde of the Lorde and sayde vnto me: Bye my lande, I praye the: that lyeth in Anathoth in the countreye of Ben Jamin: for by heryptage ỹ hast ryght to lose it out for thy selfe, therfore redeme it. Then I perceyued that thys was the cōmaundement of the Lorde, and so I bought the lande from Hananeel of Anathoth, myne vncles sonne and wayed hym there the money: euen seuen sycles, and ten syluer pence.

I caused hym also to make a wrytynge, and ¶ to seale it: and called recorde therby, and weyed him there the money vpon the weyghtes. So I toke the euydence with the coppe when it was orderly sealed & red it ouer, and I gaue the euydence vnto Baruch the sōne of Neriah, the sōne of Maasiah in ỹ syght of Hananeel, my cosyne, and in the presence of the wytnesses, that be named in the euydence: and before all the Jewes that were therby in the courte of the pryson.

I charged Baruch also before them, saying. The Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel cōmaundeth the, to take this sealed euydence with the coppe: and to laye it in an erthen vessell, that it may longe contynue. For the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israel hath determined that houses feldes, and vynepardes shalbe possessed agayne in this lande. Now when I had delyuered the

Namely, that thou woldest gyue them a lande, that floweth with mylke and hony. * Now when they came therin, and (sayst thou vnto me O Lorde God) and commaundest me, that I shall loose a pece of lande vnto my selfe, & take wytnesses therto: and yet in the meane season the cyty is delyuered into the power of the Chaldees.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me saying: Behold I am the Lord God of all flesh is there any thynge then to harde for me: Therfore thus sayth the Lord: * Behold, I shall dekynge of Babylon, they shall take it.

For the Chaldees shal come and wynne this citie, and set fyre vpon it, and burne it, with the gorgyous houses, in whose parlers they haue made sacrifyce vnto Baal, and powred drynke offerynges vnto straunge goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath. For seynge the chyldren of Israell, and the chyldren of Juda haue wrought wyckednes before me euer from theyr youth vp what haue they els done but prouoked me with the workes of their owne handes, sayth ꝑ Lord.

Or what hath this cytye ben els but a prouokyng of my wrath, euer sence the day that they buylded it, vnto this houre wherin I cast it out of my syght, because of the great blasphemyes of the children of Israel and Juda, whiche they haue done to prouoke me: yee they, their kynges theyr prynces, theyr preastes, theyr prophetes, the men of Juda, & the cytezyns of Jerusalem.

Jere.xi.d * When I stode vpearly, and taught them & instructed them, they turned their backes to me and not their faces. They wolde not heare, to be

They haue buylded hye places for Baal, in the valley of the chyldren of Hennom, to bowe theyr sonnes & doughters vnto Moloch, which I neuer cõmaunded them, neyther came it euer in my thought to make Juda synne with suche abhominacyon. And nowe therfore, thus hath the Lorde God of Israell spoken, concernynge this citie, which (as ye your selues confesse) shal be delyuered into the hande of the kynge of Babylon when it is wonne with the swearde, with

Deu.xxxix.b awaye from me. * Yee, I wyll haue a lust, and Jer.xxxi.e pleasure to do them good, & faythfully to plant them in this lande with my whole herte, & with all my soule. For thus sayth the Lorde: lyke as I haue brought all this great plage vpon this people, euen so wyll I also bryng vpon them all the good that I haue promysed them. And men shall haue theyr possessions in this lande: whereof ye saye now, that it shall neuer be inhabyted of the people, nor of catell: but be delyuered into the handes of the Chaldees. Yee, lande shalbe bought for money, and euydences made therevpon, & sealed before wytnesses in the countrey of Ben Jamin, and rounde about Jerusalem, in the cyties of Juda, in ꝑ cyties that are vpon the mountaynes, & in them that lye beneth: yee, and in ꝑ cyties that are in ꝑ south. Jer.xxix.a spake vnto Jeremye * what tyme as Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Baby lon ẏ all his hostes (out of all the kingdomes that were vnder hys power) and all hys people fought agaynste Jerusalem, and all the cityes ther of. Thus sayth the Lorde God of Is racell: Go, and speake to zedekiah the kyng of Ju da, and tell hym: The Lorde sendeth ẏ thys word Beholde, * I wyll delyuer this cytie into ẏ hand iiii.Reg. xxv.b. of the kynge of Babylon: he shall burne it, and Jerr. xxxi.a and.xxxv.a thou shalt not escape his handes, but shalt be led awaye prysoner, and delyuered into hys power.
Thou shalt loke the kyng of Babylon in the face and he shall speake wyth the mouth to mouth: ẏ then shalt thou goo to Babylon. Yet heare the worde of the Lorde, O zedekiah, ẏ kynge of Ju da: Thus sayth the Lorde vnto the. Thou shalt not be slayne wyth the swearde, but shalt dye in i.re.xxxi.f. peace. * Lyke as thy forefathers the kinges, thy progenytours were brent: so shalt thou be brent also, ẏ in thy mournyng they shall say: Oh Lord
For thus haue I determined, sayth the Lorde.

Then sayd Jeremye the prophete all these 25
wordes vnto zedekiah kyng of Juda in Jerusa lem: what tyme as the kyng of Babylons hoost besieged Jerusalē, ẏ the remnaunt of the cyties:
Namely, Lachis and Azekah, which yet remay ned of the * stronge fensed cyties of Juda. ii.Par.xi.a

These are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy the prophete, when zedekiah was agreed with all ẏ people at Jerusalē, that there shulde be proclaymed * a libertie, so that euery Exod.xxi.a man shulde let his seruaunt ẏ handmayde go Leui.xv.b.f
fre: Hebrue, and Hebruesse, and no Jewe holde Deu.xb.d his brother as a bondman. Nowe as they had consented, all the princes, ẏ all the people which had gathered vnto this agreement, ẏ euery man shulde set at libertye his bonde seruaunt, ẏ bond woman, ẏ no longer to holde them bonde, euen so they were obedyent, and let them go fre. But afterwarde they repented and toke agayne the seruauntes and handmaydens, whom they had let go fre, and so made them bonde agayne.

For the whiche cause the worde of the Lorde C came vnto Jeremye from the Lorde hym selfe, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel.
* I made a couenaunt with your fathers, when Deu.xb.a
I brought them out of Egipt, (that they shulde Exo.xxi.a nomore be bondmen) saying: When seuē yeres are out, euery man shal let his bought seruaunt an Hebrue go fre, yf he haue serued hym syxe ye res. But your fathers obeyed me not, and herke ned not vnto me. As for you, ye were nowe tur ned, and dyd ryght before me in that ye proclay med, euery man to let his neyghbour go fre, and in that ye made a couenaunt before me, in ẏ tem ple that beareth my name. But yet ye haue tur ned your selues agayne, ẏ blasphemed my name
In this, ẏ euery man hath requyred his seruaūt and handmayden agayne, whom ye haue let go quyte and fre, and compelled them to serue you agayne, ẏ to be your bondmen, and bondwomen And therfore thus sayth the Lorde: ye haue not obeyed me, euery man to proclayme fredom vn to his brother and neyghbour: wherfore I wyll call you vnto a fredome, sayth the Lorde: euen vnto the swearde, to the pestilence ẏ to hunger, and wyll make you to be plaged in al the kyng domes of ẏ earth. Yee, those men that haue bro ken my couenaunt, ẏ not kept the wordes of the appoyntmēt which they made before me, when * they hewed ẏ calfe in two, ẏ when there went Gen.xv.d
thorow the two halues therof: the princes of Ju da, the prynces of Jerusalē, the gelded men, the preastes, and all the people of the lande, whiche went thorowe the two sydes of the calfe Those men wyll I gyue into the power of their enemyes, and into the handes of them that fo lowe vpon theyr lyues.

* And theyr dead bodyes shalbe meate for psal.lxxix.a the foules of the ayre, and beastes of ẏ felde. As Jerr.xix.b for zedekiah the kyng of Juda and his princes, I wyll delyuer them into ẏ power of theyr ene myes, and of them that desyre to slay them, and into ẏ hande of ẏ kyng of Babilons hoost, which
* now is departed from you: But thorowe my Jer.xxxvii.c

commaundement (sayth the Lorde) they shall come agayne before this cytye, they shall fyght agaynst it: wynne it, and burne it: Moreouer, I wyll laye the cytyes of Juda so waste, that no man shall dwell therin.

¶ The.xxxv. Chapter.

¶ He propoundeth the obedyence of the Rechabites, & therby confoundeth the pryde of the Jues. The cõmaundement of Jonadab, the father of the Rechabites. He threatneth punyshment vnto the rebellyous Jewes. He promyseth prosperytye vnto the Rechabites, for theyr obedyence.

A THe wordes which the Lorde spake vnto Jeremye, in the raygne of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda are these: Go vnto the house of the 4.kill,xxxv.c. *Rechabites, & call them out, and brynge them to the house of the Lorde into some commodyous place, & gyue them wyne to drynke. Then toke I Jazaniah, the sonne of Jeremy the sonne of Habazinaiah, & his brethren, & all his sonnes, and the whole householde of the Rechabytes: and brought them into the house of the Lorde, into the closet of the chyldren of Hanan, the sonne of Jegedaliah the man of God, whiche was by the closet of the princes, that is aboue the closet of Maasiah the sonne of Selum, whiche is
B the treasurer. And before the sonnes of the kynred of the Rechabites, I set pottes full of wyne and cuppes, and sayd vnto them: Drynke wyne. But they sayd: we wyl drynke no wyne: for Jonadab the sonne of Rechab our father cõmaunded vs, saying: Yee and your sonnes shall neuer Jere.xxxv.b drynke wyne, * buylde no houses, sowe no sede: plant no vynes, yee: ye shall haue no vynyardes but for all your tyme, ye shall dwell in tentes, that ye may lyue long in the lande wherin ye be straungers. Thus haue we obeyed the cõmaundement of Jonadab the sonne of Rechab our father, in all that he hath charged vs, & so we drynke no wyne all our lyfe longe: we nor our wyues our sonnes & our doughters. Neither buylde we any house to dwell therin, we haue also amonge vs neyther vynyardes, nor corne lande to sowe: but we dwell in tentes, we obey, & do accordyng vnto all that Jonadab our father cõmaunded vs.

But now that Nabuchodonosor the kynge
¶ of Babylon came vp into the lande, we sayde: come, let vs go to Jerusalẽ, that we may escape the hoost of the Chaldees and the Assirians, and so we dwell now at Jerusalem. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremye, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: Go and tell the men of Juda and the inhabitours of Jerusalẽ: Wyll ye not be reformed to obey my wordes, sayth the Lorde? The wordes whiche Jonadab the sonne of Rechab cõmaunded his sonnes, that they shuld drynke no wyne, are fast and surely kepte: for vnto this day they drynke no wyne, but obey theyr fathers commaundement. But as for me * I haue stande vp Je.xxxvii.a. and.xxxix.a. early, I haue spoken vnto you, & gyue you earnest warnynge: and yet haue ye not ben obedyent vnto me. Yee, I haue sent my seruauntes all the prophetes vnto you, I rose vp early, & sent you word, saying: O turne you now euery man from his wycked waye: amende your lyues, and go not after straunge goddes to worshyp them:
that ye may contynue in the lande wyche I haue geuen vnto you and youre fathers, but ye wolde neyther heare me, nor folowe me.

The chyldren of Jonadab Rechabs sonne, D haue stedfastly kepte theyre fathers commaundement, that he gaue them, but thys people is not obedyent vnto me. And therfore thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell: Beholde, I wyll bryng vpon Juda, and vpon euerye one that dwelleth in Jerusalem, all the trouble that I haue deuysed agaynst them. * For I haue spoken vnto them, but they wholde not folowe: I Pro.i.c. Esay.lxv.a. Jere.v.b. haue called vnto them, neuertheles, they wolde geue me no answere: Jeremye spake also to the householde of the Rechabythes: Thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell. For so much as ye haue obeyed the commaundement of Jonadab your father, and kepte all his precepttes, and done accordynge vnto all that he hath bydden you. Therfore thus sayth the Lord of hoostes the God of Israell: * Jonadab the sonne of Rechab shall Je.xxxiii.c not fayle, but haue one out of hys stock, to stand alwaye before me.

¶ Baruch wryteth, as Jeremy endyteth the boke of the curses agaynst Juda & Israell. He is sent with the boke vnto the people and readeth it before them all. He is called before the rulers and readeth it before them also. The rulers shew vnto the kyng the wordes of the boke. Iehudi taketh the boke and readeth a lytle of it, and casteth it in the fyre. Ther is another wryte at the commaundement of the Lorde.

IN the fourth yere of Jehoakim the sonne A of Josiah the kyng of Juda, came the worde of the Lord vnto Jeremy, sayinge. * Take a boke, and wryte ther Jere.xxx.a in all the wordes that I haue spoke to the agaynst Israell, agaynst Juda, and agaynste all the people, from the tyme that I beganne for to speake vnto the (in the raygne of Josyah) vnto thys daye. That when the house of Juda heareth of the plage, whych I haue deuysed for them they maye paraduenture * turne euery man from hys Jer.xviii.a wycked waye: that I maye forgeue their offences and synnes. Then dyd Jeremye cal Baruch the sonne of Nerjah * and Baruch wrote in the Jere.xlv.a boke at the mouth of Jeremye all the wordes of the Lorde, wyche he had spoken vnto hym.

And Jeremye cõmaunded Baruch saying: I am in prysion, so that I maye not come into the house of the Lorde: therfore go thou thyther and reade the boke that thou hast written at my mouth Namely, the wordes of the Lorde and reade the B in the Lordes house vpon the fastyng day, that the people, whole Juda, and all they that come oute of the cytyes may heare. Peraduẽture, they wyll pray mykely before the face of the Lorde, & turne euery one from hys wycked waye. For great is the wrath and displeasure, that the Lorde hath taken agaynst thys people. So Baruch the sonne of Neriah dyd accordynge vnto all that Jeremy the prophet cõmaunded him, readyng the wordes of the Lord out of the boke in the Lordes house. And this was done in the fyft yere of Jehoakim the sõne of Josiah kyng of Juda, in the.ix. moneth, when * it was cõmaunded, that all the people of Jeru Josue.ix.a salem shulde faste before the Lorde & they also that were come from the cities of Juda vnto Jerusalẽ.

¶ Then red Baruch the wordes of Jeremye out of the booke wythin the house of the Lord: out of the treasury of Gamariah ꝑ sonne of Saphan the scrybe, whyche is beside the hyer lofte Jer.xxvi.a of the * newe doze of the Lordes house: that all the people myght heare. Now when Micheah ꝑ sonne of Gamariah, the sonne of Saphan hade harde all the wordes of the Lord oute of ꝑ boke he wente downe to the kynges palace into the Scrybes chambers, for ther all the princes were set. Elisama the Scrybe, Dalaiah the sonne of Semei, Elnathan the sonne of Achbor, Gamariah the sonne of Saphan, zedekiah the sonne of Hananiah, wyth all the prynces. And Micheah tolde them all the wordes ꝑ he harde Baruch rcade oute of the boke before the people.

D Then all the prynces sent Jehudi the sonne of Nathaniah, the sonne of Selamiah, the sonne of Chusi, vnto Baruch, sayinge: Take in thyne hande the boke, where oute thou haste red before all the people, and come. So Baruch the sonne of Neriah, toke the boke in hys hande, and came vnto them. And they sayde vnto hym: Sytte downe and rcade the boke, that we maye heare also. So Baruch red that they myght heare.

Nowe when they had harde al the wordes, they were abasshed one vpon another, and sayde vnto Baruch: We wyll certyfye the kynge of all these wordes. And they exampned Baruch, sayinge: tell vs howe dyddeste thou wrytte all these wordes out of hys mouth. Then Baruch answered them: He spake all these wordes vnto me ẅ hys mouth, and I wrote them in the boke.

Then sayde the princes vnto Baruch: Go E thy waye, hyde the with Jeremy, so that noman knowe where ye be: And they went into ꝑ kyng to the courte. But they kepte the booke in the chambre of Elizama the Scrybe, and tolde the kyng all the wordes that he myght heare. So ꝑ kyng sent Jehudi to fet hym the boke whyche he brought out of Elisama the scrybes chambre. And Jehudi red in it that the kynge and all the princes whyche were about hym myghte heare. Nowe the kynge sat in the wynter house, for it was in the .ix. moneth, and ther was a fyre before hym. And when Jehudi had red thre or foure leaues therof, he cut the boke in peces ẅ a penknyfe 1.Mac.ii.c and * caste it into the fyre vpon the harth vntyll ꝑ boke was all brent in the fyre vpon the harth.

F Yet noman was abasshed therof, or rente hys clothes: nether the kynge hym selfe, nor his seruauntes, thoughe they harde all these wordes. Neuertheles, Elnathan, Dalaiah, and Gamariah besoughte the kynge that he wolde not burne the boke: not withstandyng the kynge wold not heare thē. but cōmaunded Jerahmael the sonne of Amelech: Saraiah the sonne of Ezrell, and Selamiah the sonne of Abdiel, to laye handes vpon Baruch the scribe, & vpon Jeremy the prophet: but ꝑ Lorde kept them out of syght After nowe that the kynge had brent the booke and ꝑ sermons which Baruch wrote at ꝑ mouth of Jeremy. The worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremye, sayinge: Take an other booke and wrytte in it all the foresayde sermons, that were wrytten in the fyrst booke, whiche Jehoakym the kynge of Juda hath brente.

And tell Jehoakim the kynge of Juda: thus G sayth the Lorde: thou hast brent the booke, and thoughtest within thy selfe: Why hast ꝑ wrytten therin, that ꝑ kynge of Babylon shall come and make this lande waste: so ꝑ he shall make bothe people and catell to be out of it. Therfore thus the Lorde sayth of Jehoakim the kyng of Juda. * There shall none of his generacyon syt iiii.Regum xxiiii.f. vpon ꝑ throne of Dauid. His dead corse shalbe Jere.xxii.e cast out, that the heate of the daye, & the frost of the nyght may come vpon hym. And I wyl visyte the wyckednes of hym, of his sede, & of his seruauntes. Moreouer, all the cupl that I haue promysed them (though they harde me not) wyl I bryng vpon them, vpon the inhabitours of Jerusalem, & vpon all Juda. Then toke Jeremy another boke, & gaue it Baruch ꝑ Scrybe the sonne of Neriah, which wrote therin out of the mouth of Jeremy, all the sermons that were in the fyrst booke, whiche Jehoakim the kynge of Juda dyd burne. And there were added vnto them many mo sermons then before.

Czedekiah succeded Cononia. He sendeth vnto Jeremye to praye for hym. Jeremy goynge into the lande of Ben Jamyn is taken. He is beaten and put in pryson. He is delyuered by kynge zedekiah.

Zedekiah the sonne of Josiah * whiche A was made kynge thorowe Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon, raygned in the iii.Regum xxiiii.d. lande of Juda, in the steade of Cononiah the sonne of Jehoakim. But neyther he nor his seruauntes, nor the people in the lande wolde obey the wordes of the Lorde, whiche he spake by the prophete Jeremy. * Neuertheles, Jer.xxxi.a zedekiah ꝑ king sent Jehucal the sonne of Selexxxii.a. miah, & Sophoniah ꝑ sone of Maasiah ꝑ preest to the prophete Jeremy, saying: O praye thou vnto the Lorde our God for vs. Now Jeremye walked fre amonge the people at that tyme, and was not put in pryson as yet. * Pharaos hoost Ezr.xlvii.b. also was come out of Egypt: whiche when the Chaldees that besyeged Jerusalem perceyued, they departed from thence. Then came ꝑ worde B of the Lorde vnto the prophet Jeremy, saying: Thus sayth ꝑ Lord God of Israel, this answer shall ye gyue to the kyng of Juda that sent you vnto me for counsayle. * Behold, Pharaos hoste Jere.xlvi.a whiche is come forth to helpe you, shall returne to Egipt into his owne lande: but the Chaldees shall come agayn and fyght agaynst this cytie, wynne it, & set fyre vpon it. For thus sayth the Lorde: disceyue not youre owne myndes, thynkyng on this maner: Tush, ꝑ Chaldees go now theyr waye frō vs. No, they shall not go theyr waye. For though ye had slayne the whole hoste of the Chaldees that besyege you, and euery one of the slayne laye in his tent, yet shulde they stande vp and set fyre vpon this cytye.

Nowe when the hoste of the Chaldees was C broken vp from Jerusalem, for feare of ꝑ Egipcians armye: Jeremye went out of Jerusalem, towarde the lande of Ben Jamin, to gette hym from amonge the people.

And

And when he came vnder Ben Jampns porte there was a porter, called Jeryah, the sonne of Selempah the sonne of *Hananiah, whych fell Je.xxxviii.b vpon hym, and toke hym, sayinge thy mynde is to runne to the Chaldees. Then sayde Jeremy It is not so, I go not to the Chaldees. Neuertheles, Jeryah wolde not beleue hym: but brought Jeremy bound before the prynces. Wherfore the prynces wer angry with Jeremy, & smote hym and layde hym in prison in the house of Jonathas the scrybe. For he was the ruler of the prison. Thus was Jeremye put into the dongeon &
Je.xxxviii.b prison, and so laye there a longe tyme. ¶ Than Zedekyah the kynge sent for hym, and called him and asked hym quyetly in hys owne house, sayinge thynckest thou thys busynes (that nowe is in hande) commeth of the Lorde? Jeremy answered, yee, that it doth: and thou (sayde he) shalt be delyuered into the kynge of Babylons power.

D Moreouer, Jeremye sayde vnto kynge Zedekyah: What haue I offended against the, against thy seruauntes, or agaynst thys people, that ye Je.xxxvii haue put me in prison? *Where ar your prophetes which haue prophecyed vnto you, and sayd: that the kynge of Babylon shulde not comme agaynst you and thys lande? And therfore heare nowe O my Lorde the kynge: let my prayer be accepte before the, and send me no more into the house of Jonathas the scrybe, ꝑ I dye not there. Then Zedekyah the kynge commaunded to put Jeremy in the fore entrye of the prison, and daily to be geuen hym a kake of breade oute of the bakers streate vntyll all the breade in the cytye war eaten vp. Thus Jeremye remayned in the fore entrye in the prison.

The.xxxviii.Chapter.

¶ By the mocyon of ꝑ rulers Jeremy is put into a dongeon. At the requyrt of Abemelech the chamberlayne: the kinge commaundeth Jeremy to be brought forth of the dongeon. Jeremye sheweth the kynge howe he myght escape death.

A Saphatyah the sonne of Mathan, Godoliah the sonne of Phashur, Jucal ꝑ sone of Semelyah, and Pashur the sonne of Melchyah perceaued the wordes, that Jeremy had spoken vnto all the people: namelye on thys maner, Thus sayeth the Lorde, *Who Jere. xxi.b & xxxvii.a. so remayneth in thys cytye, shall perysshe, eyther wyth the swearde, wyth hunger or wyth pestylence: But who so falleth vnto ꝑ Chaldees, shal escape, wynnyng hys soule for a praye, and shal
Jere.xxxii.a lyue, *For thus sayth the Lorde: Thys cytye (no doubte) must be delyuered into the power of the kynge of Babylon, and he shall wynne it. Then sayde the prynces vnto the kynge: Syr we beseche you let thys man be put to death, For thus he discourageth the handes of the soudyers that be in thys cytye, and the handes of all the people whē he speaketh such wordes vnto them. This man verely laboureth not for peace of the people but myschefe, Zedekyas the kynge answered & B sayde: loo, he is in youre handes, for the kynge maye denye you nothynge. Then toke they Jeremye, and cast hym into the dongion of Melchiah the sonne of Amelech that dwelte in ꝑ fore entry of the prison: And they let downe Jeremy wyth coardes into the dongyon, where there was no water but myre. So Jeremye stacke fast in the myre. Nowe when Abemelech ꝑ Moryan, being a chamberlayne in the kynges courte, vnderstod that they had cast Jeremye into the dongyon, he wente oute of the kynges house and spake to the kynge, (whych then sat vnder the porte of Ben-Jampn) these wordes: my Lord the kyng, wherias these men medle wyth Jeremy the prophete, C they do hym wronge, Namely in that they haue put him in prison, ther to dye of hunger, for ther is no more breade in the cytye. Then the kynge commaunded Abemelech the Moryan and sayd Take from hence .xxx. men whom thou wylte, & drawe vp Jeremy the prophet out of the donge on before he dye, So Abemelech tooke the men wyth hym, and went to the house of the kynge: and there vnder the treasury he gat olde ragges and worne cloutes, and let them down by a coarde into the dongeon to Jeremye.

And Abemeleche the Moryan sayde vnto the prophte Jeremye: O put these ragges and D cloutes vnder thyne arme holes, betwyxte them and the coardes: and Jeremye dyd so, So they drewe vp Jeremy with coardes, and toke hym out of the dongeon, and he remayned in the fore entrye of the prison. Then *Zedekiah the kyng Je.xxxvi.c sent, and cauled Jeremye the prophet to be called vnto hym, into the thyrde entrye that is in the house of the Lorde. And the kynge sayd vnto Jeremy: I wyll aske the somwhat, but hyde nothyng fro me. Then Jeremy answered Zedekiah: Yf I be playne vnto the, thou wylte cause me to suffre death: Yf I gyue the counsayl, thou wylte not folowe me. So the kynge sware an oth secretly vnto Jeremy, sayinge: As trulye as the Lorde lyueth, that made vs these soules, I wyll not slaye the, nor gyue the into the handes of them that seke after thy lyfe.

Then sayde Jeremye vnto Zedekiah: Thus C sayth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel. * Yf case be, that thou wylte go forth vnto the Je.xxxviii kyng of Babylons princes, thou shalt saue thy lyfe, and this cytie shall not be brent: yea, bothe thou and thy housholde shall escape wyth youre lyues. But if thou wylt not go forth to ꝑ kynge of Babylons princes, then shall this cytie be delyuered into the handes of the Chaldees, whiche shall set fyre vpon it, and thou shalt not be able to escape them. And Zedekiah sayde vnto Jeremy: I am afrayed for the Jewes that are fledde vnto the Chaldees, lest I come in theyr handes, and so they to haue me in derision.

But Jeremye answered: No, they shall not betraye the: O herken vnto the voyce of ꝑ Lord (I beseche the) which I speake vnto the so shalt F thou be wel and saue thy lyfe. But yf thou wilt not go forth, ꝑ Lord hath tolde me this playnly Beholde, all the women that are lefte in ꝑ kyng of Judaes house, shalbe led forth out to ꝑ kynge of Babylons prynces. And they shall saye, that thou art discepued: and the men in whome thou dydest put thy truste haue gotten the vnder, and set thy feet fast in the myre, and gone theyr way from the. Therfore all thy wyues with theyr chyldren shall they lede forth vnto the Chaldees and thou shalt not escape theyr hãdes, but shalte be the kynge of Babylons prysoner: and thys cytye shalt thou cause to be brent. Then sayd zedekyah vnto Jeremy: loke that nobodye knowe of these wordes, and thou shalte not dye. But yf the prynces perceaue that I haue talked wyth ỹ and comme vnto the, sayinge: O speake, what sayde the kynge to the? hyde it not from vs, and G we wyl not put the todeathe. Tel vs (we praye the) what sayde the kyng to ỹ? Se thou geue thẽ thys answer: I haue humbly besought the king that he wyll let me lye no more in Jehonathans house, that I dye not ther. Then came al the prynces vnto Jeremy, and asked hym. And he tolde them, after the maner as the kynge badde hym. Then they helde theyr peace and let hym alone: for they perceaued nothynge * So Jeremy abod Jer.xxxix.c styll in the foore entrye of the pryson, vntyll the daye that Jerusalem was wonne.

¶ The.xxxix.Chapter

¶ Nabuchodonozor besegeth Jerusalem, zedekyah flyeth. He is taken of the Chaldees. Hys sonnes are slayne, His eyes are thrust out. Jeremy is prouided for. Abemelech is deliuered frõ captyuite, because of the confidence that he had in God.

Jer.xxxii.a
.xxi.xxxvii.a
IN the * nyne yeare of zedekyah kynge of Juda, in the tenth moneth, came Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babylon and all hys host, and besieged Jerusalem, and fought agaynste it, And in the. xi. yeare of zedekiah in the. iiii. moneth, the ix. daye of the moneth, he brake into the cytye) Then all the prynces of the kynge of Babylon came in, and satte them downe vnder the porte Neregel, Sarezer, Samgarnebo, Sarechachym, Rabsarys, Neregell, Sarezer, Rabmag wyth all the other prynces of the kynge of Babylon * And when zedekyah the kynge of Ju ix.xxxiii.a, da wyth hys souldyers sawthem, they fled, and departed out of the cytye by nyght, thorowe the kynges garden, and thorowe the port that is betwene the two walles, and so they went toward the wyldernes.

But the Chaldees hoost folowed faste after
B them, and toke zedekyah in the felde of Jerycho, and brought hym prysoner to Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babilon vnto Reblath, that lyeth in the land of Hemath, where he gaue iudgement vpon hym. So the kynge of Babylon caused ỹ chyldren of zedekyah and al ỹ nobles of Juda to be slayne before hys face at Reblath. And made zedekyas eyes to be put out, and bounde hym wt two chaynes, and sent hym to Babylon.

xxxii.xxxviii.d ges palace, wyth the other houses of the people, Jere.xxxii.d and brake downe the walles of Jerusalem. As for the remnaunte of the people that were in the citie: and such as were come to helpe them (what soeuer was lefte of the cõmon sorte) Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne carped them to Babilon But Nabuzaradan the chefe captaine let the rascall people (and those that had nothynge) dwell styll in the lande of Juda, and gaue them vynepardes and cornefeldes at the same tyme. Nabuchodonozor also the kynge of Babylon gaue Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne a charge concerning Jeremy sayinge: take, and cherysh hym and make much of hym, se thou do hym no harme but intreate hym after hys owne desyre. D

So Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne, Nabusazban Rabsares, Nergal, Sarezar, Rabmag and all the kynge of Babylons Lordes sente for Jerempe, * and caused hym to be fet oute of the fore entrye of the pryson, and cõmytted hym vnto Godoliah the sõne of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan: that he shulde carye hym home: * and so he dwelte amonge the people. Nowe whyle Jeremy laye yet bounde in the fore entrye of the prysõn, the worde of the Lorde came vnto hym saying: Go and tel Abemelech the Mozian. Thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell: Beholde the cruel and sharpe plage that I haue deuysed for thys cytye, wyll I bryng vpon them that thou shalt se it, but I wyll delyuer the (sayeth the Lorde) and thou shalte not come in ỹ handes of those men whom thou feareste. All the Jewes (I saye) returned out of all places where they were fled vnto, and came into the lande of Juda to Godoliah vnto Mizpa, and gathered wyne and other frutes, and that very much.

Moreouer Johanan the sonne of Careah and all the captaynes of the hoste that were scatered on euery syde in the lande, came to Godolyah in Mizpa, and saye vnto hym: Knowest thou not that Baallis the kynge of the Ammonites hath sent Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah to slay the? But Godolyah the sonne of Ahicam beleued the not. Then sayde Johanan the sonne of Careah vnto Godolyah in Mizpa these wordes secretly Let me go I praye the and I wyll slay Ismael ꝑ sonne of Nathanyah, so that no body shal know it. Wherfore wyll he kyl the, that all the Jewes wyth resorte vnto the, myght be scatered, and the remnaunt in Juda perysh? And Godolyah ꝑ sonne of Ahycam sayde vnto Johanan the sonne of Careah. Thou shalt not do it, for they are but lyes, that thou sayest of Ismael.

A IIII.re.fyb.a

IT in the seuenth moneth it happened, * that Ismael the sonne of Nathanyah the sonne of Elisama (one of the kynges bloud) came wyth thē that were greatest aboute the kyng and ten men that were swozne wyth hym: vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam to Mizpa, & they dyd eate to gether. And Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah with those tenne men that were swozne to hym, starte vp, and smote Godoliah the sonne of Ahycam the sonne of Saphā wyth the swerd and slewe hym, whō the kynge of Babylon had made gouernour of the lande. Ismael also slew all the Jewes that were with Godoliah at Mizpa & all the Chaldees that he founde there wapen tynge vpon hym & those that were able to fyght he slewe wyth hym.

The nexte daye after that he had slayne Godolyah (the matter was yet vnknowen) & there came certayne men from Sychem, from Syloh and Samaria, to ꝑ nombre of .lxxx. whych had shauen theyr beardes, rente theyr clothes, & were all beaupe, bryngynge meate offerynges and incence in theyr handes to offre it in the house of ꝑ Lord. And Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah wēt forth of Mizpa * weppynge, to mete them. Now when he met them, he sayde: Go youre waye to Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam. And when they came into the myddest of the cytye, Ismaell the sonne of Nathaniah (with thē that were swozne vnto hym) slewe them, euen at the myddest of ꝑ pyt. Among these foure score men there were ten that sayde vnto Ismael: Oh, slay vs not for we haue yet great treasur in the feld of wheat, barlye, oyle, and honye. Eccle.xli.e

So he spared them, and slewe them not wyth theyr brethren. Nowe the * pyt wherein Ismael dyd cast the deade bodyes of the men (whome he slewe because of Godoliah) had kynge Aza caused to be made for feare of Baaza the kyng of Israel, & the same pyt dyd Ismael fyll wyth slayne men. As for the remnaunt of the people, the kynges doughters and all the people that were yet lefte at Mizpa vpon whom * Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne had madde Godolyah the sonne of Ahicam gouernoure: Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah caryed them awaye prysoners towarde the Ammonytes. But when Johanan the sonne of Careah, and all they whych had bene captaynes ouer the kynges hoost wyth hym, herde of all wyckednes that Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had done, * they toke theyr companions, & went out for to fyght wyth Ismael ꝑ sonne of Nathaniah, and founde hym by the great waters that are in Gybeon. Nowe when all the people whō Ismael led captyue, sawe Johanan the sonne of Careah, and all the other captaynes of the host, they were glad. So all the people ꝑ Ismael had caryed away frō Mizpa, were brought agayne

D And when they returned, they came to Johanan the sonne of Careah. But Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, fled from Johanan wyth .viii. of hys swozne companyons, and went to the Ammonites. Then Johanan the sonne of Careah & all the captaynes of the hoost, that were wt him toke all the remnaunt of the people: whome Ismael the sonne of Nathanyah had led awaye. (When he had slayne Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam) whome they also had reserued frome hym: fyghtynge men, women and chyldren, and Gelded men, whom they brought agayne from Gybeon & went from thence and sat them downe at Geruth Canaan whych lyeth beside Bethlem, * that they myght go into Egypte for feare of the Chaldees: of whome they were afrayd, because that Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had slayne Godolyah Ahycams sonne * whome the kynge of Babylon hath made gouernour in the lande. ¶ The captaynes aske counsayle of Jeremye what they ought to doo. Jeremye admonyssheth the remnaunte of the people not to go into Egypte.

So all

A Then all the captaynes, and Johanan ꝑ sonne of Careah: Jezaniah the sonne of Osiah, came wyth al ꝑ people frō the lest vnto the most, and sayde vn

Then Jeremy the prophet sayde vnto them, I haue heard you. Beholde, I wyll pray vnto God youre lord as ye haue requyred me: and loke what answer the Lorde geueth you, I shall certyfy you therof and kepe nothynge backe frome you. And they *Josue.i.c 1.Mac.ii.b Jere.xlii.a sayde vnto Jeremye, * The Lorde of truth and faythfulnes be oure recorde, that we wyll do all that the Lorde thy God commaundeth vs, whether it be good or euel. We wyll herken vnto the voyce of the Lorde God, to whom we sende the that we maye prospere, when we haue followed the voyce of the Lorde oure God.

B And after tenne dayes came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremye. Then called he Johanan the sonne of Careah, and al the captaynes of the people from the lest to the moost, and sayde vnto them, Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel vnto whome ye sente me to laye for the poure prayers
Jere.xxi.b before hym: * Yf ye wyll dwell in thys lande, I shall buylde you vp, and not breake you downe I shall plante you, and not roote you out: for I repente, as concernynge the trouble that I haue done vnto you: Fear not the kyng of Babilon of whome ye stande in awe: Do, be not afrayde of hym sayth the Lorde: for I wyl be with you, to healpe you, and delyuer you frome hys hande: I wyll pardon you I wyll haue mercye vpon you, and cause hym to pytye you, and brynge you agayne into youre owne lande.

For thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes the God
D of Israel, lyke as my wrath and indygnacyon is moued agaynst the inhabytours of Jerusalem: so shall my displeasure be kyndled agaynst you also, yf ye go into Egypte, and there ye shalbe reuyled, abhorred: brought to shame and confusyon: & as for thys place ye shal neuer se it more,
The Lorde forbyd deth you (O ye remnaunte of Juda) that ye shal not go into Egypte,

And forget not that I haue warned you earnestly thys daye, for ye haue dyscembled wyth me: * For ye sent me vnto the Lorde youre God Jere.xlii.a and sayde: O praye thou the Lorde our God for vs: and loke what answere the Lorde oure God geueth the, that brynge vs agayne and we shal do therafter. Nowe haue I shewed and declared vnto you, but you haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lord your God, for the whych cause he hath sent me vnto you.

¶ The.xliii.Chapter

¶ Johanan carieth the remnaunt of the people into Egypt contrary to the mynde of Jeremy. Jeremy prophecyeth the destruccion of Egypte.

Nowe when Jeremy had ended al the A wordes of the Lorde hys God: vnto the people whych to declare ꝑ Lorde they? God had sent him to them (euē all these wordes, I saye) Azaryah ꝑ sonne of Oziah & Johanan the sonne of Careah wyth all the stubbourne persons, sayde vnto Jeremy: * Thou lyest, The Lorde oure God hathe Jere.xlii.a not sent the to speake vnto vs, that we shuld not go into Egypte, and dwel there. But Baruche the sonne of Neryah prouoketh the agaynst vs, that he myghte brynge vs into the captyuyte of the Caldees, that they myght slaye vs, and cary vs awaye prysoners vnto Babylon.

So Johanan the sonne of Careah, and al the B captaynes of the hoost, and all the people folowed not the commaundement of the Lorde: Namelye, to dwell in the lande of Juda. But Johanan the sonne of Careah, and al the captaynes of the hoost, caryed awaye all the remnaunte in Juda, * that were come to gether agayne frome all the *Jer.xli.c Heathen (among whom they had bene scatered) to dwell in the lande of Juda, Men, wemen, chyldren, the kynges daughters: all those that Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne had lefte wyth Godolyah the sonne of Ahykam, the sonne of Saphan. They caryed away also the prophet Jeremye. Baruch the sonne of Neryah, and so came into Egypte: for they were not obedyente vnto the commaundemente of God. Thus came they to Taphnis. C

And in Taphnis the worde of the Lorde happened vnto Jeremye, sayinge: Take greate stones in thyne hande, and hyde them in the brycke wall, vnder the doore of Pharaos house in Taphnis that all the men of Juda maye se and saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lord of hoostes ꝑ God of Israel. * Beholde, I wyll sende & cal for Na- Jere.xlvi.a buchodonosor the kyng of Babylon my seruaūt and wyll set hys seate vpon these stoones that I haue hyd, and he shal spreade hys tente ouer them

And when he commeth, he shall smyte the land D of Egypte: some wyth slaughter, some with prysonment: and some wyth the sweard. He shall set fyre vpon the temples of ꝑ Egyptyans Godes des, and burne them vp, and take them selues prisoners. Moreouer, he shall araye hym selfe with the lande of Egypte, lyke as a shepherde putteth on his cote, and shall departe his waye from thẽce in peace. The pyllers also of the temple of the sunne that is in Egypt, shal he breake in peces, and burne the temples of the Egyptians goddes.

¶ He reproueth the people for theyr ydolatry. They that set lyght by the threatenyng of the Lorde are chastened. The destruction of Egypt and the Jewes therin is prophecyed.

THis is the worde that was shewed to Jeremy cõcerning al the Jewes: which dwell in Egypt: at Migdol at Taphnis, at Noph, & in the land of Patures. Thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: Ye haue sene al the misery that I haue brought vpon Jerusalem, & vpon the cyties of Juda: so that this daye they are desolate, and noman dwellynge therein: and that bycause of the greate blasphemyes whiche they committed, to prouoke me vnto angre. In that they wente backe to do sacrifyce and worshyp vnto straunge goddes: whome neyther ye nor your fathers haue knowẽ. Howbeit, I sent vnto them my seruauntes al the prophetes. * I rose vp early, I sent vnto them, and gaue them warnyng. O do not suche abhominable thinges & thynges ỹ I hate. But they wolde not folowe nor herken to turne from theyr wickednes, and to do nomore sacrifyces vnto straunge goddes.

Wherfore myne indignatiõ and wrath was kyndled, and it brent vp the cyties of Juda, the feldes with the stretes of Jerusalẽ, so that they were made waste and desolate, as it is come to passe this daye. Nowe therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: Howe happe neth it, that ye do so great euyll vnto your owne soules: thus to destroye the men & women: children and babes of Juda? so that none of you is lefte, because ye prouoke me vnto wrathe wyth the workes of your owne hãdes: When ye offre vnto straunge Goddes in the lande of Egypte, where as ye be gone to dwell. That ye myghte vtterly perysshe, and that ye myghte be reuyled and shamefully intreated of all nacyons. Or haue ye now forgotten the wyckednes of youre forefathers, the wyckednes of the kynges of Juda and their wiues, the wickednes that ye your selues and your wyues haue done in the lãde of Juda, in the citye, & in the stretes of Jerusalem?

Yet are ye not sory vnto thys daye, ye feare not, neyther walke ye in my lawe and in my commaundementes, that I haue geuen vnto you & your forefathers.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes: the God of Israell: I am stedfastly aduised and determined to punysshe you, and to rote out all Juda. As for the remnaunte of Juda, that purposly went into Egypte, there to dwell, I wyll take thém, *and they shall al be destroyed. In the land of Egypte shal they perisshe, beinge consumed wyth the swearde and with hunger. For from the least vnto the most, they shall perisshe with the swearde and with hunger. Moreouer, they shalbe reuiled, abhorred, shamed, and cõfounded: For I wyll vysyt them that dwell in Egypte, * as I haue vysyted Jerusalem, wyth the swearde, wyth hunger, and wyth pestylence So that none of the remnaunt of Juda, whych are gone to dwel in Egypte, shalbe left to come agayne into the lande of Juda although they thyncke to come thether agayne, & to dwel there For noone shall come agayne, but suche as are fled awaye.

Then all the men whyche knewe that theyr wyues had offered vnto straunge goddes, and a greate sorte of wyues that stoode there, yee, and all the people that dwelte therein Egypte in the cytye of Patures, answered Jeremy, and sayde: As for the wordes ỹ thou hast spoke vntous: in the name of the Lorde, we wyll in no wyse heare them, but what soeuer goeth oute of oure owne mouth, that we wyll doo. We wyll do sacrifyce and offer oblacyons vnto the quene of heauen. * lyke as we and oure forefathers, oure kynges and oure heades haue done in the cytyes of Juda, and in the stretes and feeldes of Jerusalem. For then had we plenteousnes of vytayles then were we in prosperytye and no myshappe came vpon vs.

Jere.xliii.b

* But sence we lefte to burne incence: and to do sacrifyce vnto the quene of heauen, we haue had scarcenes of all thynges, and perysshe wyth swearde, and hunger. Laste of all: when we women dyd sacrifyce and offered vnto the quene of heauen, dyd we make her cakes and power vnto her drynckofferynges, euen to that ymage dyd we sacrifyce and serue, wythout oure husbandes wyttes.

* Exech.i.b

Then sayde Jeremy vnto al the people to the men to the wemen, and to all the folcke whyche had geuen hym that answere, dyd not the Lorde remembre the sacrifyces that ye, youre forefathers, your kynges and rulers, whych al the people haue offered in the cytyes of Juda, in the stretes and lande of Jerusalem: and hath he not consydered thys in hys mynde? Insomuche that the Lorde myghte no longer suffre the wyckednesse of youre inuencyons, and the abhominable thinges whyche ye dyd? * Is not your lande desolate and voyde: yee, abhorred and accursed, so that no man dwellerh therein anye more, as it is come passe thys daye?

Esay.i.c

* Dyd not all thys happen vnto you, because ye made suche sacrifyces to ydolles, and synned agaynst the Lorde? * Ye haue not folowed hys voyce, to walke in hys lawe, in hys ordinaunces and statutes.

The cry of them shall make a noyse, as the blaste of a trompet. For they shall enter in wyth theyr hoostes, and come wythe axes, as it were hewers dowe of wood. And they shall cut dowe her wood, sayeth the Lord: They shalbe innumerable: for they shalbe moze in nombze thē ꝑ gresshoppers, so that no man shalbe able to tel them. The daughter of Egypte is confounded, and delyuered into the handes of the people of ꝑ Nozth.

Thus sayeth the Lozde of hoostes the God of Israell. Beholde, I wyll vysit that restles people of Alexandzya, Pharao and Egypte, yee, both theyze goddes and theyr kynges: euen Pharao, and all them that put theyr trust in him. Yee I wyll delyuere them into the handes of those, that seke after theyr lyues. Namely into the power of Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babylon, and into the power of his seruauntes And after all these thynges it shalbe inhabyted as afore tyme, sayeth the Lozde.

But be not thou afrayede (O my seruaunte Jacob) feare not thou O Israell. For lo, I wyll helpe the from farre, and thy sede from the lande of theyr captyuyte. Jacob also shall come agyne and be in reste: he shall prospere and noman shall do hym harme. Feare thou not (O Jacob my seruaunte) sayeth the Lozde for I am wyth the: and wyll destroye all nacyons, among whome I haue scatered the. Neuertheles, I wyll not consume the: but chasten the and correcte the, yee, ꝑ that wythe dyscrecyon neyther wyll I spare the as one that were fauteles.

¶ The wozde of the Lozde agaynst the Philystynes.

These are the wozdes, that the Lozd spake vnto Jeremye the prophete, agaynst the Philystynes, before that Pharao smote the cyty of Azah. Thus sayeth the Lozde: Beholde, there shall waters ryse oute of the Nozth: and shall growe to a greate floude runnynge ouer and couerynge the lande, the cytyes and the that dwell therin.

And the men shall crye, and all they ꝑ dwell in the lande, shall mourne at the noyse and stamppynge of theyr stronge barbed hozses, at the shakynge of theyr charettes and at the rumbleng of ꝑ wheles. The fathers shall not loke to theyze chyldzen, so feble and wery shall theyr handes be at ꝑ same tyme when he shal be ther, to destroye the whole lande of the Philistynes. He shall make waste bothe Tyrus, Sidon, and all other that are swozne vnto them.

For the Lozde wyl destroye the Philistines, the remnaunt of the yle of Caphtor, Baldnes is come vpon Azah, Ascalon wyth other valleys shall kepe her peace.

Howe longe wylte thou slepe, O thou swerd of the Lozde? When wylte thou cease? Turne agayne into thy swete rest, and leaue of. But how can it cease, when the Lozde hym selfe hathe geuen hym a charge agaynste Ascalon and raysed it vp agaynste the cytyes of the see coastes?

¶ The wozde of the Lozde agaynst the Moabytes.

Thus sayeth the Lozde of hoostes the God of Israel against ꝑ Moab: wo be to the cityе of Nebo: for it is laid waste, brought to cōfusion: and Karithiari takē. Misgab is brought to shame & afrayde: Moab can boast nomoze of Heshebō for they haue deuysed agaynst it. Come shal they say, let vs rote thē out, that they may be nomoze amonge the nombze of the Gentyles and that the madmen may nomoze be toughte vpon: & the swearde shal persecute the. A voice shall crye from Hozanaim: with great wasting and destruccyon is Moab made desolate.

Esay.xv.a. Jere.xlvi.a. Ezec.xxv.b. Soph.ii.b

Chyldzen coulde tel of the crye therof. For at the goyng vp vnto Luyth, he arose with lamentacion and mourning, and downe towarde Horanaim, they hearde a cruel and deadly crie. Get you away, saue your liues, and be like vnto the heath in the wyldernes. * For because thou hast trusted in thyne owne wozckes and treasure, thou shalt be taken. Chamos with his preastes and princes shall goo away into captiuyte.

Esay.xl.b. Jere.xlviii.b Ezec.xxv.b

The destroyer shall come vppon all cytyes none shal escape. The valleys shalbe destroied, and the feldes shalbe layed wast, lyke as the Lozd hath spoken.

Gyue wynges vnto Moab, that she get her awaye spedyly: for her cytyes shall be made so desolate, that no man shall dwell therin.

Cursed be he that doth ꝑ wozke of the Lozde negligently, and cursed be he that kepeth backe his * swearde from shedynge of bloude.

Jere.xlviii

Moab hath euer ben ryche and carcles from her youth vp, she hath sytten and taken her ease with her treasure. She was neuer yet put out of one vessell into another (ꝑ is) she neuer went away into captiuitte, therfoze her sauce remayneth, and her sauour is not yet chaunged.

But lo, the tyme commeth sayth the Lozde, that I shall sende her trussers to trusse her vp, which shall remoue her from her dwellyng: and empty her vesselles, & breake her wyne pottes. And Moab shall be ashamed of Chamos, lyke as Israel was ashamed of * Bethel, wherin she put her trust: Wherfoze do ye thynke thus, we are myghty and stronge men of warre? Moab is destroyed: and her cyties brent vp: her chosen yongmen be slayne, sayth ꝑ kyng, whose name is the Lozd of hoostes. The destruction of Moab cōmeth on a pace, and her fall is at hande.

All her neyghbours shal mourne for her, and all they that knowe her name, shall say, O how happeneth it, that the strong staffe, & the goodly rodde is thus brokē? And thou doughter Dibō come downe from thy glozy, and syt in thyrste. For he that destroyeth Moab, shall come vp to the also, & breake downe thy stronge holdes.

And thou that dwellest in Aroer, get the to the strete, & loke aboute the, aske them that are fled and escaped, and say: what thyng is happened? Oh, Moab is confounded and ouercome.

Mourne and crye, tell it out at Arnon, that Moab is destroyed. For iudgement shall come vpon the playne lande. Namely: vpon Holon, and Jahazah, vpon Mephaath & Dibon: vpon

Nabo

Nabo, and the house of Deblathaim vpon Cariathiarim and vpon the house Gamull, vppon the house Moan, and Carpothe vpon Bozrah, and all the cities in the lande of Moab whether they lye farre oz neare.

The hozne of Moab is smytten dowbne and her arme bzoken, sayeth the Lozde. Make her dzoncken, foz she magnyfyed herselfe aboue the Lozde, that men may clap theyz handes at her vomite, and ỹ she also may be laughed to scozne O Israell, shalt thou not laugh hym to scozne, when he is taken among theues. *Yee, because of thy wozdes that thou haste spoken agaynst hym ỹ shalt be dzyuē away. Ye Moabites shall leaue the cities, & dwel in rockes of stone and be come lyke doues ỹ make theyz nestes in holes.

E *As foz Moabs pzyde, we haue heard (for: she is very hye minded. I knowe her stoutnesse, her bostynge, her arogancye, and the pzyde of her stomacke, sayeth the Lozd, I know (sayeth the Lozde) her indignacyon, she doth not rycht, her wozdes are lyes, and they haue not delt truly. Therfoz shall there mournynge be made foz Moab, and euery man shall crye foz Moabs sake: a lamentacyon shalbe made to the men that stande vpon the wall. So wyll I mourne foz the also, O Jaser, and foz the, O thou vyneyarde of Sabmah. Thy vine bzaunches shal come ouer the see, and the bzaunches of Jazer, but vnto the see: the destroyer shall bzeake into thy haruest and grapegatherynge: myrthe and chere shall be taken awaye frome the tymbzye felde, and from the hole lande of Moab.

F There shalbe no swete wyne in the pzesse, the treader shall haue no stomacke to crye: yea, there be none to cry vnto hym: which afoze tyme wer herde frō Hezebon to Cleale and Jahaz, whiche lyfted vp theyz voyce from zoar vnto Hozonaim, the bullocke of thze yere olde shall go mourning. The waters also of Nemrim shalbe dzyed vp. Wozeouer, I wyll make Moab cease, sayth the Lozde, from the offerynges and censyng ỹ she hath made vnto her Goddes in hygh places. Wherfoz my hert mourneth foz Moab, lyke a croude playing an heuy song: and foz the mens sake of the bzyckwall my hert mourneth also: euen as a pype that pypeth a doleful song: foz they shalbe very fewe, and destroyed.

*All heedes shalbe shauen, and all beerdes clypped of, all handes bounde, & loynes gyrded about with sackcloth. Upō all the house toppes and stretes of Moab there shalbe lamentable mournyng: Foz I wyll bzeake Moab lyke an vnpzofytable vessell, sayth the Lozde: O how is she destroied! O how mourneth she! O howe doth Moab hange downe her heed, and is ashamed! Thus shall Moab be a laughynge stocke, and had in derysion of all them that be rounde about her. *Foz thus sayth the Lozd: Behold: the enemy shall come flytinge as an Egle: and spzed his wynges vpō Moab. They shal clyme ouer the walles, and wyn the stronge holdes. Then the myghtye mens hertes in Moab shalbe lyke ỹ herte of a womā trauelyng with child

And Moab shalbe made so desolate that she shall nomoze be a people bycause she hath set vp her selfe agaynst the Lozde. *Feare, pyt & snare shall come vpon the, O Moab, sayth the Lozde. Whoso escapeth the feare shall fall in the pyt, & whoso getteth out of the pyt shalbe taken in the snare. Foz I wyll bzynge a yeare of vysytation vpon Moab, sayth the Lozde. They that are able to flye, shall stande vnder the shadowe of Hesebon: Foz there shall go a fyze oute of Hesebon, and a flame from Syon, and shall burne vp that proude people of Moab, and the top of those sedycyous chyldzen.

Wo be vnto the, O Moab, foz thou people of Chamos shalt perysh. Yea, thy sōnes & doughters shalbe led away captyue. Yet at the laste, wyll I bzynge Moab out of captyuytie agayne sayeth the Lozde. Thus farre is of the plage of Moab.

¶ The wozde the Lozde agaynste the Ammonytes, agaynste the Idumea, Damascus, Cedar and Elam.

A Sconcernynge the *Ammonytes, thus the Lozde sayth: Hath Israell no chyldzen, oz is he wythoute an heyze: Why hath youre kynge then taken Gad in? Wherfoze doeth hys people dwel in his cytyes? Beholde therfoze, the tyme commeth, sayth the Lozde: that I wyll bzynge a noyse of warre into Rabah of the Ammonites: and it shal be layed on a desolate heape and her cyties bzent vp: and the Israelytes shalbe lozdes ouer those that had them in possessyon afoze, sayth the Lozd Hesebon shall mourne: foz Ay shalbe rated out of the grounde, sayth the Lozde.

The cytyes of Rabah shal crye out, and gyrd them selues wyth sackecloth, they shall mourne. and rūne about the walles: foz theyz kynge shall be led awaye pzysoner: yea, hys pzestes and pzinces wyth hym.

Wherfoze trustest thou in the valleye? they valley hath flowed away, O thou fearce doughter, and thynkest thou that thou arte so safe, by reason of thy treasure, that no man shall come to the? Beholde, I wyll bzynge a feare vpon the sayth the Lozde God of hoostes, frome all those that be about the: so that ye shalbe scatred euery man from an other, and no man shall gather thē togyther agayne that be fled. But after that I wyll bzynge the Ammonytes also oute of captyuytye agayne.

*Upon the Edomytes hath the Lozde of hoostes spoken on thys maner: Is ther nomoze wisdome in Theman? Is there nomoze good counsayle amonge hys people? Is theyz wysdome then tourned clene to nought? Get you hence, tourne youre backes, crepe downe into the depe, O ye cytyzens of Dedan.

Foz I wyll bzynge destructyon vpon Esau: yea, & the day of hys vysytacyon. If the grape gatherers came vpon the, shoulde they not leue some grapes? If the nyght robbers came vpon the shuld they not take so moch as they thought were ynoughe?

But I wyll make Esau bare, and dyscouere hys secretes, so that he shall not be hable to hyde them.

Neuertheles the portion of Jacob is none C suche: but he that made al thynges, whose name is the Lorde of hoostes, he is the rodde of hys enheritaunce. Thou hast bene myne hammer and weapens for warre: for with the haue I broken the people in peces: & with the haue I destroyed kyngdomes. Thorow the I haue beatẽ to poulder horse and horseman, yea, the charrettes and such as sat vpõ them. Thorowe the I haue broken man and woman, olde and ponge, bacheler and mayden. Thorow the I haue destroyed the shepeherde and his flocke, the husbandman and hys catel, the prynces and the rulers. Therfore wyl I rewarde the cytie of Babylon, and al her cytezens, the Chaldees wyth al the euel whyche they haue done vnto Sion: yea, that ye your selues shal se it, sayeth the Lorde: Behold, I come vpon the, thou noysome hyll, sayeth the Lorde: thou that destroyest al lãdes: I wyl stretche out my hande ouer the, and cast the downe from the stony rockes: and wyl make the a brente hyl: so that neither corner stones, nor pinacles, nor foũdacions of stones shalbe taken any more out of the, but wast and desolate shalt thou lye for euermore, sayeth the Lorde.

Set vp a tokẽ in the lande: blowe the trõpettes amonge the Heythen: prouoke the nacyons agaynest her, call the kyngedomes of Ararat, Menni: & Ascanes agaynste her: Set the prince agaynst her, brynge as greate a sorte of teryble horses agaynste her: as if they were greshoppes Prepare agaynste thē the people of the Medes wyth theyr kynges, princes, and al the chefe rulers: yee, & the whole lande that is vnder hym.

The lande also shal shake and be afrayde whē the deuice of the Lorde shal come forth agaynst Babylon: to make the land of Babilon so wast that no man shall dwell anye more therin. The worthyes of Babylon shall leaue the batayle and kepe them selues in stronge holdes, theyr strength hath fayled them, they shalbe lyke wemen. Theyr dwellynge places shalbe brent vp, their barres shalbe broken. One purseuaūt shal mete an other: yee, one post shal com by another to bryng ỹ kynge of Babylon tidinges: that his citye is taken in on euery syde, the foordes occupyed, the fennes brent vp, and the souldiers sore afrayde.

D For thus sayeth the Lorde of hosts the God of Israel: the doughter of Babilon hath ben in her tyme lyke as a threshyng floure, but shortly shal her harueste come. Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilō hath deuoured & destroied me, he hath made me an empty vessel. He swalowed me vp lyke a dragon, and fylled hys bely wyth my dylycates: he hath cast me out, he hath taken my substaunce away, and the thynge that was left me hath he carped vnto Babylon, sayeth ỹ doughter ỹ dwelleth in Syon: yea, & my bloude also vnto the Chaldees, sayeth Jerusalē. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I wyl defende thy cause, and auenge the: I wyll drynke vp her see, and drye vp her water sprynges.

E Esay. xiii.c * Babylon shal become an heye of stones a dwellynge place for dragons, a fearfulnes and wondryng, because no mā dwelleth there. They shall roare together lyke lyons, & as the ponge Lyons when they be angrye, so shal they bende them selues. In theyr heate I shall gyue them a Jerem.li.b dyner and they shalbe dronken for iope. * Then shal they slepe an euerlastynge slepe, and neuer wake, sayeth the Lord. I shal cary them downe to be slayne lyke shepe, like wethers and goates O, how was Selach wonne? O, how was the glory of the whole lāde taken? howe happeneth it, that Babylon is so wondred at amonge the Heythen? The see is ryssen ouer Babilon, & hath couered her wyth his great waues. Her cyties are layed wast, the lande lyeth vnbuylded and voyde: it is a lande where no man dwelleth, and where no man trauayleth thorowe. Moreouer, Jerem.l.a Esa.xlvi.a Dan.xiii.b * I wyl vyset Bel at Babylon: and the thynge that he hathe swalowed vp, that same shall I plucke out of his mouth. The Gentyls also shal runne nomore vnto hym: yea, and the walles of Babylon shal fal.

Esay.lii.b Ie.Cor.vi.c O my people, * come out of Babylon, that euery man maye saue his lyfe from the fearful wrath of the Lorde. Be not fayntherted, and feare not at euery rumour that shalbe heard in the lande: for euery yere bryngeth newe tydynges, and in the yere folowynge newe tydynges, and robbynge in the lande and lorde vpon lorde And lo, the tyme cōmeth that I wyll vysite the ymages of Babilon, and the whole lande shall be confounded: yea, and her slayne shal lye in the myddest of her. Heauen and earth wyth al that is therin, shal reioyse ouer Babylon when the destroyers shal come vpon her from the north, sayeth the Lorde.

Jerem.l.c * Lyke as Babilon hath beaten downe and slayne many out of Israel, so shal there fal many and be slayne in al her kyngdome. Ye ỹ haue escaped ỹ sweard hast you, stāde not styl, remembre the Lorde afarre of, & thynke vpon Jerusalem, for we are ashamed to heare ỹ blasphemies our faces were couered with shame, bycause the straunge aleauntes came into the sanctuarye of the Lorde. Wherfore beholde, (sayeth the Lord) the tyme cōmeth ỹ I wyll vyset the ymages of Babylon, and thorowe the hole lande they shal mourne and fal. * Though Babylon clymed vp Jere.xlix.b into heauen, & kepte her power on hye: yet shal I sende her destroyers, sayeth the Lorde.

A pytious crye shalbe herde from Babylon and a great mysery from the lande of the Chaldees when the Lord destroyeth them, and when he driueth out the hye stomack and proude boastynge, wherwyth they haue bene as furious as the waues of great waterfloudes, & made great crakes wyth theyr wordes. For the destroyers shal come vpō her (euen vpon Babilon) whych shal take theyr worthyes, and breake theyr bowes: for God is disposed to auēge hym selfe vpon them and sufficiently to recompence them. Yea (sayeth the Lorde) I wyl make theyr princes, theyr wyse mē, theyr chefe rulers, & al theyr worthyes dronkē: so that they shal slepe an euerlastynge slepe: and neuer wake. Thus sayth the kynge, whose name is the Lorde of hoostes.

G Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes The thycke wall of Babylon shalbe broken, & her hye gates shalbe brēt vp. And ỹ thynge that the Gētyles and the people haue wrought wyth great trauayle and labour, shal come to nought and be consumed in the fyre.

Thys is the charge that Jeremye gaue vnto Saraiah the sonne of Neriah, the son of Maasiah, when he went towarde Babylon wyth Zedekiah ỹ kynge of Juda, in ỹ fourth yere of hys raygne. Nowe thys Saraiah was a peaceable prince. Jeremy wrote in a boke all the mysterye that shulde come vpon Babylō: yea and al these sermons that be wrytten agaynst Babylō, and gaue Saraiah thys charge. When thou cōmest vnto Babylon, se that thou reade al these wordes, and saye: O Lorde, thou art determined to rote out thys place, so ỹ neither people nor catel shal dwell there any more: but to lye waste for euer: and when thou haste redde oute the boke, bynde a stone to it, and cast it in the myddest of Euphrates, and saye: Euen thus shal Babylon synke, and be thrust downe with the burthen of trouble, that I wyl bryng vpō her: so that she shal neuer come vp agayne. Thus farre are the Preachynges of Jeremye.

¶ He repeteth the takynge of zedekiah. Jerusalem is taken of the Chaldees, zedekias sonnes are kylled before hys face, and hys eyes put out. The cytie is burned. The temple is spoyled and robbed. They that were lefte in Jerusalem are caryed to Babilō, kyng Jehoachin is brought forth of pryson, and fed lyke a kynge.

*And in the fouth moneth, the.ix. day of the moneth, there was so great honger in the cytye: that there were nomore vytayles for the people of the lande. So all the souldiers brake awaye, and fled out of the cytye by nyghte thorowe the way of the porte betwene the two walles by the kynges garden. Nowe the Chaldees had compassed the cytye rounde aboute, yet went these men theyr waye towarde the wyldernes.

And so the Chaldees folowed vpon them, and toke zedekiah the kyng in the felde of Jericho, when his hoofte was runne from hym: So they caryed ỹ kyng away prysoner to Reblath vnto the kynge of Babylon in the lande of Hemath, * where he gaue iudgement vpon hym.

The lamentacyons of Jeremy.

The fyrst Chapter.

It happened after Israel was brought into captiuytie and Jerusalem destroyed, that Jeremy the prophet sat weppinge and sorowfully bewayled Jerusalem and syghyng and houlynge with an heuy and wofull herte, sayde.

ALas how sytteth the cytie so desolate, that somtyme was full of people: howe is she become lyke a wyddowe *which was the lady of all nacions: howe is she brought vnder trybute, that ruled al landes: She weepeth sore in the nyght, so that her teares runne downe her chekes: for amonge all her louers, there is none that gyueth her any cõfort: *yea, her nexte frendes transgresse against her, and are become her enemies. Juda is taken prisoner, bycause she was defyled: & for seruing so many straunge goddes, she dwelleth now amonge the heythen. She fyndeth no rest, al they that persecuted her, toke her in strayte places, where she coulde not escape. The stretes of Sion mourne, bycause no man commeth nomore to the solempne feastes. All her gates are desolate, her prestes make lamentacion, her maydẽs are carefull: and she her selfe is in greate heupnesse. Her enemyes haue bene rulers ouer her, and her enemies haue prospered, bycause the Lord hath chastened her for her great wyckednesse: *her chyldren are led awaye captyue before theyr enemy. All the beauty of the dougter of Sion is away her princes are become lyke hartes that fynde no pasture. They are dryuen awaye before theyr enempe, so that they haue nomore power.

Now doth Jerusalem remembre the time of her misery and disobedience: yea, the ioye & pleasure that she hath had in tymes paste, seinge her people is brought downe thorowe the power of theyr enemy, and there is nomã for to helpe her, her enemies stande lokyng at her, and laugh her Sabboth dayes to scorne. Jerusalẽ hath sinned euermore and more, therfore is she come in decay All they that had her in honour despise her, for they haue sene her fylthinesse. Yea, she syghyth, and is ashamed of her selfe.

Her skyrtes are defyled, she remembred not what wolde folowe: therfore is her fall so wonderful, & there is noman to cõfort her. O Lorde, consyder my trouble, for myne enemye hath the vpperhande: The enemy hath put his hande to all ỳ precious thynges that she had, yea, euen before her eyes came the heythen in and out of the Sanctuary: *whom thou (neuertheles) hast for bydden to come within thy congregacion.

Haue ye no regarde, O all ye ỳ go farby beholde and se, yf there be any sorowe lyke vnto myne, wherwith the Lord hath troubled me, in the day of his fearfull wrath. From aboue hath he sent downe a fyre into my bones and it burneth them cruelly: he hath layed a net for my feet and thrown me wyde open: he hathe made me desolate, so that I must euer be mournynge.

The yoke of my transgression is come at the last, wyth his hande hath he tak ẽ it vp, and put it aboute my necke. My strengthe is gone: the Lord hath delyuered me into those hãdes, wherout I can not quyte my selfe. The Lord hath destroyed al the myghty men, that were in me. The lamentacyons of Jeremy.

The fyrst Chapter.

It happened after Israel was brought into captiuytie and Jerusalem destroyed, that Jeremy the prophet sat weppinge and sorowfully bewayled Jerusalem and syghyng and houlynge with an heuy and wofull herte, sayde.

ALas how sytteth the cytie so desolate, that somtyme was full of people: howe is she become lyke a wyddowe *which was the lady of all nacions: howe is she brought vnder trybute, that ruled al landes: She weepeth sore in the nyght, so that her teares runne downe her chekes: for amonge all her louers, there is none that gyueth her any cõfort: *yea, her nexte frendes transgresse against her, and are become her enemies. Juda is taken prisoner, bycause she was defyled: & for seruing so many straunge goddes, she dwelleth now amonge the heythen. She fyndeth no rest, al they that persecuted her, toke her in strayte places, where she coulde not escape. The stretes of Sion mourne, bycause no man commeth nomore to the solempne feastes. All her gates are desolate, her prestes make lamentacion, her maydẽs are carefull: and she her selfe is in greate heupnesse. Her enemyes haue bene rulers ouer her, and her enemies haue prospered, bycause the Lord hath chastened her for her great wyckednesse: *her chyldren are led awaye captyue before theyr enemy. All the beauty of the dougter of Sion is away her princes are become lyke hartes that fynde no pasture. They are dryuen awaye before theyr enempe, so that they haue nomore power.

All her people seke theyr breed with heupnes, and loke what precyous thynge euery man hath, that gyueth he for meate, to saue his lyfe. Consyder, O Lorde, and se howe vyle I am become. Haue ye no regarde, O all ye ỳ go farby beholde and se, yf there be any sorowe lyke vnto myne, wherwith the Lord hath troubled me, in the day of his fearfull wrath. From aboue hath he sent downe a fyre into my bones and it burneth them cruelly: he hath layed a net for my feet and thrown me wyde open: he hathe made me desolate, so that I must euer be mournynge.

The Lorde hathe brought it so to passe: ẏ the hye solempne feastes and Sabbothes in Sion: are cleane forgotten. In hys heupe displeasure hath he made the kynge and preestes to be despysed.

The Lorde hath forsaken hys owne aulter, and hath abhorred his owne Sanctuarye, and hath gyuen the walles of theyr townes into the handes of the enemye. Theyr enemyes made a noyse in the house of the Lorde, as it had bene in a solempne feast daye.

The Lorde thought to breake downe ẏ walles of the doughter of Syon, he spreade out hys lyne, and dyde not in hys hãde tyl he had destroyed them. Therfore mourne the turrets and the broken walles together.

The.iii. Chapter:

I Am the man, that (thorowe the rod I of his wrath) haue experience of misery. He droue me forth, and led me yea, into darkenesse, but not into lyght. Agaynst me onely he turneth hys hande, and layeth it euer vpon me.

Myn flesche and my skynne hath he made olde and my bones hath he brused. He hath buylded rounde about me, and closed me in with gal and trauayle. He hath set me in darkenesse, as they that be deade for euer.

He hath so hedged me in, that I can not get out, and hath layed heupe lykes vpon me. Though I crye and cal pitiously, yet heareth he not my prayer. He hath stopped vp my wayes B with foursquared stones, and made my pathes croked. He layeth wayte for me lyke a Bere, & as a Lyon in a hole. He hath marred my wayes, and broken me in peces, he hath layed me waste altogether. He hath bent his bow and made me as it were a marke to shote at. The arowes of hys quyuer hath he shot euen into my reynes. * I am laughed to scorne of all my people, they Jere.xx.b make songes vpon me all the daye longe. He hath fylled me wyth bytternesse, and gyuen me wormewod to drynke. He hath smytten my teth in peces with stones, and rolled me in the dust.

He hath put my soule out of rest, I forget al good thynges, I thought in my selfe: I am vndone, there is no hope for me in the Lorde. O remembre yet my mysery, and my trouble, the wormewood and the gall.

Yea thou shalt remembre them, for my soule C melteth awaye in me. Whyle I consyder these thinges in my hert, I get a hope againe. Namely it is of ẏ Lordes mercyes that we are not vterly consumed. For truly his pytyful cõpassion hath not ceassed. Newe mercyes shall the Lorde shewe vpon the earlye in the daye sprynge, (O Lorde) great is thy faythfulnesse.

Thren.iii.b For the Lorde wyl not forsake for euer, * but though he punysche hym: yet accordynge to the multitude of hys mercyes, he receyueth to grace agayne: For he doth not plage, and cast out the chyldren of men from hys herte.

To treade al the prysonners of the earth vnder hys fete. To moue the iudgement of man before the moost hyghest.

€ To condempne a mā in hys cause. The Lord hath not pleasure in such thynges.

What is he then that sayeth: ther shuld some thynge be done wythout the Lordes commaundement. Out of the mouthe of the most hyghest goeth not euell and good.

Wherfore then murmureth the lyuyng mā? let hym murmure at hys owne synne.

¶ The ende of the lamentacyons of Jeremye.

¶ The tyme wherin Ezechiel prophecyed and in what place. His office and office. The vysion of the foure beastes. The vysyon of the wheles: The vysyon of the throne and of the ymage aboue the throne.

A T chaunced in the thyrty yere the fyfth daye of the fourth moneth, that I was amonge the prisoners by the ryuer of Cobar: where the heuens opened, and I sawe a vysion of God.

Now the fyfth day of the moneth made out the fyfth yere of kynge Joachins captiuitie. At the same tyme came the worde of the Lorde vnto Ezechiel the sonne of Buzi the preast, in the lande of the Chaldees, by the water of Cobar * where the hand of the Lord came Ezech.i.a vpon hym. And I loked, and beholde, a stormye wynde came out of ỹ North with a great cloud full of fyre, which with his glystre lyghtened al rounde about. And in the myddest of the fyre it was all cleare lyke the face of an Aungell, and as it were the lykenesse of four beastes, and this was theyr lykenesse. They were fassyoned lyke a man: sauynge that euery one had foure faces, and foure wynges.

B Theyr legges were streyght, but theyr feete were lyke bullockes feete, and they glystred, as it had bē fayre scouzed metall. Under their winges, vpon al the foure cozners they had mennes handes. Theyr faces and theyr winges were to warde the foure cozners: yet were the winges so that one euer touched an other. When they wēt they turned them not aboute: but eche one went streyght forwarde. Furthermore this was the similitude of theyr faces. * Vpon the right syde Ezech.i.b of these foure, theyr faces were lyke the face of C a man, and the face of a lyon. But vpon the left syde they had the face of an oxe, and the face of an Aegle. Theyr faces also and theyr wynges were spred out aboue: so that two wiges of one touched ouer two winges of an other, and with the other they couered theyr bodye. Euery one when it went it went streyght forward. Where as the spyrite led them, thyther they wente, and * turned not about in theyr goinge. Ezech. i.c

D The fassyon and countenaunce of the beastes was lyke hote coles of fyre, euē as though burnynge cressettes had bene amonge the beastes: * (this was the vysion) and the fyre gaue a glyster, and out of the fyre there went lyghtenynge. E
When the beastes went forwarde & backward, one wolde haue thought it had lyghtened. Now when I had well consydred the beastes, I sawe a worke of wheles vpon the earth, wyth foure faces also nye vnto the beastes.

The fassyon and worke of the wheles was lyke the see. The foure wheles were ioyned and made (to loke vpon) as it had ben one whele in an other. When one went forwarde, they wente all foure, and turned them not aboute in theyr goynges. They were large, greate and horryble to loke vpon. Theyr backes were full of eyes rounde about them all foure. When the beastes wente, the wheles went also with them. And when the beastes lyfte them selues vp from the earth, the wheles were lyft vp also. Whyther soeuer the spyrite went, thyther went they also and the wheles were lyft vp, and folowed them for the spyrit of lyfe was in the wheles. Whē they beastes went forth, stode styll, or lyft them selues from the earth, then the wheles also went, stode styl, and were lyft vp, for the breth of lyfe was in the wheles. Aboue ouer the heedes of the beastes there was a firmament, which was fashioned as it had bene of the moost pure Chrystal, and that was spred oute aboue vpon theyr heedes: vnder the same firmamente were theyr wynges layed abrode, one toward an other and two wynges couered the body of euery beaste.

And when they wente forthe, I hearde the noyse of theyr wynges, lyke the noyse of greate waters, as it had bene the noyse of the great God and a rushyng togyther as it were of an hooste of men. And when they stode styll, they lette downe theyr wynges. Now whē they stode styl and had lettē downe their wynges, it thundred in the firmament that was aboue theyr heedes. Aboue the firmamen that was ouer theyr heedes, there was the fassion of a seate, as it had ben made of Saphir. Upon the seate there sat one lyke a man. * I beheldē hym, and he was lyke an angell, as it had bene all of fyre within from his loynes vpwarde. And beneth, whē I loked vpō hym vnder the loynes, me thought he was lyke a shynyng fyre, that gyueth lyght on euery syde Yea, the shyne and glyster that lyghtened roūde about, was lyke a raynbow, whiche in a raynye daye appeareth in the cloudes. Euen so was the similitude, wherein the glory of the Lord appeared. When I sawe it, I fell vpon my face, and herkened vnto the voyce of hym that spake.

And he sayd Beholde, thou sonne of man: I wyll sende the to the chyldren of Israel, to those runnagates and obstinate people: for they haue takē part against me, and are runne away fro me, * both they and theyr forefathers vnto this daye.

¶ The beseege of the cytye of Jerusalem is sygnyfyed. The longe contynuance of the captyuytye of Israel An hungre is prophecyed to come in the captyuytye.

THou sonne of man: take a tyle stone and laye it before the, and describe vpon it the cytie of Jerusalẽ, howe it is besieged, how bulwarkes and stronge dyches are grauen on euery syde of it: describe also tentes and an hooste of men rounde about it with engins of warre.

Moreouer, take an yron panne, and set it betwixt the and the cytie, in stede of an yron wall. Then set thy face towarde it, to beliege it, & lay ordinaunce agaynst it to wynne it. This shalbe a token vnto the house of Israel. But thou shalt slepe vpon thy left syde, and laye the synne of the house of Israel vpon the. Certayne dayes appoynted, thou shalt slepe vpon that syde, & beare
Num.xx.e theyr synnes. * Neuertheless, I wyll appoynte the a tyme (to put of theyr synnes) and the nombre of the dayes: Three hundred & xc. dayes must thou beare the wickednesse of the house of Israel Whẽ thou hast fulfylled these dayes lye downe agayne, and slepe vpon thy ryght syde fourtye dayes, and beare the synnes of the house of Juda

B * A daye for a yere, a daye (I saye) for a yere
Num.xxiiii.e wyll I euer laye vpon the. Therfore set nowe thy face agaynst that besieged Jerusalẽ, and discouer thyne arme, that thou mayest prophecy agaynst it. Behold, I wyl lay chaynes vpon the that thou shalt not turne the from one side to an other, til ỹ hast ended the dayes of this besigting

C Wherfore take vnto the wheate, barly, beanes, gromell seed, Millium, and fytches and put these togyther in a vessel, and make the loues of breed thereof, accordynge to the nombre of the dayes that thou must lye vpon thy syde: that ỹ mayst haue breed to eat for three hundred and. xc dayes. And the meat that thou eatest shall haue a certayne wayght appoyntrd: namely twenty sycles euery day. This appoynted meate shalt ỹ eate dayly from the begynnynge to the ende.

Thou shalte drynke also a certayne measure of water: Namely, ỹ syxt parte of an hin shalt thou drynke dayly from the begynnyng vnto ỹ end. Barly cakes shalt thou eate, yet shalt thou fyrst tooste them at a fyre made wt mans donge, that they may se it. And with that sayd ỹ Lord: Euen thus shal the children of Israel eate theyr defyled breed in the myddest of the Gentyles, amonge whom I wyll scattre them.

D was neuer yet stayned: for fro my youth vp vnto this hour, I dyd neuer eate of a deed carcasse, or of that whiche was slayne of wylde beastes, neither came there euer any vncleane flesh in my mouth. Where vnto he answered me, and sayde: well, then I wyl graunt ỹ to take cowes donge for the donge of man, and to tooste the breed with all before them.

And he sayde vnto me: Behold, thou sonne of man, * I wyll mynysshe all the prouysion of

B Yet afterwarde take a lytle of the same, and bynde it in thy cote lappe. Then take a curtesye of it and cast it in the mydest of the fyre, & burne it in the fyre: Out of the same fyre shal there go a flame vpon the whole house of Israel. Wherefore thus sayth the Lorde God: This same is Jerusalem. I se there in the mydest of the heythen, and nacyons that are rounde about her, but she hath despised my iudgemētes more then ỹ Gentyles them selues, and broken my commaundementes more then the nacyons that lye rounde about her. For they haue caste out myne ordynaunces, and not walked in my lawes: Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: * For so moche as ye haue bene more augmented in nombre of people, then the heythen that dwel round about you: and ye haue not walked in my lawes, neyther haue ye kept myne ordynaunces, & ye haue not liued so rightously as ỹ heythen ỹ are round about you. Therfore thus sayth ỹ Lorde God.

C I wyl also come vpon the, I my selfe, I say: for in the myddest of the wil I syt in iudgement in the syght of the heythen, and wyll handle the of suche a fassyon as I neuer dyd before, and as I neuer wyll do from that tyme forth, and that bycause of all thyne abhominacions. For in the fathers * shalbe kayne to eate theyr owne sōnes, and ỹ sōnes theyr owne fathers. Suche a courte wyll I kepe in the, and the whole remnaunte of the wyll I scattre into all the wyndes.

Wherfore, as truly as I lyue (sayth the Lorde God) seinge thou hast defyled my Sanctuarye, with all maner of abhominacions, and wt al thy shameful offences. For this cause wyl I also destroye the. Eyne eye shall not ouerse the, neither wyll I spare the. * One thyrde parte within the shall dye of the pestylence and of hungre: Another thyrde parte shall be slayne downe, rounde aboute the with the swearde: The other thyrde parte that remayneth wyll I scattre abrode toward all the wyndes, and drawe out the swerde after them. Thus I wyl perfourme my indignacyon, and set my wrath agaynst them, and ease my selfe. So that when I haue fulfylled myne angre agaynst them, they shal knowe that I am the Lorde, whiche with a feruent gelousye haue spoken it. Moreouer, I wyl make the waste and abhorred, before all ỹ heythen that dwell about the, and in the sight of all them that go by the: so that when I punysshe the in my wrath, in myne angre, and with the plage of my whole displeasure: thou shalt be a very abhominacyon, shame a gasynge and wondrynge stocke, amonge the heythen that lye about the. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, and it shal come to passe, when I shote amonge them the perylous dartes of hungre, whiche shalbe but death. Yea, therfore shall I shote them, bycause I wyl destroy you: I wyl * encrease hungre, and minish all the prouysion of breed amonge you. Plages and mysery wyll I sende you: yea, & wylde beastes also to destroy you. Pestilence and bloudeshedynge shall come vpon you, and the swearde wyll I brynge ouer you. Euen I the Lorde haue sayde it.

C The. vi. Chapter.

C He sheweth that the people shal be plaged for the synne of idolatrye. He prophecieth the repentaunce of the remnaūt of the people, and their deliueraunce. The destruction of the frowarde is prophesyed.

AND the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face to the * mountaynes of Israel, that thou mayest prophecye vnto them, and saye: Heare the worde of the Lorde God, O ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus hath the Lorde God spoken to the mountaynes, hylles, valleyes and dales. Beholde I, I my selfe I saye: wyll brynge a swerd ouer you, and destroye youre hye places: I wyll cast downe your alters, and breake downe your ymages. Youre slayne men wyll I laye before your goddes, and the dead carcasses of the chyldren of Israel wyll I cast before theyr idolles, your bones wyl I destroye rounde aboute your aulters and dwellyng places.

The cyties shal be desolate, the hyll chapels layed waste: your aulters destroyed and broken your goddes cast downe, and taken away, your tēples layed euen with the grounde, your owne workes cleane roted out. Your slayne men shall lye amonge you, that ye maye learne to knowe, how that I am ỹ Lorde. Those that be amonge you, and haue escaped the swearde, wyl I leaue amonge the Gentyles, for I wyll scattre you among the nacions. And they that escape of you shal thynke vpon me among the heythen, where they shalbe in captiuitie. As for that whorish & vnfaythfull hertes of theyrs, wherewith they runne awaye fro me: I wyll breake it: yea, and put out those eyes of theyrs, that commyt fornicacion with theyr idols.

E

Then shal they be ashamed and displeased with theyr selues, for the wickednesses and abhominacyons whiche they haue done: and shall learne to knowe that I am the Lorde, how that it is not in vayne, ỹ I the Lorde spake, to bryng suche mysery vpon them. The Lorde sayd more ouer vnto me: Smyte thyn handes togyther, & stampe with thy feet, and saye: Wo worth al the abhominacions and wyckednesses of the house of Israel, for bycause of them they shal perisshe with the swerde, with hungre, and with pestilence. Whoso is farre of shal dye of the pestilence he that is nye at hande, shall perysshe with the swerde: and the other that remayne and that are besieged, shal dye of hungre.

Thus wyll I satysfy my wrathful displeasure vpon them. And so shal ye learne to knowe that I am the Lorde, when your slayne men lye among your idolles, and about your aulters, vpon all hye hylles and toppes of mountanes, among all grene trees, amonge all thycke okes euen in the places where they dyd sacrifyce to al theyr idols. I wil stretch myne hande out vpon them, and wyll make ỹ lande waste. So that it shal lye desolate and voyde, from the wildernes of Deblothah forth, thorow al theyr habitacōs to learne them for to knowe, ỹ I am the Lorde.

C The. vii. Chapter.

¶ The ende of all the lande of Israel shall sodaynly come. The cause of the destruction therof. The prophet is commaunded to shewe the summe of the evyls that are at hand.

The

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me on this maner: The I call. O þ sone of man. Thus sayth the Lord God vnto the lande of Israel: The ende cōmeth vpon the lande of Israel: yea, verely the ende cōmeth vpon all þ four corners of þ lande. But now shall the ende come vpon the, for I wyll sende my wrath vpon the, Ezec.vii.b. ix.c and wyl punish the accordīg to thy wayes, and rewarde þ after all thyne abhominaciōs. Myne eye shal not ouerse the, neyther wyll I spare the but rewarde the accordynge to thy wayes, and declare thyne abhominacions. Then shall ye knowe that I am the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Behold, one mysery and plage shal come after an other, the end is here. The ende (I saye) is come, it watcheth for the, beholde, it is come alreadye, thy destruction is earlye come a- B gaynst the that dwellest in the lande.

The tyme is at hande, the daye of sedicyon is harde by, and the crye shal not be as the soundynge agayne of the mountaynes. Therfore I wyll shortely poure out my sore displeasure ouer the, and fulfyll my wrath vpon the. I wil iudge the after thy wayes, and recompence the all thy Ezec.vii.b. ix.c abhominacions. *Myne eye shal not ouerse the neyther wyll I spare the: but rewarde the after thy wayes, and thyne abhominaciōs shalbe punished in þ myddes of the, to lerne you to know C how that I am the Lord that smyteth. Behold the daye is here, the daye is come, þ houre is run out, the rod flourysheth, pryde wareth grene, malicyous violence is growen vp, and the vngodlye waren to a staffe. None of thē shall remayne ouer, none of theyr ryches, not one of theyr seede and no lamentacion shalbe made for them.

D The tyme commeth, the daye draweth nye: 1.Cor.vii.b *Whoso byeth, let hym not reioyse: he that sel- 1.Here.xv.b leth, let hym be sorye: for why? ‡ Trouble shall 1.Thes.v.a come in the myddest of them al: so that the seller shal not come agayne to the thyng that he solde although theyr lyfe be yet with the lyuing. For when the prophecye was preached vnto all the people, none turned from theyr synne, and noman toke strength to hym agaynst his wyckednesse, E to saue his owne lyfe. The trompettes shall ye blow, & make you all ready, but noman shal go to the batayl, for I am wroth withal the whole multitude. The swearde shalbe without, pestylence and hūgre within: so that whoso is in the Deu.xxii.d felde shalbe slayne with the swerde: and he that is in the cytie *shal perysh with hungre and pestilence. And suche as escape, and flē frō among them shall be vpon the hylles, lyke as the doues in the felde: euery one shalbe afraped, bycause of his owne wyckednesse.

F All handes shall be let downe, and all knees shalbe weake as the water: they shal gird them selues with sackecloth, feare shal fall vpon thē, Esay.xv.b they shall be confounded *and theyr heades balde: theyr syluer shall they cast forth in þ Sophon.i.b streetes, and theyr golde shalbe despysed: *Yea, Ezech.vii.d Prou.xi.a theyr syluer and golde maye not delyuer them, in the daye of the fearful wrath of the Lorde.

They shall not satisfye theyr hungrye soules neyther fyll theyr emptye bellyes therwith: for it is become theyr owne decaye thorowe theyr wyckednesse. *And theyr beautyful costly ornament that God had ordeyned to be theyr greate glory, in it they haue set vp abhominacions vnto theyr idols. For this cause wyll I make thē and it to be abhorred. Moreouer, I wyl gyue it into the handes of the straungers to be spoyled: and to the wycked for to be robbed, & they shall destroy it. My face wyl I turne from them, my treasury shalbe defyled: for the theues shal go into it, and spende it. Make a chayne, for the land is whole defyled with vnrygh teous iudgement of innocent bloude, and the cytie is ful of violēt oppressyon. Ose.viii.a

Wherfore I wyll bryng the moost cruel ty G rauntes from amonge the heythen, to take their houses in possessyon. I wyll make the pompe of the proude to ceasse, and theyr sanctuarye shalbe defyled. When this trouble commeth, they shall seke peace, but they shall haue none. One mys- chefe and sorowe shall folowe an other, and one rumoure shall come after an other. * Then shall Ie.xxvi.b.c he seke vysions in vayne at theyr Prophetes. The law shalbe gone from the prestes, and wyse dome from the elders. The kynges shal mourne the princes shalbe clothed with heynesse, and þ handes of the people in the lande shall tremble for feare. I wyll do vnto them after theyr owne wayes, accordynge to theyr owne iudgementes wyll I iudge them, to learne them for to knowe that I am the Lorde.

¶ An apperaunce of þ similitude of god. Ezechiel is brought to Ierusalem in the spyrite. The Lorde sheweth the prophet the idolatryes of the house of Israel, and chefely of the prestes.

IT happened, that in the syxt yere, þ A fyfth daye of the syxt moneth, I sat in my house, and the lordes of þ cōsayl of Juda wt me: and the hande of the Lord god fell euen there vpō me. And as I loked vp, * I sawe as it were a lyke- Ezech.i.e nesse of fyre from his loynes downewarde, and from his loynes vpwarde: it shyned maruelous clere, and lyke an angel to loke vpon. *This si- B militude stretched out an hande and toke me by Ezech.iii.b and xi.b the heery lockes of my heed, and the spyryte lyft me vp betwyxt heauen and earth: and brought me in a vysion to Jerusalem, into the entry of þ inner porte that lyeth towarde the North: there stode an ymage, with whom he þ hath all thynges in his power was very wroth.

And beholde, the glorye of the God of Israel C was in the same place: euen * as I hadde sene it a Ezech.i.a fore in the felde. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, O lyft vp thyne eyes, and loke towarde the North. Then lyft I vp myne eyes towarde the North, and beholde: beside the porte northwarde, ther was an aulter made vnto the ymage of prouocacion in the verye entrynge in. And he sayde furthermore vnto me: Thou sōne of man, seest thou what these do? Seest thou þ greate abhominacions that the house of Israel cōmitteth in this place, to dryue me from my sā ctuary? But turne the about, and thou shalte se yet grea yet greater abhominaciõs. And with ỹ brought he me to the courte gate: and when I loked, beholde, there was an hole in the wall. Then sayd he vnto me: Thou son of man, dygge thorowe the wall. And when I dygged thorow the wall behold, there was a doze. And he sayde vnto me go thy way in, and loke what wycked abhomynacions they do here. So I went in, and sawe: and beholde, there were all maner ymages of wormes and beastes, all ydols and abhominacyons of the house of Israel, paynted euery one rounde about the wall: There stode also before Ezech.xlviii Num.xi.d the ymages. *lxx. lordes of the coũsel of ỹ house of Israel, and in the mydst of them stode Jaazanih, the sonne of Saphan. And euery one of thẽ had a censour in his hand, and out of the insence there went a smoke as it had ben a cloude.

E Then sayde he vnto me: thou sonne of man, haste thou sene what the senatours of the house of Israel do secretly, euery one in his chambre? Job.xxii.b Esa.xxix.c Jere.xxiii.b Ezech.ix.c *For they saye: Tushe, the Lorde seeth vs not, the Lorde regardeth not ỹ world. And he sayde vnto me: Turne the yet agayne, and thou shalte se yet greater abhominacions that they do. And with that he brought me to the doze of the porte of the Lordes house towarde the north. And beholde, there sat women mournyng for Tamus. Thã sayd he vnto me: hast thou sene this, thou sonne of man? Turne the about, and thou shalte F se yet greater abhominacions then these are. And so he brought me into the inwarde court of the Lordes house: And behold, at the porte of the Lordes house, betwyxte the fore entrye and the aultar, there were xxv. men, that tourned theyr backes vpon the temple of the Lorde, and theyr faces towarde the Easte, and these worshypped the Sunne.

G And he sayde vnto me: haste thou sene this, thou sonne of man? thynketh the house of Juda that it is but a tryfle, to do these abhomynacios, here? Shulde they fyll the lande full of wyckednesse, and vndertake to prouoke me to angre? Yea, and purposely to cast vp theyr noses vpon me? Therfore wyll I also do some thynge in my wrathful displeasure, so that myne eye shall not prouer.i.c Jerem.vi.c ymp.b Esech.viii.a ouerse them, neyther wyll I spare them. * Yea, and though they crye in myne eares with a loud voyce, yet wyll I not heare them.

The.ix. Chapter.

The destruction of ydolatrers, and the conuersion of the ryghtous. They that shalbe saued are marked. They that are vnmarked are slayne. A cõplaynt of the prophet for the destruction of the people.

AGayne cryed also with a loude voyce in myne eares, sayinge: Come. Heare ye rulers of ỹ cytie, euery mã with his weponed hãd to the slaughter. Then came there syxe men out of ỹ strete of the vpper port towarde the north, and euery man a weapon in his hande to the slaughter. There was one amongest them that had on hym a lynnen rayment, and a writers ynkhorne by his syde.

These wente in, and stode besyde the brasen B aulter: for the glorye of the Lorde was gone awaye from the *Cherub which was vpon hym Ezec.i.c Num.xv.c and was come downe to the threshold of ỹ house iii.re.viii.b and he called the man ỹ had the lynnen rayment vpon him, and the writers ynkhorne by his side and the Lorde sayd vnto hym: go thy way thorowe the citie of Jerusalẽ, and set a marke vpon the foreheades of them that mourne and are sory for all the abhominacions that be done therein. And to the other he sayde, that I myght heare. Jud.ii.a *Go ye after hym thorowe the cytie, slaye, ouerse none, spare none: kyll, and destroye both olde men and ponge, maydens, chyldren and wyues.

But as for those, that haue the marke vpon C them, se that ye touch them not: *and begynne Jere.xxv.d Ezech.ix.b at my sanctuary. Then they beganne at the elders, which were in the temple, for he had sayde vnto them: When ye haue defyled the temple, & fylled the courte with the slayne, then go youre waye forth. So they went out, and slue downe thorowe the cytie. Nowe when they had done ỹ slaughter, and I yet escaped: I fell downe vpon my face, and cryed, sayinge: O Lord God, wylt thou then destroy al the residue of Israel, in thy sore displeasure, that thou hast poured vpon Jerusalem? Then sayde he vnto me: The wyckedD nesse of the house of Israel & Juda is very great so that the land is ful of blonde and the cytie ful of vnrighteousnesse. For they saye: *Tushe, the Job.xxii.b Esa.xxix.c Lorde regardeth not the earth, he seeth vs not. Ezech.viii.a Therfore wyll I vpon them *myne eye shal not Ezech.vii.a ouerse them: neyther wyll I spare them, but wyll recompence theyr wickednesse vpon theyr heades And behold, the man that had the lynen raymẽt vpon him and the writers ynkhorne by his side tolde al the matter how it happened, and sayd: Lorde as ỹ hast cõmaunded me, so I haue done.

The.x. Chapter.

Of the man that take hote burnyng coles out of the mydst of the wheles of the Cherubins, in token of the burning of Jerusalem. A rehearsall of the vysyon of the wheles, of the beastes, and of the Cherubyns.

AND as I loked, behold, in the firma A mẽt that was aboue the Cherubins there appered ỹ similitude of a stole Ezech.ix.a of Saphir vpon them: *Then said he that sat therin, to him that had ỹ lynen raymẽt vpon him: Crepe in betwene the wheles that are vnder the Cherubins, and take thyne hande full of hote coles out from betwene the Cherubins and cast them ouer the citie. And he crept in, that I myght se.

Nowe the Cherubins stode vpon the ryght syde of the house when the man went in, and the ii.pa.vii.a cloude fylled the inner courte. *But the glorye of the Lorde remoued from the Cherubyns, and came vpon the threshelde of the house: so that ỹ temple was full of cloudes, and the courte was full of the shyne of the Lordes glorye: Yea, and the sounde of the Cherubins winges was herde into the forecourte, lyke as it had ben the voyce of the almyghtye God, when he speaketh. Now when he had bydden the man that was clothed in lynnen, to go and take the hote coles from the mydst of the wheles which were vnder the Cherubins: he went and stode besyde the wheles. Then the one Cherub reached forthe his hande from vnder the cherubins, vnto the fyre ỹ was betwene Betwene the Cherubyns, and toke thereof, and gaue it vnto hym that had on the linen rayment in his hande: which toke it, and went out. And vnder the wynges of the Cherubyns, there appeared the lykenesse of a mans hande. I sawe also four wheles besyde the Cherubynnes, so that by euery Cherub there stode a whele. And the wheles were (to loke vpon) after the fassyon of the precyous stone of Tharsis: yet, (vnto the syght) they were all foure of one fassyon, as yf one whele had bene in an other.

When they went forth, they went all foure togyther, not turnynge aboute in theyr goinge But where ỹ first went, thither went they after also, so ỹ they turned not about in theyr goinge. Theyr whole bodyes, theyr backes, theyr handes and winges: yea, and the wheles also wer al full of eyes rounde about them all foure. And I Ezech.i.b hearde hym cal the wheles. *Euery one of them had four faces: so that the one face was the face of a Cherub, the seconde of a man, the thyrde of a lyon, the fourth of an eagle, and they were lyfted vp abone. This is the beaste that I sawe at the water of Cobar. Now when the Cherubins went the wheles wēt with them, and when the Cherubins shoke theyr winges to lyft them selues vpward, the wheles remayned not behinde but were with them also. Shortelye when they stode these stode also. And when they were lyfted vp, the wheles were lyfte vp also with them for the spyrite of lyfe was in the wheles.

D Ezech. xi.d xliii.a *Then the glorye of the Lorde was lyfte vp from the thresshold of the temple and remayned vpon the Cherubyns: And the Cherubyns flackered with theyr wynges, and lyfte them selues vp frō ỹ earth: so that I sawe when they wente and the wheles with them. And they stode at ỹ eastesyde of the porte that is in the house of the Lorde. So the glory of the Lord was vpon thē This is the beast that I sawe vnder the God of Israel by the water of Cobar. And I perceyued that it was the Cherubyns. Euery one had four faces, and euery one four winges, & vnder their wynges, as it were mens handes. Nowe the fygure of their faces was euen as I had sene them by the water of Cobar, and so was the countenaunce of them. Euery one in his goinge went straycht forwarde.

¶ The.xi. Chapter.

¶ Who they were that seduced the people of Israel. Agaynst these he prophecyeth, shewynge them how they shalbe dispersed abrode. The renuyng of the herte cōmeth of God, otherwyse can we not walke in hys commaundementes. He threatenyth them that leane vnto theyr owne cōsels

Moreouer, the spirite of the Lord lifte me vp, and brought me vnto ỹ east porte of the Lordes house. And beholde there were .xxv. men vnder ỹ dore amonge whom I sawe Jaazniah the sonne of Azur, and Pheltiah the sōne of Bananiah, the rulers of ỹ people. Then sayd the Lorde vnto me. Thou son of man, these men ymagine myschefe, and a wycked cōsayle take they in this cytie, sayinge: Tushe, there is no destruction at hande, let vs buylde houses: this Jerusalem is the cauldron, and we be the flesshe.

Therfore shalte thou prophecye vnto them: yea, prophecye shalte thou vnto them, O sonne of man. And with that fell the spirite of ỹ Lorde vpon me, and said vnto me: Speake, thus sayth the Lord: On this maner haue ye spoken (O ye house of Israel) and I know the ymaginacions of your hertes. Many one haue ye murthered in this cytie, and fylled the stretes full of the slayne Therfore thus sayth the Lord God: The slayne men that ye haue layed on the grounde in the cytie are the flesshe, and this citie is the cauldron: *But I wil bringe you out of it. ye haue feared Ezech.xxiiii.a the swearde, and I wyll bryngē a swearde ouer you sayth the Lorde God. I wyll dryue you out of this citie and delyuer you into your enemyes hand, and wyl condempne you. Ye shalbe slayne in all the costes of Israel, I wyll be auenged of you: to lerne you to knowe that I am the Lord. This cytie shall not be your cauldron, neyther shal ye be the flesh therin: but in the costes of Israel wyll I punysshe you, that you may knowe that I am the Lord: in whose cōmaundementes ye haue not walked, nor kepte hys lawes: *but Leu.xviii.a haue done after the customes of ỹ heythen, that Deut.xii.b lye rounde aboute you.

Now when I preached, Pheltiah the sonne of Bananiah dyed. Then fel I downe vpon my face and cried wt a loude voyce, sayinge: O Lord God, wylt thou then vtterly destroy all the remnaunt in Israel? And so the worde of the Lorde came vnto me on this maner: thou sonne of mā, thy brethren, thy kynsfolke, and ỹ whole house of Juda which dwell at Jerusalem, saye: Withdrawe ye farre from the Lorde, for the lande is gyuen vs in possessyon. Therfore tell thē: Thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyll sende you far of among the Gentyles, and scattre you among the nacyons, and I wyll hallowe you but a lytle, in the landes where ye shall come. Tell them also Thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyll gather you agayne out of the nacyons, and bryng you from the countreyes where ye be scatred, and I wyll gyue you the lande of Israel agayne. And they shall come thyther. And they shal take away all theyr ydols, and all theyr abhominacions from thence. *And I wyll gyue you one herte, and I D wyll plant a newe spyrite within your bowels. Jer.xxxi.f Ezec.xxxvi.c

That stonye herte wyll I take out of youre bodye, and gyue you a fleshly herte, that ye may walke in my cōmaundementes, and kepe myne ordynaunces, and do them: that ye maye be my people, and I your God. But loke whose hertes are disposed to folowe theyr abhominacyons & wicked liuinges those mens dedes wyl I bring vpon theyr owne heedes, sayeth the Lord God. After this did the Cherubins lyft vp theyr winges, and the wheles went with them, and ỹ glory of the Lorde was vpon them. * So the glo- Ezech..x.a ry of the Lorde went vp from the middest of the xi.a cytie, and stode vpon the mount of the cytie, towarde the East. *But the wynde toke me vp, & Ezec.viii.b xiiii.a in a vysion (which came by the spyrit of God) it brought me agayne into Caldea among the prisoners. Then the vysion that I had sene vanyshed awaye fro me. So I spake vnto the prysoners ners, all the wordes of the Lorde, which he had shewed me.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, thou dwellest in the mydst of a froward housholde: *whiche haue eyes to se: and yet se not: eares haue they to heare, and yet heare they not, for they are an obstinate housholde. Therfore (O thou sonne of man) make thy gere readye to flyt, and go forth by fayre daye lyght, that they may se. Yea, euen in their sight shalt thou go from thy place to an other place: yf peraduenture they wyll consyder, that they be a disobedient housholde. Thy gere that thou hast made redaye to flyt withall, shalt thou beare out by fayre daye lyght, that they maye se: and thou thy selfe shalt go forth also at euen in their sight, as a man doth when he flyteth. Dygge thorowe the wal, that they may se and beare thorowe it the same thynge, that thou takest vp in their sight.

B In their sight shalt thou beare vpon their shulders, and cary it forth in the darke. Hyde thy face that thou se not the earth, for I haue made the a shewtoken vnto the house of Israel. Now as the Lorde commaunded me, so I dyd: the geare that I had made readye, brought I out by day. At euē I brake downe an hole thorow the wall with my hande: and when it was darke, I toke the gere vpon my shulders, and bare them oute in their sight. And in the morninge came the

Then tell them: Thus sayth the Lorde God: This punishment toucheth the chefe rulers at Ierusalem, and all the house of Israel that dwel amonge them. Tel them: I am your shewtoken: lyke as I haue done, so shall it happen vnto you. D He shall breake downe the wall, to cary stuffe thorowe: he shall couer his face that he se not the grounde with his eyes: * My lyne wyll I spreade out vpon hym and catche him in my net, and cary hym to Babylon in the land of the Chaldees whiche he shall not se, and yet shall he dye there. * So when I haue scattered them amonge the heathen, and strowed them in the landes they shal knowe, that I am the Lorde. But I wyll leaue a lytle nombre of them from the swearde, hungre and pestilence: to tell all their abhominacyons amonge the heythen, where they come: that they maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vn-

E to me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, with a fearfull tremblynge shalt thou eate thy breed, wyth carefulnesse and sorowe shalte thou drynke thy water. And vnto the people of the lande speake thou on this maner: thus sayth the Lorde God: to them that dwell in Ierusalem, and to the lande of Israel: Ye shall eate your breed with sorowe and drynke your water with heynesse. Yea the land with the fulnesse therof shalbe layed waste for the wyckednesse of them that dwell therein. And the cyties that now be well occupyed, shall be voyde: and the lande desolate: that ye maye knowe, how that I am the Lorde.

Yet came the worde of the Lorde vnto me a- F gayne, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, what maner of by worde is that, which ye vse in the land of Israel, sayinge: Tush, *seinge that the dayes are so slacke in commynge, all the visions are of none effecte: Tell them therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyl make that by worde to ceasse so that it shal no more be cōmenly vsed in Israel ii.pet.iij.b.

But say this vnto them: the dayes are at hande that euery thynge which hath bene prophecyed, shall be fulfylled. There shall no vysion be in vayne, neither any prophecye fayle amonge the chyldren of Israel: For it is I the Lorde that speake it: and whatsoeuer I the Lorde speake, it shalbe perfourmed, and not be slacke in commynge.

Yea, euen in your dayes (O ye frowarde hou- G

Tush, as for the vision that ye haue sene it wyll be many a daye or it come to passe. It is farre of yet, the thynge that he prophecyeth. Therfore say vnto them: Thus sayth the Lorde God. All my wordes shal no more be slack. Loke what I speake, that same shall come to passe, sayth the Lorde.

¶ The worde of the Lorde agaynst false prophetes, which teache the people the counsayles of their owne hertes.

A The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man Speake, prophecye agaynst those prophetes, that preache in Israel: and saye thou vnto them that prophecye out of their owne hertes: Hear the worde of the Lorde, thus sayth the Lorde God:

*Wo be vnto those foolysh prophetes that folowe their owne spyrite, and speake where they se no thyng, O Israel, thy prophetes are like foxes vpō the dyrte felde: For they stande not in the gappes, neither make they an hedge for the house of Israel, that men myght abyde the battayl in the daye of the Lorde. Vayne thinges they se, & tell lyes, *to mayntayne their preachynges withal. The Lorde (saye they) hath spoken it, when in very dede the Lorde hath not sent them. Vayne vysions haue ye sene, and spoken false prophecyes, when ye saye: the Lorde hathe spoken it, where as I neuer sayde it.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: Wycause B
youre wordes be vayne, and ye seke oute lyes. Beholde, I wyll vpon you, sayeth the Lorde.

Myne

Myne handes shal come vpon the prophetes that loke out vayne thynges, and preache lyes: they shal not be in the councel of my people, nor wrytten in the boke of the house of Israel, neyther shall they come in the lande of Israel: that ye maye knowe how that I am the Lorde God And that for bycause: they haue dysceyued my Jere.viii.b people, * and told them of peace, where no peace was. One setteth vp a walle, and they dawbe it wyth loose claye.

Therfore tell them whyche dawbe it wyth vntempered morter, that it shall fal. * For there Mayth.vii.c shall come a great shower of rayne, great hayle stones shal fall vpon it, & a sore stormе of wynd shall breake it, so shall the wall come downe.
Shal it not then be sayd vnto you: where is now the morter that ye dawbed it wyth all: Therfore thus sayeth ꝑ Lord God: I wyl breake out in my wrothful displeasure with a stormy wind so that in myne anger there shal come a myghty shower of rayne, and hayle stones in my wrath, to destroye wythall.

℄ As for the wall that ye haue dawbed wyth vntempered morter, I wyll breake it downe, make it euen wyth the groũde: so that the foundacion therof shall remoue, and it shall fall, yea and ye youre selues shall perysshe in the myddest therof: to learne you for to knowe, that I am the Lorde: Thus wil I perfourme my wrath vpon thys wall, and vpon them that haue dawbed it with vntempered morter, and then wyl I saye vnto you: the wal is gone, and the dawbers are awaye. These are ꝑ prophetes of Israel, which prophecye vnto the cytie of Jerusalem, and loke out vysyons of peace for them, wher as no peace is sayeth the Lorde God. Wherfore, (O thou sonne of mã) set thy face agaynst the doughters of thy people, which prophecy out of their owne hertes: and speake thou, prophecy agaynst them and sayethus.

D Thus sayeth ꝑ Lord God: Wo be vnto you, that sowe pyllowes vnder al arme holes, & bolsters vnder the heades both of yonge and old to

℄ The Lorde denyeth his worde to the people for theyr synnes sake. The despysers of the worde doth the Lorde sometyme deceaue by false prophetes. A comforte of them that fled vnto Babylon.

Jere to Ezech.xx.a There resorted * vnto me certayne of the elders of Israel, and sat downe by me. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayeng: thou sonne of man, these mẽ beare theyr vnclẽnes in theyr hertes, and go purposely vpon the stomblinge blocke of theyr owne wyckednesse: shulde I then answere at theyr request? Therfore speake vnto them, and saye: thus sayth the Lorde God: Euery man of the house of Israell, that beareth hys vncleane Idolles in hys herte, purposynge to stomble in his owne wyckednes and cõmeth to a prophet, to enquyre any thynge at me by hym: vnto that man wyl I the Lorde my selfe gyue answere, accordyng to the multytude of his Idolles: that the house of Israel may be snared in theyr owne hertes, because they be cleane gone from me, for theyr abhominacions sakes. Wherfore, tell the house of Israell: thus Ezech.xv.c sayeth the Lorde God: * Be conuerted, forsake your Idolles, and turne your wyues from your fylthynesse, and turne your faces from all youre abhominacions.

B For euery man, (whether he be of the house of Israel or a straunger) that sogeourneth in Israell, whyche departeth fro me, and carryeth Idolles in hys herte, purposynge to go styll from hym ynge in hys owne wyckednesse, and commeth to a prophet, for to aske councell at me therowe hym: vnto that man wyll I the Lorde gyue answere, by myne owne selfe. I wyl set my face agaynst that man, and wyll make hym to be an example for other, yea, and a comen byworde: & wyll roote hym out of my people, that he maye
C iii.re.xxii.b Job.xii.c know howe that I am the Lorde: * and yf that Prophete be deceyued, when he telleth hym a worde: then I the Lorde my selfe haue deceyued that prophete, and wyll stretch out myne hande vpon hym, to roote hym out of my people of Israell: and they both shalbe punyshed for theyr wyckednesse. Accordynge to the synne of him that asketh, shall the synne of the Prophete be: that the house of Israell be led nomore from me therowe errours, and be nomore defyled in their wyckednesse: but that they maye be my people, and I theyr God, sayeth the Lorde God.

D And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, when the lande synneth agaynste me, and goeth forth in wyckednesse: I wyll stretche out myne hande vpon
Ezec.xiv.b and.xlvi.b Jere.xv.a it, * and destroye all the prouision of theyr bread and sende derth vpon them, to destroy man and beast in the lande. ‡ And though Noe, Daniel, & Job, these thre men were amonge them, yet shal they in theyr ryghteousnesse delyuer, but theyr owne soules, sayeth the Lorde God.

E Yf I bringe noysome beastes into ꝑ lande to waste it vp, and it be so desolate, ꝑ no man may go therin for beastes: yf these thre mē were also in the lande, as truly as I lyue (sayth the Lorde God) they shall saue neyther sonnes nor doughters, but be onely delyuered them selues: and as for the lande, it shalbe wast.

F Or yf I brynge a swerde into the lande, and charge it to go thorowe the lāde: so that I slay downe man and beast in it, and yf these thre men were therin: As truly as I lyue (sayth the Lord God) they shal deliuer nether sonnes nor doughters, but only be saued them selues. Yf I sende a pestilence into the lande, and poure oute my sore indignacion vpon it in bloud, so that I rote out of it both man and beast. And yf Noe, Daniel & Job were therin, as truely as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde God) they shal delyuer nether sonnes nor doughters, but saue theyr owne soules in theyr righteousnes. Moreouer, thus sayth ỹ lord god

Beholde there shalbe a remnaunt saued therin, which shal bryng forth theyr sonnes and doughters. Beholde, they shal come forth vnto you, and ye shall se theyr waye, and what they take in hande; and ye shalbe comforted, as touchynge all the plages that I haue brought vpon Jerusalem. They shall comforte you, when ye se theyr waye and workes: and ye shal knowe, howe that it is not without a cause that I haue done so agaynst Jerusalē, as I dyd sayeth the Lorde God.

The.xv. Chapter:

¶ As the vnprofytable wood of the vyne tree is cast into the fyre, so sayeth he that Jerusalem shalbe brente.

A The worde of the Lord came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man: What cōmety of the vyne amonge al other trees: and of the wylde vyne stocke amōge al other tymber of the groue Do men take wood of it, to make any worke wal? Or may there a nayle be made of it, to hange any thynge vpō? beholde, it is caste in the fyre to be brent, the fyre consumeth both the endes of it the myddle is brent to asshes. And therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: Lyke as I caste the vyne into ỹ fyre for to be brent, as other trees of the wood: Euen so wyl I do wyth them that dwel in Jerusalem and set my face agaynst them: they shall go out from the fyre, and yet the fyre shall consume thē

The.xvi. Chapter.

¶ The prophete entendyng to speake of the abhominacions of Jerusalem, doth fyrst shewe the benefites of God toward it. Jerusalem is reproued of vnkyndnesse, for her fornicari on wyth Idolles. He vseth the wyckednes of other people in comparyson of the synnes of Jerusalem. The cause of the abhominacyons into whych the Sodomytes fell. Mercy is promysed to the repentaunt.

A Gayne the worde of the Lord spake vnto me saying: Thou sonne of man shew the cytie of Jerusalem their abhominacions, and say: thus sayeth ỹ Lord God vnto Jerusalē: Thy progeny and kynred came out of the lande of Cana an thy father was an Amorite, thy mother a Cethite, thus was ỹ maner of thy birth. In the day of thy byrth when thou wast borne, ỹ stryng of thy nauel was not cut of: ỹ waste not bathed in water to make ỹ cleane: Thou wast nether rubbed wt salt, nor swadled in cloutes. No man regarded ỹ so much, as to do any of these thynges for the, for to shewe the such fauour, but ỹ wast vtterly cast out vpon ỹ felde: yea, despysed wast thou in the day of thy byrth. Then came I by ỹ and saw the troden downe in thyne owne bloud and sayde vnto the: Lyue, although thou be defyled in thyne owne bloud, yea, euē I (I tell the) sayde vnto the lyue, although thou be defyled in thyne owne bloud. * So I plāted the, as ỹ blossom of ỹ felde thou arte growen vp, and waxen greate: thou hast gotten a maruelous pleasaunt beuty, thy brests are come vp, thy heere is good lye growē, where as ỹ wast naked & bare afore. Ca.xxiii.a Jere.xii.c

Nowe when I wente by the, and loked vpon
B the: behold, the tyme was come: yee, euen ỹ time to wowe the. Then spred I my clothes ouer ỹ to couer thy dishonestye: yee: I made an oth vnto ỹ * and maryed my selfe with the (sayth the Lord God) & so thou becamest myne owne. Thē washed I the with water, and pourged thy bloude from the. I anoynted the with oyle, I gaue the chaūge of raymentes, I made the shoes of Taxus lether: I gyrded the about wyth whyte silke: I clothed ỹ wyth kerchefes, I decked the wyth costly apparel, I put rynges vpon thy fyngers: a chayne about thy necke, spanges vpō thy fore heade, earerynges vpon thyne eares, & set a beautyful crowne vpon thyne heed. Thus wast thou decte wyth syluer and gold, & thy rayment was of fyne whyte silke of needle worke, and of dyuers colours. Thou dydest eat nothyng but simnels, honye and oyle: maruelous goodly wast ỹ and beutyful: yee euen a very quene waste thou. Jere.iii.a & Ose.xii.c

In so muche ỹ thy beuty was spoken of amōge C the Hethen, for thou wast excellent in my beuty which I put vpon the, sayth ỹ Lorde God. But thou hast put confidence in thyne owne beuty, & playde the harlot: when thou hadst gotten the a name. Thou hast cōmytted whoredome with al that went by ỹ, and hast fulfylled theyr desyres: yea, thou hast taken thy garmētes of diuerse colours, & decte thyne altares therwith, wherupō thou myghtest fulfyll thyne whoredome, * and Jere.ii.d. and.b.b of such a fashion, as neuer was done, nor shalbe
* The goodly ornamētes & iewels which I gaue the of myne owne gold & syluer, hast thou taken, and made the mens ymages therof, and cōmytted whoredome wythall. Eze.xvi.a Ose.ii.b and.xiii.a Ezec.xvi.b and.xi.b

Thy garmentes of dyuerse colours hast thou taken, and decte them therwith: myne oyle and incense hast thou sette before them. My meate whych I gaue the, as symnels, oyle, honye: (to fede the withall) that hast ỹ set before them

Leu.xviii.c and.xx.a Deu.xviii.b and.xxxii.c Iere.bii.d Ezech.xx.b Psal.cb.a passe sayeth the Lorde God: * Thou hast taken thyne owne sonnes and doughters, whom thou haddest begotten vnto me: and these haste thou offered vp vnto them, to be theyr meate. Is this but a smal whoredome of thyne (thinkest thou) that thou slayest my chyldren, and geuest them ouer, to be brente vnto them? And yet in all thy abhominacyõs and whoredomes, thou hast not remembred the dayes of thy youth, how naked and bare ỹ wast at that tyme, and trodẽ downe in thyne owne blonde. After all these thy wyckednesses (wo wo vnto the, sayeth the Lorde)

(thou hast builded thy stewes and brothel houses in euery place)

Thou hast buylt hye places: yea, at the heade of euery strete hast thou buylded the an aultare.

Thou hast made thy beuty to be abhorred, thou hast layd out thy legges to euery one that came by, and multiplyed thyne whoredome. * Thou Eze.xxiii.a hast cõmytted fornicacyon with the Egipcians thy neyghbours, whyche had muche flesshe: and thus hast ỹ encreased thine whordome, to anger me. Behold, I dyd stretch out myne hande ouer Ezec.xlii.b b.d.xliii.c the, and dyd * mynyshe thy store of fode, & delyuered the ouer into the wylles of the Philistines thyne enemyes, whyche are ashamed of thy abhominable waye.

Eze.xxiii.a * Thou hast played the whore also wyth the Assyrians, because thou waste insatiable: Yea, thou hast (I saye) with them played the harlot, and yet haddest not thou ynough. Thus haste thou furthermore cõmytted thy fornicacion frõ the land of Canaan vnto the Chaldees, and yet thy lust not satisfyed. Howe obstinate is thyne herte (sayth the Lorde God) seynge thou dost al these workes of an erraunt whore: buyldynge thy stewes at the heade of euery strete, and thy brodell houses in all places? Thou hast not ben as another whore that holdeth scorne of a small rewarde, but a wyfe that breaketh wedlocke, & taketh ỏther in steade of her husbande. Gyftes are gyuẽ to al other whores, but thou gyuest rewardes vnto all thy louers: & offerest them gyftes, to come vnto the out of all places, and to cõmytte fornication with the. It is come to passe wyth the in thy whoredoms contrary to the vse of other wemen: yea, there hath no suche fornicacion bene commytted after the, seynge ỹ thou proferest gyftes vnto other, and no rewarde is geuen the: thys is a contrary thynge.

Therfore, heare the worde of the Lorde, O ỹ harlot, thus sayth the Lorde God: For so much as thou hast sette forth thy youth to whordome and dyscouered thy shame, thorowe thy whoredome wyth al thy louers, and with al the ydols of thy abhominacyons in the blonde of thy chyldren, * whome thou hast geuen them: Behold, xiii.xx.xxi.a and.xxii.c therfore I wyll gather together all thy louers, vnto whom thou hast made thy selfe comẽ: yea and all them whome thou fauourest, & euery one that thou hatest I wyl (I saye) gather them together roũde about the: * and wyl dyscouer thy Ezech.xvi.a Nau.iii.a Eze.xxiii.f shame before thẽ ỹ they may se al thy fylthynes

* Moreouer, I wyl iudge the as a breaker of wedlocke and a murtherer, and recompence the thin owne blond in wrath & gelousy I wil geue the ouer into theyr power, ỹ shall breake downe E thy stues, and destrope thy brodell houses: they shall stryppe the out of thy clothes, all thy fayre & beutyful iewels shall they take from the, and so let the syt naked & bare: * yee, they shal bryng Leu.xx.b the comen people vpon the which shall stone the and slay the downe wyth theyr swordes. They * shall burne vp thy houses, and punyshe the in iiii.Regũ. the syght of many wemen. Thus wyll I make xxb.b thy whordom to ceasse, so that thou shalt geue out no more rewardes. Shuld I make my wrath to be styl, take my gelousye frõ the, be contente and nomore to be dyspleased? seynge thou remẽbrest not the dayes of thy youth, but hast prouoked me to wrath in all these thynges? Beholde therfore, I wyl bryng thyne owne wayes vpon thyne heade, sayth the Lord God: howbeit I neuer dyd vnto the accordynge to thy wyckednes and all thy abhomynacions. Beholde, al they ỹ vse comen prouerbes, shal vse this prouerbe also agaynst the suche a mother, such a doughter.

Thou art euen thy mothers owne doughter that hath cast of her husbande and her chyldren: Yea, thou art the syster of thy systers, which for soke theyr husbandes and theyr chyldren. Your * mother is a Cethyte, and your father an Amorite. Ezr.xvi.a Thyne eldest syster is Samaria, she & her doughters that dwel vpon thy left hande.

But thy yongest syster that dwelleth on thy F ryght hãde is Sodoma and her doughters. Yet haste ỹ not walked after theyr wayes, nor done after theyr abhominaciõs: but thou stodest a lytel and very smal tyme, and in all thy wayes ỹ hast bene more corrupt then they. As truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lorde God: Sodoma thy syster with her doughters, hath not done so euell, as ỹ and thy doughters. Behold, * the synnes of thy Gene.xiii.c syster Sodoma were these: Pryde, fulnesse of & xviii.c. & meate, aboũdaunce and ydelnesse: these thynges xix.b.c had she and her doughters. Besydes that they reached not theyr hande to the poore and nedye, but were proud, and dyd abhominable thinges before me: therfore I toke them awaye, as pleased me. Nether hath Samaria done halfe of thy synnes, * yea thou hast exceaded thẽ in wyckednesse: In so muche that in comparison of all the Iere.iii.c abhominacions which thou hast done thou hast made thy systers good wemen. Therfore thou (which dideste condempne thy syster) beare thyn owne shame, for thyne owne offences, that thou hast cõmytted, more obhominable then they did which in dede are more ryghteous then thou art be thou (I say) ashamed, and bear thy shameful rebuke: seyng that thou hast proued thy systers in comparyson of the ryghtwyse.

As for theyr captiuitie, namely the captiuite of Sodoma, and her doughters: ỹ captiuitie of Samaria & her doughters: I wyl bryng thẽ a gayne, so wyl I also bryng agayne thy captyuitie amonge them: that thou mayst take thyne owne confusion vpon the, and be ashamed of al that thou hast done, & to comforte them. Thus thy systers (namely) Sodoma and her doughters: Samaria and her doughters with thy selfe and thy doughters shalbe brought agayne to your olde estate. When thou wast in thy pryde, and before thy wyckednes came to lyght: ye wol dest not heare speake of thy syster Sodoma, vn-tyl the tyme that the Syriās wyth al theyr tow nes, and the Philistynes with all that lye roūde aboute them, brought the to shame and confusi on: that thou myghtest beare thyne owne fylthi nes and abhominacion sayeth the Lorde.

For thus sayeth the Lorde God, I shulde (by ryght) deale wyth the, as thou hast done. Thou hast despysed the oth, and broken the couenaūt Neuertheless, I wyll remember the couenaunt that I made wyth the in thy youth, in so muche that it shalbe an euerlastyng couenaunt: so that thou also remēbre thy wayes, and be ashamed of them: then shalt thou receaue of me thy elder and ponger systers, whō I wil make thy dough Jere. xxi. e Ezech. xvi. b ters, and that beside thy couenaunte. * And so wyl I renue my couenaunt wyth the, that thou mayst knowe that I am the Lorde, that ye mayst thynke vpō it: be ashamed, & excuse thyne owne confusyon nomore: when I haue forgeuē the, all that thou hast done, sayethe the Lorde God.

¶ The parable of the two Aegles.

And the worde of ye Lorde came vnto me Ezech. xxiiij. a saying: Thou son of man: put forth
* a darke speakyng & a parable, vnto the house of Israel, & saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde God. There came a Dan. vii. a great * Aegle wyth great wynges: yea, wyth a myghtye longe body, & full of fethers of dyuers colours vpon the mounte of Libanus, and toke the hyest braūche from a Cedre tree, and brake of the toppe of hys twygge, and carped it into ye lande of Canaan, and set it in a citie of marchaū tes. He toke also of the seede of the lande, & planted it in a fruteful grounde, he brought it vnto great waters, & set it as a wyllow tree therby.
Thē dyd it growe, and was a great vyne stock, but lowe by the grounde whose braunches turned into it selfe, and the rootes of it were fastened vnder it, thus there came of it a vyne, and it brought forth blossoms, & spred out braūches.

25 But there was another Aegle, a greate one, whyche had great wynges & many fethers: and beholde, the rotes of this vyne had an hōger after hym, & spred out hys braunches toward him that he myght water her wyth ye ortchyard that he had planted. Neuertheles, it was plāted vp-on a good grounde beside great waters: so that (by reason) it shulde haue brought out braunches and frute, and haue bene a goodlye vyne.

Speake thou therfore, thus sayth the Lorde ¶ God: Shal thys vyne prosper? shal not hys roo tes be plucked oute, hys frute be broken of, hys grene braunches wyther and fade away? yea, without ether stroge arme or many people, shal it be plucked vp by ye rotes. Behold, it was plan ted: shal it prospere therfore? Shal it not be dry-ed vp and wythered: yea, euen in ye shutynge out of his blossoms, assone as ye east wind bloweth?

Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vn-D to me saying: Speake to ye froward housholde:
knowe ye not, what these thynges do syguifye?
Tell them: Behold, * ye kyng of Babilon came iiij. Regum xxiiij. c to Jerusalem, and toke the kynge and his pryn-ces, and led them to Babilon. He toke of the kin ges sede, and made a couenaunt wyth hym, and toke an othe of hym: The prynces of the lande toke he wyth hym also, that the lande myght be holden in subiection, and not to rebell, but kepe the couenaunte, and fulfyll it. But he fell from hym, and sente hys ambassytours into Egypte, that he myghte haue horses and muche people.

Shulde that prospere? Shulde he be kepte E safe, that doth suche thynges? Or shulde he escape, that breaketh hys couenaunt? As truly as I lyue sayth the Lorde God, he shall dye at Ba bylon, in the place where the kynge dwelleth, ye made hym kynge: whose othe he hath despysed, and whose couenaunt he hath broken. Neyther shall Pharao wyth hys great hoost and multy-tude of people, mayntayne hym in the warre: whē they cast vp dytches, & set vp bulwarkes to de-stroye muche people: For seynge he hath despysed the othe, and broken the couenaunte (where as he yet gaue his hande therupon) and done all these thynges, he shal not escape.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: As tru F ly as I lyue, I wyl bringe myne othe ye he hath despysed, and my couenaunt that he hath brokē vpon hys owne heade. * I wyll cast my nette a-Ezec. xii. b and. xxxii. a boute hym, and catch hym in my parne. To Ba bylon wyl I cary hym, there wyl I punysh him because of the great offēce that he made me. As for those that flee from hym out of the host, they shalbe slayne wyth ye sweard. The reskoue shal be scatered towarde al the wyndes: and ye shall knowe that I the Lorde haue spoken it.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyl also take G a braunche from an hye Cedre tree, and wyll set it, and take the vppermost twygge, that yet is but tender, and plante it vpon an hye hyll: Na mely, vpon the hye hyll of Syon wyll I plante it, that it may bringe forth twygges, and geue frute, and be a great Cedre tree: so that all maner of foules maye buylde in it, and make theyr neastes vnder the shadowe of hys braunches.

And all the trees of the felde shal knowe that I the Lorde haue brought downe the hye tree, & set the low tree vp: that I haue dryed vp ye grene tree, & made the drye tre to florysshe. Euen I the Lorde ye spake it, haue also brought it to passe.

Shal thys man lyue? He shall not lyue. Seyng he hath done all these abhominacyons, he shal dye, his bloud shalbe vpon him ¶ Nowe yf thys mã get a sonne also, that seeth all hys fathers synnes, wheych he hath done: and feareth, neyther doth such lyke: Namely, he eateth not vpon the moũtaynes. he lyfteth not his eyes vp to the Idols of Israel: he defyleth not his neyghbours wyfe: he vexeth no man: he kepeth no mans pledge: he nether spoyleth nor robbeth any man: he dealeth his meat with the hongry: clotheth the naked: he oppresseth not ỹ poore he receaueth no vsury, nor any thynge ouer: he kepeth my lawes, and walketh in my commaũdementes. Thys mã shal not dye in his fathers synne, but shall lyue wythout fayle. And yet saye ye: Wherfore then shuld not this sonne beare hys fathers synne? ¶ The.xix. Chapter.

¶ The captyuyte of Jeohahaz and of Jehoachin is spoken of vnder thy tyrans whelpes, and by the lyon. He setteth oute the prosperyte of the cytye of Jerusalem that is past, and ỹ mysery therof that is present.

BVt thou sõne of mã mourne thou for A the prynces of Israel, and say. Wherfore lay thy mother ỹ lyoneesse amõge the lyons, and norished her põge ones amõge the lyons whelpes? One of her whelpes she brought vp, and it became a lyon, it learned to spoyle, and to deuoure folke. The heathen heard of hym, and toke hym in theyr nets, and brought hym in chaynes vnto ỹ lãde of Egypt.
Nowe when the damme sawe, that all her hope and comforte was away, she toke another of her whelpes, and made a lyon of hym: wheych wente amonge the lyons, and became a fearse lyon: learned to spoyle and to deuoure folke: he destroyed theyr palaces, and made theyr Cyties waste. I Exo.xxiii.a

B Thus sayeth the Lozde God: * In the daye Exod.xx. b when I chose Israel, ꝑ lyft vp myne hande vpõ the sede of the house of Jacob, ꝑ shewed my selfe vnto them in the lande of Egypte: Yea, when I lyft vp myne hande ouer them, ꝑ sayd: I am the Lozde your God, euen in the daye that I lyft vp myne hande ouer them, to bzynge them out of ꝑ lande of Egypte, into a lande that I had pzouyded foz them, which floweth with mylke and hony, and is a pleasaunt lande amonge all other.

* Deut.xii.a Then sayd I vnto them. * Caste awaye euerye man the abhominaciõs that he hath befoze hym and defyle not youre selues wyth the ydolles of Egypte, foz I am the Lozde your God.

C But they rebelled against me, and wold not folowe me: to caste awaye euery man the abhominacions of hys eyes, and to forsake the ydols of Egypte. Then I made hym to poure myne indignacion ouer them, and to satisfye my wzath vpon them: yea, euen in the middest of the lande of Egypt. But I wold not do it: foz my names sake: that it shulde not be vnhalowed befoze the heathen, amonge whom they dwelt, ꝑ amonge whome I shewed my selfe vnto them, ꝑ I wold bzynge them out of the lande of Egypte. Yet I wolde not do it, foz my names sake, lest it shuld be dishonoured befoze the heathen, from the whych I had caryed them awaye. But I swoze vnto them in ꝑ wyldernesse that I wold not bzynge them into ꝑ lãde, which I gaue them: a lãde that floweth wyth mylke ꝑ hony, and is a pleasure of al landes: and that be cause they refused my lawes, and walked not in my cõmaundemences, but had vnhalowed my Sabbothes, foz their hert was gone after their ydols. Neuertheles, myne eye spared them, so ꝑ I wold not vtterly slaye them, ꝑ consume them in the wyldernesse. Neuertheleſſe, I withdzewe E my hãde foz my names sake, lest it shulde be vnhalowed amõge the hethen, befoze whom I had bzought them fozth I lyft vp myne hande ouer them also in the wildernesse, that I wold scater them amonge the heathen, and strawe them amonge the nacions, because they had not kepte my lawes, but cast aside my cõmaundementes, vnhalowed my Sabbothes, and lyfte vp theyr eyes to theyr fathers Idols. Wherfoze I gaue them also cõmaundementes not good, ꝑ lawes thozowe the whych they shulde not lyue, and I vnhalowed them in theyr owne gyftes * (when I appoynted foz my selfe all theyr fyrst bozne) to make them desolate: that they myght knowe howe that I am the Lozde.

But she encreased styll in whordome for when she sawe men paynted vpon the wall, the ymages of the Chaldees set forth with fresh colours, with fayre gyrdles about them, & goodly bonettes vpō theyr heedes, lokyng all lyke princes (after the maner of the Babylonyans, and Chaldees in theyr owne lande where they were borne) immediatly, as soone as she sawe them, she brent in loue vpō them, and sent messengers for them into the lande of the Chaldees.

Nowe when the Babylonians came to her, they laye with her, and defyled her with theyr whordome, and so was she polluted with them. And when her lust was abated from them *her Esa.xlvii.a Naum.iii.b Ezec.xxi.b whordome and shame was discouered and sene: then my hert forsoke her, lyke as my herte was gone from her syster also. Neuertheles, she vsed her whordome euer the longer the more, and remembred the dayes of her youth, wherin she had Ezec.xxi.c played the harlote in the lande of Egypte: *she brent in lust vpon them, whose flesh was lyke the flesh of Asses, and theyr seed lyke the seed of horses. Thus thou hast renued the fylthynes of thy youth, when thy louers brused thy pappes, and marred thy breastes in Egypt.

Therfore (O Oholibah) thus sayth the Lord God: I wyll rayse vp thy louers (with whome D thou hast satisfyed thy lust) agaynst the, and gather them togyther rounde about the: namelye, the Babylonians, and all the Chaldees, rulers, myghtie men and tyrauntes, with all the Assirians: all yonge and fayre louers prynces and lordes, knyghtes & gentlemen, whiche be all good horsemen. These shall come vpon the with horses, charettes, and a great multitude of people: which shalbe harnessed about the on euery syde: with brest plates, shyldes and helmettes: I wyl punysh the before thē: yea, they them selues shal punysh the according to theyr owne iudgemēt I wyl put my gelousy vpō the, so that they shal deale cruelly with the. They shal cut of thy nose and thyne eares, and the remnaunt shal fal thorowe ỹ swerd. They shal carry away thy sonnes and doughters, & the residue shalbe brent in the fyre. They shal stryp the out of thy clothes and carry thy costly iewels away with them.

Thus wyl I make an ende of thy fylthynesse E and whordome, which thou hast brought out of the lande of Egypte: so that thou shalte tourne thyne eyes nomore after thē and cast thy minde nomore vpon Egypt. For thus sayth ỹ Lorde: beholde, I wyl delyuer the into the handes of them, whom thou hatest: yea, euen into the handes of them with whom thou hast fulfylled thy lust which shal deale cruelly with the:

All thy labour shal they take with them, and leaue the naked and bare, and thus the shame of thy fylthy whordome shall come to lyghte. All these thynges shall happen vnto the bycause of thy whordome which thou hast vsed amonge ỹ Gentiles, with whose ydolles thou hast defiled thy selfe. Thou hast walked in the waye of thy syster, therfore wyl I gyue her cup in thy hand.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Thou shalte drinke of thy systers cuppe, howe depe and farre

soeuer it be to ỹ botome. Thou shalt be laughed to scorne, and had as greatlye in derision, as is possible. Thou shalt be ful of dronkennesse and sorowe, for the cuppe of thy syster Samaria is a cuppe of destruction and wastynge: the same shalt thou drynke, and suppe it out euen to the dregges: yea thou shalt eat vp the brokē peces of it, and so teare thyne owne brestes. For euen I haue spoken it, sayth the Lorde God.

F Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God. For lomoche as thou hast forgotten me and cast me a syde behynde the, so beare now thyne owne fil thinesse and whordome. The Lorde sayd moreouer vnto me: Thou son of man, wylt thou not reproue Oholah and Oholibah? Shewe them theyr abhominaciōs namely that they haue bro ken theyr wedlocke, and stayned theyr handes with blonde: yea, euen with theyr ydolles haue they commytted aduoutry * and offred them by the fyre theyr owne chyldren (to be deuoured) whom they had borne vnto me. Yea, & this haue they done vnto me also: they haue defiled my sā tuary in the same day, and haue vnhalowed my Sabboth. For when they had slayne their chil dren for theyr ydolles, they came the same daye into my sanctuary to defyle it.

Lo, thus haue they done in my house: Beside all this, thou hast sente thy messengers for men out of farre coūtries: and when they came thou hast bathed & paynted thyne eyes with colours trymmed and set forth thy selfe of the best fas sion: thou sattest vpon a goodly bed and a table spred before the, wher vpon thou hast set myne * insence and myne oyle.

G Then was there greate cheare with her to obtayne peace, and though with those men ma ny men came, yet were ther also brought mē of Saba from the wildernesse: which gaue thē bra celettes vpon theyr handes: and sette glorious crownes vpon theyr heedes: and I sayde vnto her: ỹ seing she was stryken in age in her whor domes: now shall her fornicacyons come to an ende with her. And they went into her as vnto a cōmen harlot. Euē so went they (I say) to O holah and Oholibah those fylthy women. O al ye ỹ loue vertue and ryghtousnesse, iudge them, punysh them: * as aduoutrers and murtherers, ought to be iudged and punyshed. For they are breakers of wedlocke, and the blond is in theyr handes. Wherfore thus sayth the Lord God: I wyll bringe a greate multitude of people vpon them & make them be scatred and spoyled: these shal stone them, and gore them with theyr swer des. They shal slay their sonnes and doughters and burne vp theyr houses with fyre.

Thus wyl I destroy all suche fylthinesse out of the lande: that all women may learne, not to do after your vnclennesse.

And so they shall laye theyr fylthinesse vpon your owne selues, and ye shalbe punished for the synnes that ye haue cōmitted with your ydols, and ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde God.

¶ He proueth the tyrynge of Jerusalem by a parable of a sethyng pot. The parable of Ezechiels wyfe being dead whych he after expoundeth.

AN the nynthyere, in the tēth moneth the tenth daye of the moneth came ỹ word of the Lorde vnto me, saying: O thou sonne of man, wryte vp the name of this day: yea, euen the houre of this present day, when the kyng of Babilon set him selfe agaynst Jerusalē. Shewe that ob stinat household * a parable and speake vnto thē Thus sayth the Lorde God: Get the a * pot, set it on, and power water into it: put all the peces togyther in it all the good peces: the loyne and the shulder, and fyll it with the best bones. Take one of ỹ best shepe, and an heape of bones with all: let it boyle well, and let the bones seeth well therin. With that sayde the Lorde God on this maner. * Wo be vnto the bloudy cytie of ỹ pot, where vpon the rustinesse hangeth, & is not yet scoured away. Take out the peces that are in it one after an other: there neade no lottes be caste therfore, for the blond is yet in it. Upō a playne dyrt stone hath she poured it, and not vpon the grounde that it myght be couered with duste. And therfore haue I letten her poure her bloude vpon a playne dyrt stony rocke, bicause it shuld not be hyd, and that I myght bring my wrath ful indignacion and vengeaunce vpon her.

Wherfore thus sayth the Lorde God: O wo be vnto that bloudthyrstie citie, for whom euen I my selfe wyll make a great fyre and set moche wood, and kyndle the fyre, and seeth the flesh, & spyce the pot, so ỹ the very bones shalbe brent. Moreouer, I wyl set the pot emptye vpon the coles, so that his metall shalbe brent, and mol ten also for heate, and the filthinesse of it shalbe cōsumed. Thou takest great payne this to defyle thy self And it wyll not be pourged from the exceadynge drosse in it: but thorowe fyre shall the drosse of it be purifyed. In thy filthinesse euen in the mis chie uous dedes thou dost contynue, and bicause thy filthinesse is abhominable, for I haue clēsed the but thou art not clensed. Thou shalt not be pur ged from thyne vnclēnesse til I haue poured my wrathful indignacion vpō the. Euen I ỹ Lord haue so deuysed. Yea, it is come therto alreadye that I wyll do it: I wyll not goo backe, I wyll not spare, I wil not be entreated: but accordyng to thy wayes and ymaginacions thou shalt be punyshed: sayth the Lorde God. And the word of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man beholde, I wyll take away the pleasure of thyne eyes with a plage: yet shalte thou ney ther mourne nor wepe, nor water thy chekes: therfore thou mayest mourne by thy selfe alone but vse no deedly lamentacion. Hold on thy bo net, and put on thy shoes vpō thy feet, couer not thy face, & eate no mourners breed. So I spake vnto the people bytymes in the mornynge, and at euen my wyfe dyed: then vpon the nexte mo rowe, I did as I was cōmaunded, and ỹ people sayde vnto me, wylt thou not tell vs what this signifieth toward vs, for this thou dost for our sake. spende my Sanctuarye, euen the glory of your power, the pleasure of your eyes, and the thyng that ye loue: your sonnes and doughters whom ye haue lefte shal fall thorowe the swerde.

Lyke as I haue done, so shall ye do also: Ye G shall not hyde your faces, ye shall eat no mourners breed: youre bonnettes shall ye haue vpon your heedes, and shoes vpon your feet. ¶ The worde of the Lorde vpon the sonnes of Ammon, which reioyced at the fall of Jerusalem. Agaynst Moab and Seyr. agaynst Idumea, agaynst the Philistynes.

A The worde of the Lorde came vnto me saying: Thou sonne of man, let thy face agaynste ỹ *Ammonites, prophecy vpō them, and saye vnto the Ammonytes: heare the worde of the Lorde God. Thus saeyth the Lorde God: For somoche as thou speakest ouer my sanctuarye. A, ha, I trowe it be now suspended: and ouer ỹ lande of Israel: I trowe it be now desolate: yea, and ouer the house of Juda, I trow they be now led away prisoners: Behold, I wyl delyuer the to the people of the east, that they may haue the in possessiō: these shall set theyr castels and houses in the. They shall eate thy frute, and dryncke vp thy mylke. As for Rabath, I wyll make of it a stall for camels and of Ammon a shepefolde and ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

B For thus sayth the Lorde God: In somoche as thou haste clapped with thyne handes, and stāped with thy feet: yea, reioyced in thyne hert ouer the lande of Israel with despite: beholde, I wyl stretche oute myne hande ouer the also, and delyuer the, to be spoyled of the heythen, & rote the out from among the people, and cause the to be destroyed out of all landes: yea, I wyll make the to be layd waste, that thou mayst know that I am the Lorde.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: For somoche as Esa.xv.xvi Ierxlviii.a Soph.ii.b *Moab and Seir do saye: As for the house of Juda, it is but lyke as all other Gentyles be. Therfore beholde, I wyll open the syde af Moab, and take away theyr strength theyr cyties, and chefe coostes of theyr lande, whiche are the pleasures of thy countrye. As namely, Bethiesimoth, Baalmon, and Cariathaim, these wyll I open vnto them of the east, that they may fall vpon the Ammonites, and wyll gyue them in possession, so that the Ammonites shall nomore be had in remembraunce amonge the heythen. Euen thus wyll I punysh Moab also that they maye knowe how that I am the Lorde.

Moreouer thus sayth the Lorde God. Be- C cause that Edom hath auenged and eased hym selfe vpon the house of Juda, & hath done great offence, and auenged him selfe vpon them therfore thus sayth the Lorde: I wyll reache out my hande vpon Edom: and take awaye man and beast out of it. From Theman vnto Dedā wyl I make it desolate: they shalbe slayne with the swerde thorowe my people of Israel wyll I auenge me agayne vpon Edom, they shal handle hym accordyng to my wrath and indignaciō, so that they shall knowe my vengeaunce sayth the Lorde God. ¶ The.xxvi. Chapter.

¶ He prophecyeth that Tyrus shalbe ouerthrowen because it reioyced at the destruction of Jerusalem: The wōdrynge and astonnyshment of the marchauntes for the destruction of Tyrus.

A It happened, that in the eleuenth yere, the fyrst daye of the moneth, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, bycause *ỹ Tyre hath spoken vpon Jerusalē. A ha, now I trowe the portes of the people be broken: and the tourned vnto me: for nowe that she is destroyed, I shal be fylled. Yea, therfore sayth the Lord God: Esa.xxiii.a Jer.xlvii.b Eze.xxvij.b xxviii.a

Beholde, O Tyre, I wyll vpon the, I wyll bryng a great multitude of people agaynst the lyke as when the see aryseth with his waues: These shall breake the walles of Tyre, and cast downe her towers: I wyll scrape the grounde from her, and make her a bare stone: yea, as the dryinge place where the fyshers hange vp their nettes by the see syde. Euen I haue spoken it sayeth the Lorde God. The Gentyles shall spoyle her: her doughters vpon the felde shall perysshe with the swearde, that they maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

For thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyl bryng hyther Nabuchodonozor (which B is the kyng of Babilon, and a kyng of kynges) from the north vpon Tyre: with horses, charettes, horsemen, and with a greate multitude of people. Thy doughters that are in the land shal be slaye with the swerd, but agaynst the he shal make bulwerkes, and graue vp dyches aboute the, and lyft vp his shylde agaynst the. His slinges and batelrammes shall he prepare for thy walles, and with his weapōs breake downe thy towers. The dust of his horses shal couer ỹ they shalbe so many, thy walles shal shake at ỹ noyse of the horsemen, charettes, and wheles when he commeth to thy portes, as men do into an open cytie.

cytie. With the houes of his hoꝛse feete shall he treade downe all thy stretes.

C He shall slay the people with the swerde, and breake downe the pyllers of thy strength. They shal wast away thy ryches, and spoyle thy marchaũdyse. Thy walles shall they breake downe and destroy thy houses of pleasure. Thy stones thy timbre & foũdacions shal they cast in ꝓ̃ water. * Thus wyl I bryng the melody of thy sõges, and the voyce of thy mynstrelsye to an ende so that they shall nomoꝛe be herde. I wyll make a bare stone of the: yea, a dryng place foꝛ nettes and thou shalte neuer be buylded agayne: foꝛ euen I the Loꝛd haue spoken it, sayth the Loꝛde God: thus hath the Loꝛd God spoken cõcerning Tyre. The yles shalbe moued at ꝓ̃ noyse of thy fall, & at the crye of thy slayne that shalbe murthered in the. All kynges of the see shall come downe from theyꝛ seates regal: they shal lay awaye theyꝛ roobes, and put of theyꝛ costly clothyng. Yea, with trembling shal they be clothed they shal syt vpon the grounde: they shall be afrayed at thy sodayne fal, and be abasshed at ꝓ̃.

D They shall mourne foꝛ the, and saye vnto the: Thren.i.a Ap.pcalli.c * O thou noble cytie, that hast bene so greatlye occupyed of olde, thou that hast bene ꝓ̃ strongest vpon the see with thyne inhabytours, of whom all men stode in feare. Howe arte thou nowe so vtterly destroyed: Nowe at the tyme of thy fall the inhabitours of the yles: yea and the yles thẽselues shall stande in feare at the ende. Foꝛ thus sayeth the Loꝛde God: when I make the a desolate cytie (as other cyties be, that no man dwell in) and when I bryng the deape vpon the, that great waters maye couer the. Then wyl I cast the downe vnto them that descende into the pyt vnto a people that hath bene longe deed, and set the in a lande that is beneth, lyke the olde wyldernesse, with them whiche go downe to theyꝛ graues, so that no man shall dwell moꝛe in the. And I wyll make the to be nomoꝛe in honoure, in the lande of the lyuyng. I wyl make an end of the, and thou shalte be gone. Thoughe thou be sought foꝛ, yet shalt thou not be found foꝛ euer moꝛe: sayth the Loꝛde God.

C The .xxvii. Chapter.

C The prophet is moued to bewayle the desolation of Tyrus He setteth out the prayse of Tyrus foꝛ the hauntyng of marchauntes thereto.

Ezec.xxi.a xxviii.

THe woꝛd of the Loꝛd came vnto me saying: O thou son of man, make a lamentable cõplaynt vpon * Tyre and saye vpõ Tyre: thou which art a poꝛt of the see, that occupiest with moche people, and many yles: thus speaketh the Loꝛde God, O Tyre, thou haste sayde: what I am a noble citie, thy boꝛders are in the myddest of ꝓ̃ see, and thy buylders haue made the marueloꝰ goodlye. All thy tables haue they made of Cypꝛe trees of ꝓ̃ moũt Sanyꝛ. From Libanus haue they taken Cedꝛe trees, to make ꝓ̃ maستes, and the okes of Basan to make the rowers.

B Thy boꝛdes haue they made of yuory, and of costly wood out of ꝓ̃ yle of Cethym. Thy sayle was of dyuers colours, small nedle woꝛke oute of the lande of Egypt, to hange vpon thy maste and thy hangynges of yelowe sylke, purple, out of the yles of Elisah. They of Sydon and Arnard were thy maryners, and ꝓ̃ wyseست in Tyre were thy shipmasters. The eldest and wyseست at Gebal were they that amended and stopped thy shyppes. All shyppes of the see with theyꝛ shypmen occupyed theyꝛ marchaundyse in the. The Perses, Lidians & Phutens were in thyne host, and helped the to fyght, these hanged vp theyꝛ shyldes and helmettes with the, these set foꝛthe thy beautye.

They of Arnad were with thyne hoost roũde aboute thy walles: and the Pygmenians were C thy watchemen vpon thy towers, these hanged vp theyꝛ quyuers rounde about the walles, and made ꝓ̃ maruelous goodly. Tharsis occupted w̃ the in all maner of wares, in syluer, yꝛon, tynne and leade, and made thy market greate. Iauan Tubal, & Mesech were thy marchaũtes, which bꝛought the men and oꝛnamentes of metall foꝛ thy occuppig. They of the houle of Thogarma bꝛought vnto the at ꝓ̃ tyme of thy marte, hoꝛse, hoꝛsmen and mules. They of * Dedan were thy marchaũtes: and many other yles that occupied with the, bꝛought the wethers, elephant bones, and Pecockes foꝛ a pꝛesent. The Sirians occuppyed w̃ the bycause of thy dyuers woꝛkes, and increased thy marchaundyse, with Smaragdes with scarlet, with nedle woꝛke, with whyte lynen cloth, with sylke, and with chꝛystall.

Juda and the lande of Israel occuppyed with D the, and bꝛought vnto thy markettes wheat of Minith, and Paneg, balme, hony, oyle, and triacle. Damascus also vsed marchaundyse with the in the best wyne of Helbon, and with wol by cause thy occuppying was so greate, & thy wares so many. Dan, Iauan, & Mesal, haue bꝛought vnto thy markettes, yꝛon redy made, with Cassia and Calamus, accoꝛding to thyne occuptig. Dedan occuppyed w̃ the in fayꝛe tapestry woꝛke and cusshyns. Arabia, and all the pꝛinces of Cedar haue occuppyed with the, in shepe, werhers, and gootes.

The marchauntes of Seba and Rema haue E occuppyed also with the, in all costly spyces, in all pꝛecyous stones and golde, which they bꝛought vnto thy markettes. Haran Chene, and Eden, the marchauntes of Saba, Assiria, & Chelmad were all doers with the, and occuppyed with the. In costlye raymente of yelowe sylke, and nedle woꝛke (verye pꝛecyous, and therfoꝛe pacte and bounde togyther with ropes.) Yea, and in cedꝛe wood, at the tyme of thy markettes. The shyppes of Tharsis were the chefe of thy occuppying.

Thus thou art ful, and in great woꝛshyppe, euen in the myddest of the see. Thy robbers shal F bꝛynge the into greate waters, the east wynde shall ouerbeare the in the myddeste of the see, so that thy wares, thy marchaundyse, thy rychesse, thy mariners, thy shyppmasters, thy builders of thy bꝛoken places, thy occupyers (that bꝛought the thynges necessarye) the men of war that are in the, and al the cõmens shal perysh in the myddest of the see, in the daye of thy fall: The suburbes shal shake at the loude crye of the shypmen.

All

All whery men, and all maryners vpon the see, shall leape out of theyr botes, and set thē selues vpon the lande. They shall lyft vp theyr voyce bycause of the & make a lamentable crye. They shall cast dust vpon theyr hedes, and lye downe in the asshes. They shall shaue them selues, and put sakcloth vpon them for thy sake.

G They shall mourne for the with hertfull sorowe and heuy lamentation: yea, they also shal wepe for the. Alas, what cytie hath so bene destroyed in the see, as Tyre is? When thy wares and marchaundyse came from the seas: thou gauest all people ynough. The kynges of ỹ earth hast ỹ made ryche, thorow the multitude of thy wares & occuppyng. But ỹ art now cast downe into the deepe of the see, all thy resorte of people is perysshed with the. All they that dwel in the yles are abasshed at the, and al theyr kynges are afrayed: yea theyr faces haue chaunged colour. The marchaūtes of the nacions wonder at the In that thou arte so cleane brought to nought and commest nomore vp.

¶ The.xxix. Chapter.

¶ The prophecyeth agaynst Pharao. The prophecyeth the desolation of Egypt, and the sparklynge abrode of the Egyptians. The Lorde promyseth that he wyll restore Egypte agayne after xl. yeres. Egypt is the rewarde of kyng Nabuchodonozor for the labour whiche he toke agaynst Tyrus

In the tenth yere vpon the twelueth day of the tēth moneth, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying * O thou sonne of man (set now thy face agaynst Pharao ỹ kyng of Egypt) Prophecy agaynst hym, and agaynst the whole land of Egipt. Speake, and tel hym: thus sayth the Lorde God: beholde, O Pharao thou kyng of Egipt of Egypte, I wyll vpon the thou great dragon that lyest in the waters: thou that sayest: the water is myne, I haue made it my selfe. I wyll put an hoke in thy chawes, and hange all the fysh in thy waters vpon thy scales: after that, I wyll drawe the out of thy waters: yea, and al ỹ fysshe of thy waters that hange vpō thy scales. I wyl cast the out of the drye lande, with the fysshe of thy waters, so that thou shalt lye vpō the felde. Thou shalte not be gathered nor taken vp: but

B shalt be meate for the beastes of the felde, & for the foules of the ayre, that all they which dwell in Egypt maye knowe: that I am the Lorde: bycause thou hast ben a *staffe of reed to the house xxxii. Regum xviii. d ez. xxi. xxvi * Esa. xxxvi. a of Israel: Whē they toke hold of the with theyr hand thou brakest and pyerdest them on euery syde: and yf they leaned vpon the, thou brakest & hurtedest the raynes of theyr backes. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: behold, I wyl bryng a swerde vpon the, and rote out of the both man and beast: Yea, the lande of Egypt shall be desolate and waste, and they shal knowe, that I am the Lorde. Bycause he sayd: the water is myne: I my selfe haue made it. Behold therfore, I wyl vpon the, and vpō thy waters: I wyll make the lande of Egypt waste and desolate and in abashment, from the towre of Syenes vnto the borders of the Morians lande: so that in fourty yeres there shall no foote of man walke there, neyther foote of catel go there, neyther shall it be inhabyted. I wyll make the lande of Egypt to be desolate among other waste countryes, and her cyties to lye voyde fourtye yeres amonge other voyde cyties: And I wyl scatre the Egyptians among the heythen and nacions, and strowe them in the landes about.

C Agayne: thus sayeth the Lorde God *when
Jer. xlvi. e the .xl. yeares are expyred, I wyl gather the Egyptians togyther agayne, out of the nacyons, among whom they were scatred, & wyll bryngе the prisoners of Egypte agayne into the lande of Pathures theyr owne natyue countrye, that they may be there a lowly small kyngdome: yea they shalbe the smallest amonge other kyngdomes, lest they exalt them selues aboue the heythen: for I wyll so mynysh them that they shall nomore rule the heythen. They shall nomore be an hope vnto the house of Israel, neyther prouoke them anye more to wyckednesse, to cause them turne backe, and to folowe them: and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde God:

In the .xxvii. yere, the fyrst daye of the fyrste
D moneth came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon hath made his host, with great trauayle and labour to come before Tyre that euery heed maye be balde, & euery shoulder bare. Yet hath Tyre gyuen neyther him nor his hoost any reward, for ỹ great trauayle that he hath taken there. Therfore thus sayeth ỹ Lorde God: beholde, I wyll gyue the lande in Egypte vnto Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babylon, that he may take away al her substaunce, robbe her robbyes, & spoyle her spoyles to pay his host theyr wages withal. I wyl gyue him the lande of Egypt for his labour, that he toke for me before Tyre. At ỹ same tyme wyll I cause ỹ horne of the house of Israel to growe forth, and open thy mouth agayne among them: that they may knowe, how that I am the Lorde.

C The .xxx. Chapter.

C The destruction of Egypt and of hys cytyes is bewayled.

The worde of the Lorde came moreo- A uer vnto me, sayinge: thou sonne of man, prophecy & speake: thus sayth the Lord God. Mourne, wo worth this daye, for the daye is here, the day of ỹ Lord is come: the darke day of ỹ heythē the houre is at hande. the swearde cōmeth vpon Egypt. When the wounded men fall downe in Egypte, when her people are taken awaye, and when her foundacyons are destroyed, the Morians land shalbe afrayed: yea the Morians land Libia and Lidia, al theyr cōmen people, & Chub and all that be confederate vnto them, shall fall with them thorowe the swerde.

Thus sayth the Lorde: The mayntenyers of B
the lande of Egypte shall fall, the pryde of her power shal come downe euen vnto the towre of Syenes shal they be slayne downe wt the swerd sayeth the Lorde God: amonge other desolate countryes they shalbe made desolate, among other waste cyties they shalbe wasted. And they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I kyndle a fyre in Egypt, and when al her helpers are destroyed. At that tyme shall theyr messengers go forth from me in shyppes, to make the careles Morpans afrayed, and sorowe shall come vpon them accordyng to the daye of Egypt for doubtlesse it shall come.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyl make an C
ende of the people of Egypt thorowe the hande of Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babylon. He and his people with hym: yea, and the cruell tyrauntes of the heythen shall be brought to destroye the lande. They shall drawe oute theyr swerdes vpon Egypte, and fyll the lande full of slayne men. I wyll drye vp theyr floudes of water, and sell the lande into the handes of wicked people. The lande and all that is therein, I wyl destroye thorowe the enemyes. Euen I the Lorde haue sayde it.

And thus sayth the Lorde God: * I wyl de- D
stroye the ydolles, and bryng the ymages of Zach. xiii. a Noph to an ende. There shall no more be a prince of Egipt, and a fearfulnesse wyl I sende into the Egiptians lande. As for Pathures, I wyll make it desolate, and kyndle a fyre in Zoan the cytie. No, I wyll punysshe and poure my wrathful indignacion vpon Sin whiche is the strength of Egypte. All the substaunce of Alexandria wyll I destroye, and kyndle a fyre in Egypte.

Sin shalbe in greate heynesse, Alexandria E shall be rooted out, and Noph shall haue daylye sorowe. The best men of Heliopolys and Bubasto shalbe slayne with the swerd, and caryed awaye captyue. At Caphnis the daye shall be darke, when I breake there the sceptre of ỹ land of Egypte, and when the pompe of her power shall haue an ende. A cloude shall couer her, and her doughters shalbe ledde awaye into captiuitye. This wyll I punysh Egypt, that they may knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

It happened in the eleuenth yeare, vpon the seuenth day of the first moneth, that the Lordes worde came vnto me, sayenge: Beholde, thou sonne of man, I wyll breake the arme of Pharao kynge of Egypte: and lo, it shall not be bounde vp to be healed, nother shall any plaister be layd vpon it, for to ease it, or to make it so stronge, as to holde a swearde. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God. Beholde, I wyll vpon Pharao the kynge of Egypt, and breke his strong arme (yet is it but a broken one) & wyl smyte the swearde out of hys handes.

As for the Egyptians, I wyll scattre them among the heathen, and strowe them in the landes aboute. Agayne I wyll strengthe the arme of the kyng of Babilon, and gyue him a swerde in his hande, but I wyll breake Pharaos arme, so that he shal hold it before him pytcously like a wounded man.

Ye, I wyll stablyshe the kyng of Babilons arme, and the armes of Pharao shal fal downe: that it maye be knowen, that I am the Lorde which gyue the kinge of Babylon my swerde in his hand, that he may drawe it out vpon ỹ lande of Egypt, & that when I scatre the Egipcias amonge the Gentyles, & strowe them in ỹ landes about, they maye knowe, that I am the Lorde.

¶ A comparisō of the prosperite of Pharao wyth the prosperite of the Assirians. He prophecyeth a lyke destruccyon to them both.

Moreouer, it happened in the eleuenth yere, the fyrst daye of the thyrde moneth, that the worde of ỹ Lord came vnto me, sayeng: thou sonne of man, speake vnto Pharao the kyng of Egypt, and to all his people. Whom art thou like in thy greatnes? Beholde Assur was lyke a Cedre tree vpon the mounte of Libanus with fayre braunches: so thycke, that he gaue shadowes, & shote out very hye: hys toppe reached vnto the cloudes. The waters made hym great, and the depe set him vp an hye. Rounde about the rotes of hym ranne there floudes of water, he sent out his lytle ryuers vnto all the trees of the felde. Therfore was he hyer then all the trees of the feld, and thorowe the multitude of waters that he sent frō him, he obtayned many longe braunches. All foules of the ayre made their nestes in his braunches: vnder his bowes gendred all the beastes of the felde, & vnder his shadowe dwelte al people. Fayre & bewtiful was he in his greatnes & in the length of his braunches, for his rote stode beside great waters, no Cedre tree myght hyde hym. In ỹ pleasaunt garden of God, there was no fyre tree like his braunches, the playne trees were not lyke the bowes of hym.

All the trees in the garden of God myght not be compared vnto hym in hys bewty, so fayre & goodly had I made hym wyth the multitude of hys braunches. In so moche that all the trees in the pleasaunt garden of God had enuye at hym.

Therfore thus sayth the Lord God: for so moch as he hath lyft vp hym selfe so hye, and stretched his toppe into the cloudes, and seynge his harte is proude in hys hyghnes, I wyll delyuer him into the handes of the myghtyest among the heathen, whyche shall rote hym out. Accordynge to his wyckednes wyl I cast hym away, ỹ enemye shall destroye hym, and the myghtye men of the heathen shall so scatre hym, that his braunches shall lye vpon all moūtaynes, and in all valeys: his bowes shalbe broken downe to the grounde thorowe out the lande. Then al the people of the lande shall go from his shadowe, and forsake hym. When he is fallen, al the foules of the ayre shall syt vpon hym, and all the wylde beastes of the felde shall go aboute amonge hys braunches so that from henforth, no tree in the water shall attayne to hys hyghnesse, nor reache hys toppe vnto the cloudes, neyther shall anye tree of the water stonde so hye, as he hath done. For vnto death shal they all be delyuered vnder the earth, and go downe to the graue lyke other men.

Moreouer thus sayth the Lorde God: In the daye when he goeth downe to the graue, I wyll cause lamentacion to be made, I wyll couer the depe vpon hym, I wyll staunche his floudes, & the great waters shalbe restrained. I shal cause Libanus to be sorowfull for hys sake, and al the trees of the felde shall be smytten. I wyll make the heathen shake at the sounde of his fal when I cast hym downe to *hell, with them that descende into the pyt. All the trees of Eden, with al the chosen and best trees of Libanus, yee, and al they ỹ are plāted vpon the waters shal mourne wyth hym also in the lower habitaciōs: for they shall go downe to hel wyth him, vnto them that be slayne wyth the swerde, whych dwelte afore vnder the shadowe of his arme among the heathen. To whom shalte thou be lykened, that art so glorious & great, amonge the trees of Eden? Yet art thou cast downe vnder the erth (among the trees of Eden) where thou must lye amonge vncircūcised, wyth them that be slayne wyth the swearde. Euen thus is it wyth Pharao and all hys people, sayth the Lorde God.

¶ The prophete is commaunded to bewayle Pharao the kynge of Egypte. He prophecyeth that destruccyon shall come vnto Egypte thorowe the kynge of Babylon.

In the eleuenth yere, the first day of ỹ twelueth moneth, the word of ỹ lord came vnto me, sayeng: thou sonne of mā, take vp a lamētaciō vpon *Pharao ỹ king of Egipt, & say vnto him: ỹ art reputed as a Lyon of the heathen, & as a whalfysshe in the see. Thou castest thy waters aboute the, thou troublest the waters wyth thy fete, and stampest in theyr floudes. Thus sayth the Lorde God: *I wyl spreade my net ouer the, namely, a great multitude of people, these shall dryue the into my yarne, for I wyl cast the vpon the lande: and let the lye vpon the felde, that all the foules of the ayre maye syt vpon the. I wyll gyue all the beastes of the felde ynoughe of the. Thy flesshe wyll I cast vpon the hylles, and fyl the valeys with thy highnesse. I wyl water the lande lande with thy aboundaunce of thy bloud, euen to the mountaynes, and the ryuers shalbe ful of thy bloude. When thou art put out, I wyll co-

esay.xliii.b uer the heauē, and make his starres dymme * I wyll spreade a cloude ouer the Sunne, and the moone shall not gyue her lyght. All the lyghtes of heauen wyll I put oute ouer the, and bryng darkenesse vpon thy lande, sayth the Lord God I wyll trouble the hertes of many people, when I bryng thy destruction amonge the heythen and countryes, whom thou knowest not. Yea, I wyll make manye people with theyr kynges so afrayed thorowe the, that theyr heer shal stand vp, when I shake my swerde at theyr faces. Sodaynly shal they be astonyed, euery man in C him selfe, at the daye of thy fall. For thus sayth the Lorde God, the kynge of Babylons swerde shal come vpon the, with ỹ swerdes of the worthyes wyll I smyte downe thy people. All they that be myghty among the Gentiles shal wast the proude pompe of Egypt, and bringe downe all her people. All the cattell also of Egypt wyll I destroye, that they shall come nomore vpon ỹ waters, so that neyther mans foote nor beastes clawe shall styrre them any more. Then wyl I make their waters depe, and cause their floudes to runne lyke oyle, sayth the Lorde God. When I make the lande of Egypt desolate, and when the countrye with al that is therein, shalbe layd wast, and when I smyte all them which dwel in it, that they maye knowe that I am the Lorde. This is the mournynge that the doughters of the heythen shal make. Yea, a sorowe and lamē tacyon shall they take vp vpon Egypte, and all her people, sayth the Lorde God.

D In the.xii. yeare, the. xv. daye of the moneth, came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of mā: Take vp a lamētation vpō the people of Egypt, & cast thē downe: yea them I say, & the myghty people of the heythen also esa.xliii.e euen wt them * that dwel beneth: and with them
Ezec.xxxi.e that go downe into ỹ graue. Downe (how fayr so euer thou be) & lay the with ỹ vncircumcised. Amonge those that be slayne with the swerde, shall they lye. To the swearde is she already delyuered: therfore plucke downe to the grounde, her & all her multitude. The myghty worthyes shal speake to him out of the hel & to his helpers that be gone downe and lye vncircumcised and with them that be slayne with the swerde.

Assur is there also with his companye, and E theyr graues rounde about, whiche were slayne and fell all with the swearde, whose graues lye beside hym in the lowe pytte. His commens are buryed rounde aboute his graue, all togyther wounded and slayne with the swearde, whiche men afore tyme brought feare into the lande of the lyuynge.

Jere.xliv.e * There is Elam also with all his people, &
Dan.vi.f.a theyr graues round about: which al being wōded & slayne with the swerd are gone downe vncircūcised vnder the earth, whiche neuertheles sometyme brought feare into the lande of the lyuyng: for ỹ whiche they beare theyr shame, with the other that be gone downe to the graue.

Theyr buryall is gyuen them, and all theyr people, amonge them that be slayne. Theyr gra- F ues are rounde about all them whiche be vncircumcised, and with them that be slayne thorow the swearde: for seinge that in tymes past, they made the land of the lyuyng afrayed, they must nowe beare theyr owne shame, with them that go downe to the pytte, and lye amonge them, that be slayne.

There is Mesech also and Tubal, and theyr people, and theyr graues rounde aboute. These al are amonge the vncircumcised, and them that be slayne with the swearde, bycause afore tyme they made the lande of the lyuynge afrayed.

Shulde not they then lye also among ỹ worthyes & vncircūcised gyauntes / which wt theyr weapons are gone downe to hel whose swerdes are layed vnder theyr heedes, whose wickednes is vpon theyr bones: bycause that as worthyes they haue brought feare into the lande of the lyuyng. Yea, among the vncircumcised shalt thou be destroyed, and slepe with them that perysshed thorowe the swerde.

There is ỹ lande of * Edom with her kinges G and princes also, which with theyr strength are Jere.xliv.b
layed by them that were slayne with ỹ swearde Ezec.xxxii.b yea, among the vncircumcised, and them which xxxii.a are gone downe into the pytte. Moreouer, there be al the princes of the north, with all the Sydonians, which are gone downe to the slayne.

With theyr feare and strength they are come to confusion, and lye there vncircūcysed among those that be slayns with the swerde, and beare theyr owne shame, with them ỹ be gone downe to the pytte. Nowe when Pharao seeth this, he shal be cōforted ouer al his people, that is slayne with the swerde, both Pharao and al his hoost, sayth ỹ Lorde God. For I haue gyuen my feare in the lande of the lyuynge. But Pharao and al his people shall lye amonge the vncircumcysed and amonge them that be slayne with ỹ swerde, sayth the Lorde God.

¶ He setteth out the office of a curate that preacheth the Gospell. He strengtheneth them that dispayre, and bendeth them with the promysse of mercy. The worde of the Lorde agaynst the remnaunt of the people. Agaynst the mockers of the wordes of the prophete.

AGayne, the worde of the Lorde came I vnto me, saying: Thou son of man Speake to the chyldren of thy people, and tell them: When I sende a swerde vpon a lande, yf the people of the lande take a man of theyr countrye, and set hym to be theyr * watcheman, the same man iiii.xe.xix.b

Yf a man nowe heare the noyse of the trom-pet & wyl not be warned, and the swearde come and take hym away, his bloud shalbe vpon his owne heed: for he herde the sounde of the trompet, and wolde not take hede, therfore his bloud be vpon hym. But yf he wyl receyue warnyng, he shall saue his lyfe.

Agayne, yf the watchman se the swerd come and blowe it not with the trompette, so that the people people is not warned: yf the swearde come then, and take any man from amonge them: the same shalbe taken awaye in hys owne synne, but hys bloude wyll I requyre of the watchmans hande.

Ezech.iii.c *And nowe (O thou sonne of man) I haue made the a watchman vnto the house of Israel: that wheare as thou hearest any thynge out of my mouthe, thou mayest warne them on my behalfe. If I saye vnto the wycked thou wycked, thou shalt surely dye, and ỹ geuest him not warnyng, that he may beware of his vngodly way: then shal the wycked dye in hys own synne, but hys bloude wyll I requyre of thy hande. Neuertheles, if thou warne the wycked of hys way, to tourne from it, where as he yet wyll not be turned from it, then shal he dye because of his synne but thou hast deliuered thy soule.

¶ Therfore (O thou sonne of man) speake vnto the house of Israel. Yee, say thus: Our offẽces and synnes lye vpon vs, and we be corrupte in them, howe shulde we then be restored vnto lyfe Eze.xviii.c Tell them: *As truly as I lyue sayeth ỹ Lorde God, I haue no pleasure in the death of the wycked, but much rather that ỹ wycked turne from hys waye, and lyue. Turne you, turne you from your vngodly wayes: O ye of the house of Israell Oh wherfore wyl ye dye?

Thou sonne of man, tell the chyldren of the

And the ryghteousnes of the ryghteouse shal not saue his lyfe, whan so euer he synneth. If I say vnto the ryghteous, that he shall surely lyue and so he trust to his owne righteousnes, and do synne, then shall hys ryghteousnesse be no more

Yee, the synnes that he hath done, shal neuer be thought vpon. For in so much as he doth nowe the thing that is lawfull and ryght, he shal lyue. And yet the chyldren of thy people saye: Tush, the waye of the Lorde is not ryght, but they lye, where as theyr owne waye is rather vnright.

When the ryghteous turneth from his righteousnes and doth the thynge that is wycked he shal dye therfore. But if the wycked turne from his wyckednes, doyng the thyng that is lawful and ryght, he shall lyue therfore. Yet ye say: *the xxxiii.a *I wyll iudge euery one of you after his waies

In the twelueth yeare, the fyfth daye of the tenth moneth of oure captiuitie, it hapened, that one whiche was fled out of Jerusalem, came vnto me, and sayde: the citye is destroyed. Nowe the hande of the Lord had beene vpon me the euenyng afore this man (which was escaped) came vnto me, and had opened my mouth, vntyll the morrowe that he cam to me: yee, he opened my mouthe, so that I was nomore domme. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, and sayd: Thou sonne of man, these that dwell in the wasted lande of Israell, say: Abraham was but one man, and he had the lande in possessyon: nowe are we many and ỹ lande is geuen vs to possesse also. And therfore tell them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: * In the bloude haue ye eaten, your Leu.xvii.b eyes haue ye lyfte vp to ydolles, *and haue shed Deut.xii.c. bloude: shal ye then haue the lande in possessyon?

Ye leane vpon your swordes, ye worke abhominatiõs, euery one defyleth his neyghbours wyfe: and shall he then possesse the lande? Saye thou these wordes vnto them. Thus sayeth the Lorde God. As truly as I lyue all ye that dwel in this wyldernes, shalbe slayne with ỹ sword: what so euer is vpon thy felde, I wyl gyue vnto the beastes to be deuoured: those that be in strong holdes and dennes, shall dye of the pestylence. For I wyl make the land so desolate and waste and the pompe of her strength the shall come to an ende. The mountaynes of Israel shalbe so waste that no man shall trauayle therby.

* Then shall they learne to knowe, that I ☞ am the Lorde, when I make the lande waste and Eze.xxv.c. desolate because of al theyr abhominatiõs, that they haue wrought. And thou sonne of man, the chyldren of the people that talke of the, by the walles and in the doores of theyr houses, sayenge one to an other. Come lette vs heare what worde is gone forth from the Lord. These come vnto the, after ỹ maner of a great people: yee, as who saieth they were my people, they syt downe before the, and here thy wordes, but they do not Eze.xxxiii.e therafter: for in theyr mouthes they make a iest Mat.xv.a. of them, and theyr harte goeth after theyr owne couetous lucre, and as a balet that hath a swet tune, and is pleasaunt to singe, so shalte thou be vnto them: thy wordes shal they heare, but they wyl not do therafter. Whã this cõmeth to passe (for lo: it cõmeth in deede) then shal they knowe, that there hath bene a prophete amonge them.

¶ Against Bishoppes and curates that despise the flocke of Christ, and seke theyr owne: The Lorde sayeth that he wyll kepe hys dispersed flocke, and gather them together. He reproueth the malyce of certen of the flocke He prompteth the trew shepherd Christ, and with hym peace:

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayenge: thou sonne of man, prophecy agaynst the shepherdes of Israell, prophecye and speake vnto them. Thus sayeth the Lorde God. *Wobe vnto the Eze.xiii.a; Ier.xxiii.b & xxiii.a shepherdes of Israel, that fede thẽ selues. Shuld not the shepherdes fede the flockes?

Ye haue eaten vp the fat, ye haue clothed you with the woll: the best fed haue ye slayne but the flocke haue ye not nourysshed. B My shepe go wandrynge vpon all mountaynes, and vpon euery hye hyll: Yee, they be scatred abrode in all feldes, and ther is no man that careth for them, or seketh after them. Therfore O ye shepherdes, heare the worde of the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde God: As truly as I lyue, for so moche as my shepe are robbed, and deuoured of all the wylde beastes of the felde, hauyng no shepherde: & seynge that my shepherdes take no regarde of my shepe, but fede them selues onely, and not my shepe. Mat.xxv.c God. * I wyll put a difference among the shepe, among the wethers and the gotes. Was it not ynough for you to eate vp the good pasture, but ye must treade downe ỹ residue of your pasture with your fete also? Was it not ynough for you to drynke clere water, but ye must trouble the residue also with your fete?

Thus my shepe muste be fayne to eate the thynge, that ye haue troden downe with your fete, and to drinke it, that ye with your fete haue defyled. Therfore, thus sayth the Lorde God vn to them: Beholde, I wyll seuer the fatte shepe from the leane: for so moche as ye haue shot the weake shepe vpon the sydes and shoulders, and runne vpon them with youre hornes, so longe tyll ye haue vtterly scatred them abrode. I wyll helpe my shepe, so that they shall no more be spoyled: yee, I wyll discerne one shepe from an other. I wyll rayse vp vnto them one only shep-herde, euen my seruaunt * Dauid, he shall ‡ fede them, and he shall be theyr shepherde. I the Lorde wyll be theyr God, and my seruaunte * Dauid shall be theyr prynce. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it.

Jere.xxx.b ‡Act.c.c. Ezechie.b.a

Moreouer, I wyll make a couenaunt of peace
F with them, and dryue all euyll beastes out of the lande: so that they may dwell safely in the wyldernesse, and slepe in the woddes. Good fortune and prosperitye wyll I gyue them, and vnto all that be rounde aboute my hyll. * A prosperous Deut.xi.b. &.xxviii.b. shower and rayne wyll I sende them in due season, that the trees in the wodde may bryng forth theyr frutes, and the ground her encrease. They shall be safe in their lande, and shall knowe, that I am the Lorde, which haue broken their pocke, and delyuered them out of the handes of those that helde them in subiection.

They shall no more be spoyled of ỹ heathen,
G nor deuoured with the beastes of the lande: but safely shall they dwell, and no man shall fraye them. I wyll set vp an excellent plant for them, so that they shall suffre no more hunger in the lande, neyther beare the reprofe of the heathen any more. Thus shall they vnderstande, that I the Lorde theyr God am with them, & that they (euen the house of Israel) are my people, sayth the Lorde God. Ye men are my flocke * ye are Psal.xcv.b. and.xcix.b. the shepe of my pasture: and I am youre God, sayth the Lorde God.

¶ The.xxxv. Chapter.

¶ The destruccyon that shall come on the hyll Seyr, that is on the Idumeans, because they troubled the people of the Lorde.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came
I vnto me, saying: Thou sone of man, turne thy face towarde the mounte * Seyr, prophecye vpon it, and saye vnto it. Thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde (O thou mount Seyr) I wyll vpon the. I wyll reache out my hande ouer the, yee, waste and desolate wyll I make the. Thy cyties wyll I breake downe, and thou shalt lye voyde: that thou mayst knowe, howe that I am the Lorde. * For so moche as thou bearest an olde enemytye agaynst the chyldren of Israell, and hast drawen the chyldren of Israell vpon the swerde, what tyme as they were troubled and punysshed for theyr synne: Therfore, as trewly as I lyue, sayth the Lorde God: I wyll prepare the vnto bloude, yee, bloude shall folowe vpon the: * seynge thou layest wayte for bloude, therfore shall bloude persecute the. Thus wyll I
B make the mount Seyr desolate and waste, and bryng to passe, that there shall no man go thyther, nor come from thence. His mountaynes wyll I fyll with his slayne men: thy hylles, valleys, and ryuers, shall lye full of them, that are slayne with the swerde. I wyll make the a perpetuall wyldernes, so that thy cyties shall not re turne to theyr former estate, that ye may knowe how that I am the Lorde.

Ezech.xxxvi.b. and.xxxvii.c and.xxv.a. and.xxvi.a

Ioume.xx.c Deut.ii.a.

1.Macc.b.a.

And bycause thou hast sayde: what, bothe
C these nacyons, and bothe these landes, muste be myne, & I wyll haue them in possession * where Ezech.xxxvi.c as the Lorde was there. Therfore, thus sayth the the Lorde God: as truly as I lyue, I wyll handle the accordyng to thy wrath and gelousy lyke as thou hast dealt cruelly with them that I may be knowen among thē, howe I haue punyshed the. Yee, and ỹ thou also maist be sure, that I ỹ Lord haue herd al thy despyteful wordes, which thou D haste spoken agaynst the mountaynes of Israell sayeng: Lo, they are made waste, and geuen vs to deuoure. Thus wyth your mouthes ye haue made your bost agaynst me, yee, and multiplied your proude wordes agaynst me, whych I haue hearde altogether. Wherunto, thus sayeth the Lorde God: to the ioye of all the worlde wyll I make the waste. *And lyke as thou (O mounte Ezec.xxv.a and.xxvi.a Seyr) waste glad, because the heryptage of the house of Israell was destroyed: euen so wyl I do vnto the also, that thou and whole Edom shall be destroyed, and knowe, that I am the Lorde.

¶ The.xxxvi.Chapter

¶ He promyseth the delyueraunce of the Gentyls vnto Israell. The benefytes done vnto the Iewes are to be ascribed to the mercye of God, not vnto theyr deserupnges: God reneweth our hartes that we may walke in hys commaundmentes.

A Thou sonne of man, prophecye vpon the moūtaines of Israel and speake: Ezech.vi.a *Heare the worde of the Lorde, O ye mountaynes of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lorde God because your enemye hath sayde vpon you: Aha, the hye euerlastynge places are nowe become oures, prophecy therfore, and speake: thus sayeth the Lorde God Seing ye be wasted and troden downe on euery syde and become a possession vnto the residue of the Gētyls: which haue brought you into mens mouthes and vnto an euell name amonge the people. Therfore, heare the worde of the Lorde God: O ye mountaynes of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lorde God vnto the mountaynes and hylles, valleys and dales, to the voyde wyldernes and desolate cities, which are spoiled, and had in derision on euery syde, among the residue of the Heathen: Yee, euen thus sayeth the Lorde God. In the fyre of my gelousy haue I taken a deuice against the residue of the Gentyls, and agaynst all *Edom: which haue taken in my lande vnto Ezech.xxxv.a them selues for a possessyon: which also reioyced from theyr whole harte wyth a despytefull stomacke, to waste it, and to spoyle it.

B Prophecy therfore vpon the lande of Israell, speake vnto the mountaynes and hylles to valleys and dales, thus sayeth the Lorde God. Beholde, this haue I deuised in my gelousy and terrible wrath. For so muche as ye haue suffred reprofe of the Heathen, therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God. I haue sworne that the Gentyles which lye aboute you, shall beare theyr cōfusion thēselues. And as for you (O moūtaynes of Israel) ye shal shote out your braunches, & bryngе forth your frute to my people of Israel, for it is harde by that it wyl come. Beholde, I come vnto you, and vnto you wyll I tourne me, that ye maye be tylled and sowen.

¶ I wyll sende you much people, whyche shalbe of all the house of Israell, the cities shalbe inhabited, and the decayed places shall be repayred agayne: I wyll prouyde you wyth muche people and cattel, which shal encrease and bryng frute: I wyll restore you also to your olde estate and shewe you more kindnes then euer ye had before wherby ye shal knowe that I am the Lorde: Yee people wyll I sende vnto you (O my folke of Israell) whiche shall haue the in possessyon, and ỹ shalt be theyr enheritaunce, so that thou shalte nomore be wyth them. Agayne thus sayeth the Lorde God: For so much as they say vnto you, thou arte an eater vp of mē, and a waster of thy people: therfore thou shalt eate no mo men, neyther destroy thy people any more sayth the Lorde God. And I wyll not suffre the: for to heare thyne owne confusyon, amonge the Gentyles from hence forth. Thou shalte not beare the reprofe of the nacions, nor caste oute thyne owne people any more, sayeth the Lorde God.

D Moreouer the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayeng: O thou sonne of man, when ỹ house of Israel dwelte vpon theyr owne groūde, they defyled thē selues wyth theyr owne wayes and ymaginations: so that in my syght theyr waye was like the vnclennes of a menstruous woman Wherfore, I poured my wrathfull displeasure vpon them, because of the bloude that they had shed in the lande, and because of theyr ydoles, wherwyth they had defyled them selues. I scatred them also among the heathen, so that they were strowed aboute in the landes. Accordynge to theyr wayes and after theyr owne maneyons, so dyd I punyshe them.

E *Nowe when they were gone vnto the heythen, and come in amonge them, they dyshonoured my holy name: so that it was sayde of them. Are these the people of God, and must go out of theyr owne lande? Then spared I my holy name whyche the house of Israel had dyshonoured amonge the Gentyls, to whom they came. Therfore tel the house of Israel. Thus sayeth ỹ Lord God: I do not thys for your sakes (O house of Israel) but for my holy names sake, which ye dishonoured among the heathen, when ye came to them. Therfore, I wyl halowe my great name agayne whych among the Gentyls is euell spoken of: for ye your selues haue dyshonoured it amonge them. And the Gentyls shall know that I am the Lorde, when I am honoured in you before theyr eyes, sayeth the Lorde God. Ezec.xx.b Rom.ii.c

F As for you, I wyl take you from among the Heathen and gather you to gether out of al cōtrees, and bryng you agayne into your owne lande. * Then wyll I poure cleane water vpon you, and ye shall be cleane: yee, from all your vnclennes and frō all your ydols shall I clense you A newe herte also wyll I gyue you, and a newe spyrete wyll I put into you. As for that stonye harte, I wyl take it out of your bodye, and geue you a fleshly hert. I wyl geue my spyrete among you * and cause you to walke in my commaundementes to kepe my lawes, and to fulfyl them. Ezec.xi.b Iere.xxxi.c Dt.xiii.d.

And so ye shall dwel in the lande, that I gaue to your forefathers, and ye shall be my people, and I wyll be your God. I wyll healpe you out of all your vnclennes. I wyll call for the corne, and wyll encrease it, and let you haue no hunger. I wyll multiplye the frutes of the trees, and the increase of the felde for you, so that ye shal beare no more reproke of hunger among the Heathen. Then shall ye remembre youre owne wycked wayes, and your ymagynacyons, whiche were not good: so that ye shall thynke that ye were worthy to be destroyed: for your synnes and abhominacyons.

G But I wyll not do this for your sakes (sayth the Lorde God) be ye sure of it. Therfore, O ye house of Israell, be ashamed of youre synnes. Moreouer, thus sayth ỹ Lord God: What tyme as I shall clense you from al your offences, then wyll I make the cyties to be occupyed agayne, & wyll repayre the places that be decayed. The desolate lande shal be buylded agayn, which afore tyme laye waste in ỹ syght of al them that went by. Then shall it be sayd: this waste lande is become lyke a garden of pleasure, and the voyde, desolate & broken downe cyties are now stronge and defenced agayne. Then the residue of the Heathen that lye rounde about you, shal knowe that I am the Lorde, whiche repayre that that was broken downe, and plant agayne that, that was made waste. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, and wyll do it in dede.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyll yet once be founde agayn of the house of Israel, & do this for them: * I shall encrease them as a flocke of Jerem.l.a men. Lyke as the holy flocke and the flocke of Ierusalē are in ỹ hye solempne feastes: so shall also the wylde wasted cyties be fylled with flockes of men: & they shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

¶ He prophecyeth the bryngynge agayne of the people beynge in captiuitie. He sheweth the vnion of the ten tribes with the two.

A ¶ The hande of the Lorde came vpon me and caryed me out in the spyrte of the Lorde, and let me downe in a playne felde, that laye full of bones, and he ledde me rounde aboute by them: and beholde the bones that laye vpon the felde, were very many, and merueylous drye also. Then sayd he vnto me. Thou sõne of man: thynkest thou these bones may lyue agayne? I answered, O Lorde God, thou knowest. And he sayd vnto me. Prophecy thou vpon these bones: and speake vnto them. Ye drye bones, heare the worde of the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde God vnto these bones: Behold, I wyl put breth vnto you, that ye may lyue: I wyl gyue you synowes and make fleshe grow vpon you, and couer you B ouer with skynne: & so gyue you * breth, that ye Gen.ii.b. may lyue, and knowe that I am the Lorde.

So I prophecyed, as he had cõmaunded me. And as I was prophecyeng, there came a noyse and a great mocyon, so that the bones ran euery one to another. Now when I had loked, behold, they had synowes, and fleshe grewe vpon them: and above they were couered with skynne, but there was no breth in them. Then sayd he vnto me. Thou sonne of man, prophecye thou toward the wynde: prophecye: and speake to the wynde. Thus sayth ỹ Lorde God. Come (O thou ayre) from the foure wyndes, and blowe vpon these slayne, that they may be restored to lyfe. So I C prophecyed as he had cõmaunded me: then came the breth in to them, & they receyued lyfe, & stode vp vpon theyr fete, a meruelous great sorte.

Moreouer, he sayd vnto me: Thou sonne of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel. Beholde, they saye: Our bones dryed vp, our hope is gone, we are cleane cutte of. Therfore D prophecye thou, and speake vnto them: thus sayth the Lorde God. Beholde, I wyll open your graues (O my people) and take you out of youre sepulchres, and bryngе you in to the lande of Israel agayne. So shall ye knowe that I am the Lorde, when I open your graues, and bryngе you out of them. Yy spyrte also wyll I put in you, and ye shall lyue: I wyll set you agayne in your owne lande, and ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde which haue sayd it, and fulfylled it in dede.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayenge: thou sonne of man, take a stycke, & wrỹte vpon it. Unto Juda and to the chyldren of Israel his companyons. Then take another stycke and wrỹte vpon it: Unto Joseph the stocke of Ephraim, and to all the housholde of Israell his companyons. And then take bothe these E togyther in thyne hande, so shall there be one stycke therof. Nowe yf the chyldren of the people saye vnto the, wylt thou not shewe vs what thou meanest by these? Then gyue them this answere: thus sayth the Lorde God: beholde, * I wyll take the stocke of Joseph, which is Ose.i.b. in the hande of Ephraim, and of the trybes of Israell his felowes, and wyll put them to the stocke of Juda, and make them one stocke, and they shall be one in my hande. And the two styckes where vpon thou wrỹtest, shalte thou haue in thyne hande, that they may se, and shalt saye vnto them.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: beholde, I wyll F take away the chyldren of Israel from amonge the Heathen, vnto whome they be gone, & wyll gather them togyther on euery syde, and bryngе them agayne in to theyr owne lande: yee, I wyll make one people of them in the lande, vpon the mountaynes of Israel, and they al shal haue but one kynge. They shall no more be two peoples from hence forth, neyther be deuyded in to two kyngdomes: they shall also defyle them selues no more with theyr abhominacions, Idols, and all theyr wycked doynges. I wyll helpe them out of all theyr dwellynge places, wherin they haue synned: and wyll so clense them, that they shall be my people, and I theyr God.

Dauid my seruaunt shall be their kynge, and G they al shal haue one shepherde only. They shall walke in my lawes, and my cõmaundementes shall they bothe kepe and fulfyll. They shall dwell in the lande, that I gaue vnto Jacob my seruaũt, where as your fathers also haue dwelt: yee, euen in the same lande shall they, their chyldren, and theyr chylders chyldren dwell for euermore, and my seruaunt Dauid shal be their euerlasting prince. Moreouer, I wil make a bond of peace wyth them, whyche shalbe vnto them an euerlastyng couenaunt. I wyl settle them also, and multiply them, my Sanctuarye wyll I set Leu.xxvi.b amonge thē for euermoze.*My dwellynge shal be with them: yee, I wyl be theyr God, and they shalbe my people. Thus the Heathen also shall knowe, that I the Lozde am the holy maker of Israel, when my sanctuary shalbe among them for euermoze.

¶He prophecieth that Gog and Magog shall come wyth an appointed hoost into the lande of pzomes. Theyr entent. He reherseth that the cōmynge of Gog was before prophecyed of the prophetes. The destruccyon of hym.

AND the wozde of the Lozde came vnto me, sayeng: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face toward Gog the lande of Magog whyche is the chefe pzince at Mesech and Tuball: prophecye agaynste hym, and ete.xxxix.b. Apoc.xx.c. saye: Thus sayeth the Lozde God: *O Gog thou chefe pzince of Mesech and Tubal: behold, I wyll vpon the, and wyll turne the aboute and put a hyt in thy chawes: I wyll bzyng the fozth and al thy host, both hozse and hozsemen, which be all weapened of the best fashyon, a great people, that handle altogether speares, shyldes, and swoardes: the Perses, Mozians and wyth them the Libians, whyche all beare shyldes and helmettes: Gomer and all hys hoostes: the house of Thogozma out of the nozth quarters, & all hys hoostes, yee, and muche people wyth the.

B Therfoze pzepare the, set thy selfe in araye wyth all thy people, that are come vnto the by heapes, and be thou theyr defence. After many dayes thou shalte be visyted, and in the latter yeres thou shalte come into ỹ lande that hath bene destroyed wyth the swearde, and nowe is replenyshed agayne wyth dyuerse people vpon the mountaynes of Israell, whyche haue longe lyen waste: Yee, they be brought out of the nacyons, and dwell all safe. Thou shalte come vp lyke a stozmy wether, to couer the land, and as it were a darcke cloude, thou wyth all thyne hoostes, and a great multitude of people wyth the.

C Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lozde God: At the same tyme shal many thynges come into thy mynde, so that thou shalt ymagyn mischefe, and saye: I wyll vp to ponder playne lande, seynge they syt at ease, & dwell so safely (foz they dwell all without any walles they haue nether barres noz dozes) to spoyle them, to robbe them to laye hande vpō theyr so well inhabited wyldernesses agaynst that people, that is gathered together
D from amonge the Heathen, whyche haue gotten cattell and good and dwell in the myddest of the lande. Then shal Saba, & Dedan, and the marchaūtes of Tharsis with al theyr wozthies saye vnto the: Arte thou come to robbe? haste thou gathered thy people together, because thou wylt spoyle: to take syluer and golde: to cary awaye cattell and good, and to haue a greate pzay?

E Therfoze, O thou sonne of man, thou shalte pzophecy, and saye vnto Gog. Thus sayeth the Lozde God: In that day thou shalt knowe that my people of Israell dwelleth safe: and shalte come from thy place out of ỹ nozth partes: thou and muche people wyth the, whyche ryde vpon hozses, wherof there is a great multitude and an innumerable sozte. Yee, thou shalte come vpon my people of Israel, as a cloud to couer the land. Thys shall come to passe in the latter dayes: I wyll bzynge the vp into my lande, that the Heathen maye knowe me, whan I get me honoure vpon the (O Gog) before theyr eyes.

Thus sayeth the Lozde God: Thou arte he of F whom I haue spoken afoze tyme by my seruaūtes the pzophetes of Israel, which pzophecied in those dayes and yeares, that I shulde bzyng the vpon them. At the same tyme, when Gog commeth vp into ỹ lande of Israel (sayeth the Lozde God) shal my indignaciō go fozth in my wzath: Foz in my gelousy and hote displeasure I haue deuysed*that there shalbe a great trouble in the lande of Israel at that time. The very fyshes in the see, the foules of the ayze, the beastes of the felde, and all the men that are vpon the earthe, shall tremble foz feare of me. Dani.xii.a ma.xxiiii.b Luke.xxi.c

The hylles also shalbe turned vp side downe G the stayzes of stone shall fall, and al walles shal synke to the grounde. I wyll calli foz a swearde vpon them in al my mountaynes sayeth ỹ Lozd God: so that euerye mans swearde shalbe vpon an other. Wyth pestilence and bloude wyll I punyshe hym: stozmy rayne and hayle stones, fyze and bzymstone wyll I cause to rayne vpon hym and all hys heape, yee, and vpon all that greate people that is wyth hym. Thus wyll I be magnifyed, honoured, and knowen amonge the Heathen: that they may be sure, howe that I am the Lozde.

¶He sheweth the destruccyon of Gog and Magog. The graue of Gog and hys host. He prophecyeth that Gog and hys company shall be deuoured of bzydes and beastes, wherfoze ỹ house of Israel is wasted: Theyr bzinge agayne from captiuite is promysed.

THerefoze, O thou sonne of man, A pozphecy agaynst Gog, & speake Thus sayeth the Lozd God: Behold, *O Gog: thou chefe pzince ez.xxxviii.c at Mesech & Tubal, I wyl vpon the, & punyshe the wyth syxe plages and lead the from the nozth partes, & bzyng the vp to the mountaynes of Israel. As foz thy bowe, I wyll smyte it out of thy lyfte hand, and cast thyne arowes out of thy right haude. Thou wyth all thyne heape, and all the people that is wyth the, must fall vpon the mountaynes of Israel. Than wyll I geue the vnto foules & wylde beastes of the felde, to be deuoured: there muste thou lye vpō the felde: foz euen I the Lozd haue spoken it, sayeth the Lozde God.

Into Magog, and amonge them that syt so B careles in the yles: wyll I sende a fyze, and they shall knowe, that I am the Lozde, I wyll make also ỹ name of my holines to be knowen among my people of Israell: and I wyl not let my holy name be euel spoken of anye moze: but the verye Heathen also shal knowe, that I am the Lozde, the holy one of Israell: Beholde, it commeth, and shall be fulfylled in dede, sayeth the Lozde God. Thys is the daye wherof I haue spoken.

They that dwell in the cyties of Israel, shall go forth and set fyre vpon the weapens, and burne them: shyldes and speares, bowes and arowes, bylles & clubbes: seuen yeares shall they be burnynge therof, so that they shall elles bryng no styckes from the felde, nether haue nede to hewe downe out of ꝑ wodde. For they shall haue weapens ynough to burne. They shall robbe those that robbed them, and spoyle those that spoyled them, sayth the Lorde God. At the same tyme wyll I gyue vnto Gog, a place to be buryed in Israel, euen the valley, where thorowe men go from the east to ꝑ see ward. Those that trauayle therby, shall stop theyr noses for stenche. There shall Gog & all his people be buryed: & it shall be called the valley of ꝑ people of Gog. Seuen monethes longe shal the house of Israel be buryeng of them, that they may clense the lande. Yee, all the people of ꝑ lande shall bury them, D, it shall be a glorious daye, when I get me that honour, sayth the Lorde God. They shall ordeyne men also to be dead buryers, euer goynge thorow the lande, and appoynt them certeyn places to bury those in, which remayne vpon the felde, that the lande may be clensed. Frō ende to ende shall they seke, and that seuen monethes longe. Now those that go thorow the lande, where they se a mans bone, they shall set vp a token by it, tyll the dead buryers haue buryed it also, in the valley of the people of Gog. And the name of the cytie shal be called Hamonah (that is a multytude.) Thus shall they make the lande cleane.

And thou sonne of man: thus sayth the Lorde God, Speake vnto all the foules & euery byrde, yee, & to all the wylde beastes of the felde, heape you togyther & come, gather you rounde aboute vpon my slaughter, that I haue slayne for you: euen a great slaughter vpon the mountaynes of Israel, eate flesshe, and drynke bloude. Ye shall Apoc.xix.d *eate the flesshe of the worthyes, and dryncke the bloude of the prynces of ꝑ lande: of the wethers, of the lambes, of the gotes, and of the oxen that be all slayne at Basan. Eate the fatte your belly full, and dryncke bloude, tyll ye be dronken of the slaughter, whiche I haue slayne vnto you. Fyll you at my table with horses and stronge horsemen, with captaynes and men of warre, sayth the Lorde God.

I wyll bryng my glory also among the gentyles, that all the heathen may se my iudgement, that I haue kepte, and my hande whiche I haue layde vpon them: that the house of Israel may knowe, how that I am the Lord their God from that daye forth. And the heathen shall knowe, that where as the house of Israel were ledde in to captiuitye: it was for theyr wyckednes sake, bycause they offended me.

For the whyche cause I hyd my face from them, and delyuered them in to the handes of theyr enemyes, that they myght all be slayne with the swearde. Accordynge to theyr vnclennesse and vnkaythfull dealynges, so haue I entreated them, and hyd my face from them:

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: Now wyl I bryng agayne the captyues of Jacob, & haue mercy vpon the whole house of Israel, & be gelous for my holy names sake. All their confusion and offence that they haue done agaynst me, shal be taken awaye: and so safely shall they dwell in theyr lande, that no man shall make them afrayde. And when I haue brought them agayne from amonge the people, when I haue gathered them togyther out of theyr ennemyes landes, and am praysed in them before many heathen: Then shall they knowe, that I am the Lorde theyr God, whyche suffred them to be ledde in to captiuitye amonge the heathen, but now haue I brought them agayne in to theyr owne lande, and not lefte one of them ponder.

After that wyll I hyde my face no more from them, * but wyll powre out my spyryte vpon the house of Israel, sayth the Lorde God. Ezech.xxxix.

The.xl. Chapter.

The restoryng of the cityes and of the temple that was to come is shewed vnto the prophete.

In the.xxv. yere of our captiuitie, in the begynnynge of the yere, the tenth daye of the moneth: that is the.xiiii. yere after that the cytie was smytten downe: the same daye came the hande of the Lorde vpon me, and caryed me forth: euen in to the lande of Israel brought he me in the visions of God: and set me downe vpon a meruelous hye mountayne, where vpon there was a buyldynge (as it had ben of a cytye) towarde the north.

Thyther he caryed me, and behold, there was a man, whose similitude was lyke brasse, whiche had a threde of flare in his hande, and a metrod also. He stode in the doore, and sayd vnto me: thou sonne of man, marke well with thyne eyes, harken to with thyne eares, and fasten it in thyne herte, what soeuer I shall shewe the, for to ꝑ entent that they myght be shewed the, therfore art thou brought hyther. And what soeuer ꝑ seest, thou shalt certifye the house of Israel therof.

Beholde, there was a wall on the outsyde rounde aboute the house: the metrodde that he had in his hande, was syxe cubytes longe and a spanne. So he measured the bredth of the buyldynge, whiche was a metrodde, and the heyght also a metrodde. Then came he vnto ꝑ east dore, and wente vp the stayres, & measured the postes of the dore, wherof euery one was a metrodde thycke. Euery chambre was a metrodde longe & brode: betwene the chambres were fyue cubites. The post of the dore within the porche, was one metrodde. He measured also the porche of the innermer dore, whiche contayned a metrodde. Then measured he the entry of the dore, that contayned eyght cubytes, & his pyllers two cubites: and this entrye stode inwarde.

The chambres of the dore eastwarde, were thre on euery syde: a lyke brode and longe. The pyllers also that stode of bothe the sydes, were of one measure. After this, he measured the wydenesse of the dore, whiche was ten cubytes, and the heyght of the dore thyrtene cubytes. The edge before the chambres was one cubyte brode vpon bothe the sydes, and the chambres syxe cubytes wyde of eyther syde. He measured the the doze from the rydge of one chambze to another, whose wydenes was.xxv.cubites, and one doze stode agaynst another. He made pyllers also.lx.cubytes hye, rounde aboute the courte doze Before the inwarde parte vnto the foze entry of the innermoze doze, were fyfty cubites. The chãbers & theyr pyllers wythin, rounde about vnto the doze had syde wyndowes. So had ỹ foze entreys also, whose windowes went round about wtin. And vpon the pyllers there stode date trees

Then brought he me into ỹ foze court where as were chambers and paued wozkes, made in the foze court round about.xxx.chambers vpon one paued wozke. Now the paued wozke was a longe beside ỹ dozes and ỹ was the lower paued wozke. After thys he measured the bzedth from the lower doze, vnto the innermoze courte of the outsyde, whyche had an hundzeth cubytes vpon the east and the nozth parte. And the doze in the vttermost courte to warde the nozthe, measured he after the length and bzeadth: hys thze chambers also on ether syde with his pyllers and foze entreys: which had euen the measure of the fyzst doze. His heygth was.l.cubites, the bzedth.xxv. cubites, hys wyndowes, and pozches wt his date trees, had euen lyke measure as the doze toward the east: there were seuen steppes to go vp vpon and theyr pozche befoze them. Nowe the doze of the inner courte stode streyght ouer agaynst the dooze, that was to warde the Nozthcast. From one doze to another he measured: C. cubytes.

D After that, he bzought me to the southsyde, where there stode a doze toward ỹ south: whose pillers and pozches he measured, these hadde the fyzst measure, and wyth theyr pozches they had wyndowes rounde aboute, lyke the fyzste wyndowes. The heygthe was.l.cubytes, the bzeadth xxv. wyth steppes to go vp vpõ: hys pozch stode befoze with his pyllers and date trees on eyther syde. And ỹ doze of the inner court stode toward the southe, and he measured from one doze to another an hundzeth cubytes. So he bzoughte me into the innermoze courte, thozowe the dooze of the southsyde whych he measured: and it had the measure afozesayde. In lyke maner, hys chambzes, pyllers and fozentryes, had euen the fozesayd measure also. And he had with hys pozches rounde aboute wyndowes of.l.cubites heygth, and.xxv.cubytes bzode. The pozches rounde aboute were.xxv.cubytes longe, and fyue cubytes bzode: and his pozche reached vnto the vtter most court vpõ his pillers, there were date trees and eyght steppes to go vp vpon.

He bzought me also into the inmoste courte E vpon the east syde, and measured the doze accozdynge to the measure afozesayd, hys chambers, pyllers and pozches had euen the same measure, as the fyzste had: and wyth hys pozches he had wyndowes rounde aboute. The heygth was.l. cubytes, the bzeadthe.xxv: cubytes, hys pozche reached vnto the vttermoste courte: hys pyllers also had date trees on eyther syde, and.viii. steppes to go vp vpon. And he bzoughte me to the nozth doze, and measured it, whyche also had the fozsayde measure. Hys chambers, pyllers and pozches had wyndowes rounde aboute: whose heygth was.l.cubytes and the bzeadth.xxv. Hys pillers stode toward the vtmost court, and vpon them bothe were date trees, and.viii. steppes to go vp vpon. There stode a chambze also, whose entraunce was at the dooze pyllers, and there the burntoffrynges were washed.

In the doze pozch, there stode on eyther syde F two tables foz the slaughtyng: to slay the burnt offerynges: synofferynges and trespasofferynges therupon. And on the outsyde as men goo fozth to the nozth doze, there stode to tables. Foure tables stode on eyther syde of the dooze that is.viii.tables: wherupon they slaughted. Foure tables were of hewen stone foz the burnt offerynges, of a cubite and a halfe longe & bzode and one cubyte hye, whereupon were layed the vesselles and ozna mentes whyche were vsed to the burnte & slayneofferynges: when they were slaughted. And wythin, there were hokes foure fyngers bzode, fastened rounde aboute to hange flesshe vpon, and vpon the tables was layde the offerynge flesh. On the outside of the innermoze doze were the syngers chambers in the inwarde courte besyde the nozth dooze ouer agaynste the southe. There stode one also beside the east doze nozthwarde.

And he sayde vnto me: Thys chambze on the G southe syde belongeth to the pzeastes, that kepe the babytacyon: and thys toward the nozth, is the pzeastes that wayte vpon the aulter: whych be the sonnes of Sadoch that do seruice befoze the Lozde in steade of the chyldzen of Leui. So he measured the foze court, whych had in length an hundzeth cubytes, and almuche in bzedht by the foure cozners. Nowe the aulter stode befoze the house. And he bzought me to the foze entrey of the house, and measured the walles by the entrey doze whych were fyue cubytes longe on eyther syde. The thyckenes also of the doze on eyther syde, was thze cubytes. The length of the pozche was.xx.cubytes: the bzeadth.xi.cubytes and vpon steppes went men vp to it: by the walles also were pyllers on eyther syde one.

¶ The disposicion and deuise of buyldyng agaynst the temple and of the other thynges therto belongyng.

A After thys, he bzoughte me to the temple, and measured the poostes whiche were of both sydes sixe cubytes thycke, accozdynge to the wydenes of the tabernacle. H

The bzedth of the dooze was ten cubytes, and the walles of the dooze on eyther syde fyue cubytes. He measured the length therof, whyche conteyned fourty cubytes, and the bzeadth twenty. Then wente he in and measured the dooze postes, whyche were two cubytes thycke: but the dooze it selfe was syxe cubytes, and the bzeadth of the dooze was seuen cubytes. He measured the length & bzeadth therof, which were euery one twenty cubites, befoze ỹ temple

And he sayd vnto me this is the holyest of all He measured also the wall of the house, whyche was syxe cubytes. The chambzes ỹ stode roũde aboute the house, were euery one foure cubytes wyde: and one stode hard vpon another, wherof there were .xxxiii. there stode postes benethe by the walles roũde about the house, to beare them vp, but in the wall of the house they were not fastened. The syde chambres were, the hyer the wyder, and had steppes thorowe them rounde

B aboute the house. Thus was it wyder aboue, that from the lowest, men myght go to the hyest by the myd chambres. I sawe also that ꝑ house was very hye rounde aboute. The foundacyon of ꝑ syde chambres was a metrodde, that is .vi. cubytes brode. The thyckenesse of the syde wall without, contayned .v. cubytes, and so dyd the out wall of the chambres in the house.

Betwene the chambres was the wydnes .xx. cubytes rounde aboute the house. The chambre doores stode ouer agaynst the out wall, the one dooze was towarde the nozth, the other toward the south: and the thyckues of the out wall was v. cubytes rounde aboute. Now the buyldynge that was seperated towarde the west, was .lxx. cubytes wyde, the wall of the buyldynge was v. cubytes thycke rounde about, and the length foure score cubytes and ten. So he measured the house, whiche was an .C. cubytes longe, and the seperated buyldynge with the wall, were an .C. cubites longe also. The wydnes before ꝑ house, and of it that was seperated towarde the east, was an .C. cubytes.

C And he measured the length of the buyldyng before & behynde with the chambres vpon bothe the sydes, and it contayned an .C. cubytes. The innermer temple, the porche of the fore court, the syde postes, these thre had syde wyndowes, and pyllers rounde aboute ouer agaynst the postes, from the grounde vp to the wyndowes. The wyndowes them selues were syled ouer wyth boozdes: and thus was it aboue the dooze vnto the inmost house, & without also. Yee, the whole wall on euery syde, bothe within & without was syled ouer w̃ great boozdes. There were Cherubins & date trees made also, so that one date tree
D stode euer betwixte two Cherubyns. One Cherub had two faces, the face of a man lokynge aside towarde the date tree, & a lyons face on the other syde. Thus was it made rounde aboute in all ꝑ house. Yee, the Cherubins & date trees were made from the grounde vp aboue the dooze, & so stode they also vpon the wall of the temple.

The hye postes of the temple were foursquared, & the fashyon of the Sanctuary was * euen

And he sayd vnto me: This is the table that shall stande before ꝑ Lorde. The temple and the holyest of all had eyther of them two doores, and euery dooze had two lytle wyckets which were folden in one vpon another, on euery syde two. And vpon the doores of the temple there were made Cherubins and date trees, lyke as vpon the wales: and a great thycke balke of wood was before on the outsyde of the porche. Upon bothe the sydes of the walles of ꝑ porche, there were made depe wyndowes & date trees, hauynge beames and balkes, lyke as the house had.

¶ The .xlii. Chapter.

¶ Of the chambers of the temple for the Preestes and the holy thynges.

Then caryed he me out in to the fore A courte towarde the nozth, & brought me in to the chambre that stode ouer agaynst ꝑ backbuylding nozthward whiche had the length of an .C. cubytes, whose dooze turned towarde the nozth. The wydnesse contayned .l. cubytes: ouer agaynst the .xx. cubytes of the innermer court & agaynst the paued worke that was in the court, besyde al these thre there stode pyllers, one ouer agaynst another. And before this chambre there was a walkyng place of .x. cubytes wyde, & within was a way of one cubyte wyde, and theyr doores towarde the nozth. Thus the hyest chambres were alwaye narrower then the lowest & myddemost of the buylding, for they bare chambre vpon chambre, and stode thre togyther one vpon an other, not hauing pillers lyke the fore court: therfore were they smaller then those benethe & in the myddest to reken from the grounde vpwarde.

The wall wout that stode by the chambres B
towarde the vttermost courte vpon the foresyde of the chambres, was .l. cubytes longe, for the length of ꝑ vttermost chambres in the fore court was .l. cubytes also: but the length therof before the temple was an .C. cubytes. These chambres had vnder them an intraũce of ꝑ eastsyde, whereby a man myght go into thẽ out of the fore court thorow the thicke wall of the fore court toward the east, ryght ouer agaynst the seperated buyldyng. Before the same buyldyng vpon this syde there were chambres also, whiche had a way vnto them, lyke as the chambre of the nozth syde of the same length and wydenesse.

Theyr intraunce, fashyon, and doores were also of the same maner. Yee, euen lyke as the other chambre doores were: so were those also of the southsyde. And before the waye towarde the syngers steppes on the east syde there stode a dooze to go in at. Then sayd he vnto me: The C chambres towarde the nozth & the south whiche stande before the backe buyldynge: those be holy habitacions, wherin the preestes that do seruyce before the Lorde, must eate the moost holy offerynges: and there must they lape the moost holy offerynges: meate offerynges, synne offerynges, and trespace offerynges: for it is an holy place. When the preestes come therin, they shall not go out in to the fore court: but (seynge they be holy) they shall leaue the clothes of their mynystracyon, & put on other garmentes, when they haue any thynge to do with the people.

Nowe when he had measured all the innerD mer house, he brought me forth thorowe the east parte, and measured the same rounde aboute. He measured the east syde with the metrodde, whiche rounde aboute contayned .v. C. metrodes: And the nozthsyde measured he, which contayned rounde aboute euen so moche. The other two sydes also towarde the south and the west, whyche he measured, conteyned eyther of them fyue hundred metroddes. So he measured all ꝑ foure sydes, where there went a wall rounde about fyue hundred metroddes longe, & as brode also whych seperated the holy from the vnholy.

AFTer he brought me to the dore that turneth towarde the easte. This is the descripcyon of the house. Aboue vpon the mount rounde about all the corners, it shalbe the holyest of all. Beholde, that is the descripcyon and fashyon of the house. This is the measur of the aultar, after ꝑ true cubyte: which is a spanne longer then another cubyte, his bottom in the mydst was a cubyte longe and wyde, and the ledge that went rounde aboute it, was a spanne brode. E Ten bathes make one homer: foz one homer fylleth ten bathes. And one lambe frō two hundzeth shepe out of ꝑ pasture of Israel: foz a meat offeryng, burnt offeryng, and helthofferyng to reconcyle them sayth the Lozd God: All the people of the lande shall geue this heueoffring with a frewyl foz the people of Israel. Agayn, it shal be the prynces parte to offer burnt offerynges, meatofferynges, and dzynkeoffrynges vnto the Lozde, in ꝑ holy dayes new mones, Sabbothes and in all the hye feastes of the house of Israel. The synne offryng, meatoffryng, burnt offryng dan helthofferyng shall he geue to reconcyle the house of Israell.

F Thus sayth the Lozde God. The fyrst daye of the fyrst moneth thou shalt take a yonge bullocke without blemyshe, and clense the Sanctuary. So the preast shal take of the bloude of the synoffryng, and sprynkle it vnto the postes of ꝑ house, and vpon the foure cozners of the aultar, with the doze postes of the innermer court. G Upon the same daye, shall the Pzynce geue foz hym selfe and all the people of ꝑ lande, a bullocke foz a synoffryng. And in the feast of the seuen dayes he shall offer euery daye a bullocke & a ramme, that are without blemysh foz a burntofferyng vnto the Lozde: and an hegote daylye foz a synoffrynge. Foz the meat offerynges he shal geue euer an Ephah to a bullock, an Epha to a ramme, and an hyn of oyle to an Ephah. Upon the .xv. day of the seuenth moneth, he shal kepe the seuen dayes holy, one after another, euē as the other seuen dayes: with the synoffryng, burntofferyng, meatofferyng, and with oyle.

¶ The sacrifyces of the Sabboth and of the newe mones. Thozowe whiche dozes they must go in, oz come out of the temple, &c.

Thus sayth the Lozde God: ꝑ doze A of the innermer courte towared ꝑ East shalbe shut ꝑ syxe wozkynge dayes: but in the Sabboth, and in the daye of the new mone it shalbe opened. Then shall ꝑ pzynce come vnder the doze poztch, & stande styl without by the doze cheke. So the pzestes shal offer vp hys burnt and helthofferynges. And he shall wozshyp at the doze post, & go hys way fozth agayn but the doze shal nomoze be shut tyl ꝑ euenyng. B

On the same maner shall the people of ꝑ land also do theyr wozshyp befoze the Lozd wythout this doze vpon the Sabbothes and new mones This is nowe the burntofferyng, that ꝑ pzynce shall bzyng vnto the Lozde vpon the Sabboth syxe lambes without blemysh, and a ram without blemysh, and an Ephah foz a meatofferyng with the ram. As foz the lambes, he maye geue as many meatoffrynges to them as he wyl: and an hyn of oyle to an ephah. In the daye of ꝑ new moneth it shalbe a yonge bullocke without blemysh: syxe lambes and a ram also without blemysh: With the bullocke he shall geue an ephah and wyth the ramme an ephah also foz a meateoffering, but to the lambes, what he maye come by. And euer an hin of oyle to an ephah. C

When the pzynce cōmeth, he shal go vnder the doze poztche, and euen there departe fozth agayne. But when the people of ꝑ lande come befoze the Lozd in the hye solempne feast, as many as come in by the nozth doze to do wozshyp, shal go out agayn at the south doze. And they ꝑ come in at the south doze, shall go fozth agayne at the nozth doze. There shall none go out at the doze, where he came in, but shall go ryghte fozth ouer on the other syde, and the Pzynce shall go in and out amonge them. Upon the solempne and hye feast dayes this shalbe the meatofferyng.

D An Ephah to a bullocke, and an ephah to a ram, and to the lambes, as many as he wyl: but euer an hin of oyle to an ephah. Nowe when the pzynce bzyngeth a burntoffring, oz an helthofferyng with a frewyl vnto the Lozd, the east doze shalbe opened vnto hym, that he maye do wyth his burnt and helthoffringes, as he doth vpon ꝑ Sabboth, & when he goeth fozthe, the doze shall be shut after hym agayne. He shall dayly bzyng vnto the Lozde a lambe of a yere olde without blemyshe foz a burnt offerynge: thys shall he do euery mozninge.

E And foz a meatofferyng, he shall geue ꝑ syxte parte of an Ephah, and ꝑ thyzde parte of an hin of oyle, to myngle with ꝑ cakes euery mozning Yee, this shalbe a dayly meatofferyng vnto the Lozde: foz an euerlastyng ozdynaunce: and thus shal the lambe the meatoffryng and oyle be geuen euery mozning, foz a dayly burnt offerynge.

Moreouer, thus sayth the Lozde God: If the pzynce geue a gyfte vnto any of his sonnes, then shall it be hys sonnes heritage perpetuall, that he may possesse it. But yf he wyl geue one of his seruaūtes, some of his heritage, it shalbe his to the *fre yere, and then to returne agayne vnto ꝑ pzynce: foz his heritage shalbe his sonnes only.

B Unto these the kynge appoynted a certayne porcyon of hys owne meate: and of the wyne, whyche he dranke hym selfe, so to norysshe them thre yere: that afterwarde they myght stand before the kynge. Amonge these nowe were certayne of the chyldren of Juda: namely Danyel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias. Unto these the chefe chamberlayne gaue other names, and called Danyel Balthasar Ananias, Sidrach: Misael, Misach: and Asarias, Abednago. But Danyel was at a poynte wyth hym selfe, * that he Gen.xliii.c Tobi.i.b. Judt.xii.a wolde not be defyled thorowe the kynges meat nor the wyne whyche he dronke. And this he desyred of the chefe chamberlayne, leste he shoulde defyle hym selfe. So God gaue Daniel fauoure and grace before the chefe chamberlayne that he sayde vnto hym: I am afrayde of my Lorde the kynge, which hath appoynted yon your meat & drynke: leest he spye youre faces to be worse lykenge then the other sprynngaldes of your age, & so ye shall make me lose my heade vnto ꝑ kyng. C

Then Danyel answered Melassar, whome the chefe chamberlayn had set ouer Daniel Ananias, Misael, and Asarias, and sayde: O proue but ten dayes with thy seruaũtes, & let vs haue pottage to eate, and water to drynke, then loke vpon our faces, and theyrs that eate of the kynges meate. And as thou seyst, so deale wyth vs thy seruaũtes. So he consented to them in this matter, and proued them x. dayes. And after ꝑ ten dayes, theyr faces were better lykynge and fatter then all ꝑ ponge sprynngaldes, which ated eate of the kynges meate.

D Thus Melassar toke away theyr meate and wyne, & gaue them pottage therfore. God gaue nowe these foure sprynngaldes conning and learnynge in all scrypture and wysedome: but vnto Danyel specyally, he gaue vnderstandyng of al visyons and dreames. Nowe when ꝑ tyme was expyred, that the kyng had appoynted to bryng in these ponge sprynngaldes vnto hym, the chefe chamberlayne brought them before Nabuchodonosor and the kyng commned with them. But amonge them all were founde none such as Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Asarias. Therfore stode they before the kynge in all wysdome, and matters of vnderstandyng, that he enquyred of them, found them ten tymes better, then all the southsayers and charmers, that were in all hys realme. And Danyel abode styll, vnto the fyrst yere of kynge Cirus.

¶ The dreame of Nabuchodonosor. He calleth vnto hym sothsayers, and requyreth of them both the dreame and the interpretacyon therof. They answer that they can not shewe it. The kynge commaundeth all the wyse men of Babylon, to be slayne. Daniel requyreth tyme to solute the question. The lord openeth ꝑ mistery vnto Daniel. Daniel is brought vnto the kyng, and sheweth hym hys dreame, & the interpretacyon therof. Of the euerlastynge kyngdome of Christe.

A N the seconde yeare of the raygne of Nabuchodonosor, had Nabuchodonosor a dreame, * where thorow hys spirryte was vexed, & his slepe brake from him. Then the kyng commaunded to call together all the sothsayers, charmers wytches, and Chaldees, for to shewe the kynge Job. vii.b. Dani.viii.a and.b.a. hys dreame. So they came and stode before the kynge. And the kynge sayde vnto them: I haue dreamed a dreame, and my spryte was so troubled therewyth, that I haue cleane forgotten, what I dreamed. Upon this the Chaldees answered the kynge in ꝑ Syryans speche: O kyng God saue thy lyfe for euer. Shewe thy seruaun tes thy dreame, and we shall shewe the, what it meaneth. The kynge gaue the Chaldees theyr answere and sayde: It is gone fro me. Yf ye wyl not make me vnderstande the dreame wyth the interpretacyon therof, ye shal dye, and your hou ses shalbe prysed.

But yf ye tell me the dreame & the meanyng B therof, ye shall haue of me gyftes, rewardes and great honoure: onely shewe me the dreame and the sygnyfycacion of it. They answered agayne and sayde: the kyng must shewe his seruauntes the dreame: and so shall we declare what it meaneth. Then the kynge answered, sayinge: I perceyue of a truth, that ye do but prolonge ꝑ tyme for so much as ye se that the thyng is gone from me. Therfore yf ye wyll not tell me the dreame, ye shall all haue one iudgement. But ye fayne & dissemble with vayne wordes, whych ye speake before me, to put of the tyme. Therfore tell me ꝑ dreame, and so shall I knowe, yf ye can shewe me what it meaneth. Upon this, the Chaldees gaue answere before the Kynge, and sayde: there is no man vpon earthe, that can tell the thynge, whiche the kynge speaketh of: yea, there is nether kyng prince nor Lorde, that euer asked such thynges at a sothsayer, charmer or Chaldey: for it is a very harde matter, that the kynge requyreth. Neyther is there any, that can certifye the kynge therof, excepte the goddes: whose dwellyng is not amonge the creatures.

For the whiche cause the kynge was wroth C with greate indignacyon, and commaunded to destroye all the wyse men at Babylon: and the proclamacyon went forth, & the wyse men were slayne. They sought also to slaye Danyel wyth hys companyons. Then Danyel enquyred of Arioch the kynges stewarde, of the iudgement and sentence, that was gone forth alreadv to kil suche as were wyse at Babylon. He answered and sayde vnto Arioch beynge then the kynges deputye. Why hath the kyng proclaymed so cruell a sentence? So Arioch tolde Daniel the matter. Upon this went Daniel vp, and desyred the kynge that he myght haue leysure, to shewe the kynge ꝑ interpretacyon, and then came he home agayne and shewed the thyng to Ananias, Misael, and Asarias his companyons: ꝑ they shuld beseech the God of heuen for grace in this secret D that Daniel and his fellowes wyth other suche as were wyse in Babylon, perysshed not. Then was the mistery shewed vnto Daniel in a visyon by nyght. And Danyel praysed the God of Heauen. Daniel also cryed loude, and sayde: O that the name of god myght be praysed for euer and euer, for wysdom and strength ar his owne * he chaungeth the tymes and ages * he putteth Dan.ii.d, downe kynges, he setteth vp kynges * he geueth † Luke.i.c. wysdome vnto the wyse, and vnderstandynge Iob.xxxviii.c Jer.xxvii.a

B Unto these the kynge appoynted a certayne porcyon of hys owne meate: and of the wyne, whyche he dranke hym selfe, so to norysshe them thre yere: that afterwarde they myght stand before the kynge. Amonge these nowe were certayne of the chyldren of Juda: namely Danyel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias. Unto these the chefe chamberlayne gaue other names, and called Danyel Balthasar Ananias, Sidrach: Misael, Misach: and Asarias, Abednago. But Danyel was at a poynte wyth hym selfe, * that he Gen.xliii.c Tobi.i.b. Judt.xii.a wolde not be defyled thorowe the kynges meat nor the wyne whyche he dronke. And this he desyred of the chefe chamberlayne, leste he shoulde defyle hym selfe. So God gaue Daniel fauoure and grace before the chefe chamberlayne that he sayde vnto hym: I am afrayde of my Lorde the kynge, which hath appoynted yon your meat & drynke: leest he spye youre faces to be worse lykenge then the other sprynngaldes of your age, & so ye shall make me lose my heade vnto ꝑ kyng. C

Then Danyel answered Melassar, whome the chefe chamberlayn had set ouer Daniel Ananias, Misael, and Asarias, and sayde: O proue but ten dayes with thy seruaũtes, & let vs haue pottage to eate, and water to drynke, then loke vpon our faces, and theyrs that eate of the kynges meate. And as thou seyst, so deale wyth vs thy seruaũtes. So he consented to them in this matter, and proued them x. dayes. And after ꝑ ten dayes, theyr faces were better lykynge and fatter then all ꝑ ponge sprynngaldes, which ated eate of the kynges meate.

D Thus Melassar toke away theyr meate and wyne, & gaue them pottage therfore. God gaue nowe these foure sprynngaldes conning and learnynge in all scrypture and wysedome: but vnto Danyel specyally, he gaue vnderstandyng of al visyons and dreames. Nowe when ꝑ tyme was expyred, that the kyng had appoynted to bryng in these ponge sprynngaldes vnto hym, the chefe chamberlayne brought them before Nabuchodonosor and the kyng commned with them. But amonge them all were founde none such as Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Asarias. Therfore stode they before the kynge in all wysdome, and matters of vnderstandyng, that he enquyred of them, found them ten tymes better, then all the southsayers and charmers, that were in all hys realme. And Danyel abode styll, vnto the fyrst yere of kynge Cirus.

Dan.iiii.f. Job.xxxiii. 1.Tim.vi.c. Ti.Joh.i.b. to those that vnderstand, he openeth the depe secretes: he knoweth the thyng that lyeth in darknesse, & for the lyghte dwelleth wyth hym.

I thanke the, and prayse the (O thou GOD of my fathers) that thou haste lente me wysedome and strengthe, and haste shewed me the thynge, that we desyred of the, for thou haste opened the kynges matter vnto me.

Upon this wente Danyel in vnto Arioch, whome the kynge had ordeyned to destroye the wyse at Babylon, he wente vnto hym, & sayde: destroye not suche as be wyse in Babylon, but bynge me in vnto the kynge, and I shall shewe the kynge the interpretacyon. Then Arioch brought Danyel in to the kynge in all the haste, and sayde vnto hym: I haue found a man amõg the prysoners of Juda, that shal shewe the kyng the interpretacyon. Then answered the kynge, and sayde vnto Danyel, whose name was Balthazar. Arte thou he that canste shewe me the dreame, whiche I haue sene, and the interpretacyon therof? Danyel answered the kynge to his face, and sayde: As for this secret: for the which the kynge maketh inquisycion: it is neyther the wyse, the sorcerer, the charmer, nor the deuel coniurer that can certifye the kynge of it. * Onely God in Heauen can open secrettes, and he it is that sheweth the kyng Nabuchodonosor what is for to come in the latter dayes.

E Thy dreame, and that which thou hast sene in thyne heade vpon thy bed, is thys: O kynge, thou dydest cast in thy mynde, what shuld come hereafter. So he that is the opener of mysteries telleth the, what is for to come. As for me, thys secrete is not shewed me, for any wysdome that I haue, more then any other liuynge, but onely that I myght shewe the kynge the interpretacyon, and that he myght knowe the thoughtes of his owne harte. Thou kyng sawest, & beholde, there stode before the a greate ymage whose fygure was maruelouse greate, and hys vysage grymme. The ymages heade was of fyne golde his brest and armes of syluer, his bodye and loynes were of copper, his legges were of yron, his fete were parte of yron, and parte of earth.

Luke.xx.b. mat.xxi.c. * Thys thou sawest tyll the tyme, that without any handes, there was hewen of a stone, which smote the ymage vpon the fete, that were both of yron and earth, and brake them to pouldere: then was the yron, the earthe, the copper, the syluer and golde broken all together in peces: and became lyke the chaffe of corne, that the wynde bloweth away from the sõmer flourrs, that they can no more be founde. But the stone that smote the ymage, became a greate mountayne, whiche fulfylleth the whole earth: This is the dreame. And nowe wyll we shewe before the kynge what it meaneth.

F Dan.ii.d. * O Kynge, thou arte a Kynge of Kynges. For the God of heuen hath geuen ỹ a kyngdom ryches, strength, and maiestye: and hath delyuered the all thynges, that are amonge the chyldren of men: the beastes of the felde and the foules vnder the heauen, and geuen the dominyon ouer them all: Thou art that golden heade. After that there shall aryse another kyngdomme, which shalbe lesse then thyne. The thyrde kyngdome shalbe lyke copper, and haue dominacyon in all landes. The fourth kyngdome shalbe as strong as yron. For lyke as yron bruseth & breaketh all thynges: Yea, euen as yron beateth euery thynge downe: so shal it beate downe and destroye. Where as thou sawest the fete and toes, parte of earth and parte of yron: that is a deuyded kyngdome, whyche neuertheles shall haue some of the yron grounde myxte wyth it, for so muche as thou haste sene the yron myxte with ỹ claye. The toes of the fete that were parte of yron and parte of claye, syguifyeth: that it shall be a kyngdom, partely stronge & partely weake And where as thou sawest yron mixt with clay they shall myngle them selues wyth the sede of symple people, and yet not contynue one with another lyke as yron wyll not be souldered with a potte shearde.

In the dayes of these kynges, shall the God of heauen set vp an *euerlastynge kyngdomme which shall not perysshe, and his kyngdome shal not be geuen ouer to another people: yea, ỹ same shall breake, and destroye all these kyngdomes but it shall endure for euer.

Hebr.xii.c. mat.xxi.c. And where as thou sawest, that without any handes there was cut out of the * mounte ‡ a stone, whiche brake the yron, the copper, ỹ earth the syluer and golde in peces: by that hathe the greate God shewed the kynge, what wyl come after this. This is a true dreame, and the interpretacyon of it is sure. Then ỹ kyng Nabuchodonosor * fell downe vpon his face, and bowed hym selfe vnto Danyel, and commaunded that they shoulde offer meatofferynges and swete odoures vnto hym. The kynge answered Danyel, and sayde: yee, of a trueth your God is a God aboue all goddes, a Lord aboue all kynges, and an opener of secrettes: seyng thou canst discouer this misterye. So ỹ kyng made Daniel a great man, and gaue hym many and great gyftes.

* He made hym rular of all the countrees of Babylon, and Lorde of all the nobles, that were at Babylon. Nowe Daniel intreated the kyng for Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, so that he made them rulars ouer all the offycers in ỹ land of Babylon: But Danyel hym selfe remayned styll in the courte by the kynge.

C The.iii. Chapter.

C The kyng setteth vp a golden Jmage, which he cõmaundeth to be worshypped. Sidrach Misach, and Abednago accused because they despysed the kynges commaundemẽt. They are brought vnto the kynge and cõmaunded to worshyp the ymage, they refuse to do it, and are put into a burnynge ouen. By beleue in God they are delyuered frome the fyre. Nabuchodonosor confesseth the power of God after the sygne of the myracle.

ABuchodonosor the kynge caused a golden ymage to be made, whyche was forty cubytes hye, and syxe cubites thicke. This he made to be set vp in the felde of Dura in the lande of Babylon, and sent oute to gather together ỹ dukes lordes and nobles, ỹ iudges and offycers, the debytes and shreues: w all the rulers of the lande: that they might come to the dedicacion of the the ymage, whiche Nabuchodonosor the kyng had set vp: So the dukes, Lordes and nobles, ỹ Judges and offycers, debytes and shyeues with all the rulers of ỹ lande gathered them together and came vnto the dedicatynge of the ymage, ỹ Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

B Nowe when they stode before the ymage, whiche Nabuchodonosor set vp, the bedel cryed out with all his myght: O ye people, kynredes and tonges, to you be it sayde: ỹ when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes, whyche shalbe blowen, wyth the harpes, shawmes, Psalteryes, Simphonyes and all maner of Musyke: ye fall downe and worshyppe that golden ymage, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge hath set vp. Whoso then falleth not downe and boweth hym selfe shall euen ỹ same houre be cast into an hote burnyng ouen. Therfore when all the folke hearde the noyse of the trompettes that were blowen, with the harpes, shawmes, Psalteryes, Symphonies, and all kynde of melody, then all ỹ people kynreds and nacyons fell downe, and bowed them selues vnto the golden ymage, ỹ Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

C Nowe were there certayne men of the Chaldees, that went euẽ then and accused the Jewes and sayde vnto the kynge Nabuchodonosor: O kynge, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Thou beyng kynge hast geuen a commaundemente, that all men when they heare the noyse of the trompets harpes, shawmes, Psalteryes, symphonies, and all the other melodyes shall fal downe and bow them selues, towarde the golden ymage: whoso then fell not downe and worshypped not that he shulde be cast into an hote burnyng ouen. Now Dani. 6. g. are there certayne Jewes * whome thou hast set ouer the offycers of the lande of Babilon: namely, Sidrach, Misach: and Abednago. These mẽ (O kynge) regarde not thy cõmaundement, yee they wyll not serue thy goddes, nor bowe them selues to the golden ymage, that ỹ hast set vp.

D Then Nabuchodonosor in a cruell wrathe and displeasure, cõmaunded that Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago shuld be brought vnto him So these men were brought before the kynge. Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnto them, and sayde: what? O Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, wyll not you serue my goddes? nor bowe your selues to the golden ymage, that I haue set vp? Wel, be redy here after. When ye heare the noyse of the trompettes blowe with the harpes shawmes, psalteryes, symphonies and all the other melodyes: that ye fall downe, and worshyp the ymage whiche I haue made. But yf ye worshyppe it not, ye shalbe cast immedyatly into an hote burnynge ouen. Let se, what God is there, that maye delyuer you oute of my handes. Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago answered ỹ king and sayde. O Nabuchodonosor, we oughte not to consent vnto the in this matter, for why? our Mat. vbi. g. God whome we serue * is able to kepe vs from the hote burnynge ouen (O kynge) & can ryght well delyuer vs out of thy handes.

E And though he wyl not, yet shalt thou know (O kynge) that we wyll not serue thy goddes, nor do reuerence to that Image, whyche thou hast set vp. Then was Nabuchodonosor full of indignacion, so that the countenauce of his face chaunged vpon Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago. Therfore he charged and commaunded that the ouen shuld be made seuen tymes hotter then it was wonte to be: and spake vnto the strongest worthies that were in his hoste, for to bynd Misach, and Sidrach, and Abednago, & to cast them into the hote burnynge ouen.

So these men were bounde in theyr cotes, hosen, shoes, with theyr other garmentes, and caste into an hote burnynge ouen: for the Kynges commaundement was so strayte, and the ouen was exceadynge hote. As for the men that put in Sidrach, Misach: and Abednago ỹ flam F of the fyre destroyed them. And these thre men, Sidrach, and Misach, & Abednago fell downe in the hote burnynge ouen, beyng faste bounde. Then Nabuchodonosor the kynge maruepied and stode vp in all haste: he spake vnto his counsayle, and sayde, dyd not you caste these thre men bounde into the fyre? They answered, and sayd vnto the kyng: Yea, O kyng. He answered and sayde: lo, for all that, yet do I se foure men goyng louse in the myddst of the fyre, and nothyng corrupte, and the fourth is lyke the sonne of god to loke vpon.

Upon this went Nabuchodonosor vnto the mouth of the hote burnynge ouen, he spake also and sayde: O Sidrach, Misach and Abednago ye seruauntes of the hye god, go forth, and come hyther. And so Sidrach, Misach and Abednago went out of the fyre. Then the dukes lordes, and nobles, and the kynges counsayle came together to se these men, * vpon whome the fyre Esa. xliii. a had no maner of power in theyr bodyes. In so much that the very heare of theyre heade was not burnte, and theyr clothes vnchaunged: yea, there was no smell of fyre felte vpon them.

Then spake Nabuchodonosor, and sayde: Blessed be the God of Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago: * whiche hath sent his aungell, and deliuered his seruauntes, that put theyr trust in him Ps. xxxiiii. a Dani. bi. a. Actes. xii. c that hath altered the kynges commaundemẽt and ieoparde theyre bodyes there vpon, rather then they would serue or worshyppe any other God: excepte theyr owne God only.

Therfore I wyll and commaunde, that all people, kynredes, and tonges, whyche speake any blasphemy agaynst ỹ God of Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, shall dye, and theyr houses shalbe pyped: Bicause * there is no God ỹ may Esay. lvi. c. Dan. iii. b. saue, as this. So the kynge promoted Sidrach Misach and Abednago in ỹ lande of Babylon.

A Nabuchodonosor * kyng vnto al people, kynredes, and tunges ỹ dwell vpon ỹ whole earth: peace be multiplied amõg you. I thought it good to shewe the tokens & maruelouse workes, ỹ the hye god hath wrought vpon me. A Dani. bi. a.

O, howe great are hys tokens, and howe myghtye are hys wonders? * Hys kyngdome is an euerlastynge kyngdome, and hys power lasteth for euer, and euer.

Psal.cxlv.b Dani.vii.b Luke.i.c.

I Nabuchodonozor beynge at rest in myne house, and florysshynge in my palace, sawe a dreame, whych made me afrayed: & the thoughtes that I had vpon my bed, wyth the visyons of myne heade, troubled me. * Then sente I out a commission, that all they whych were of wyse dome at Babylon shulde be brought before me to tell me the interpretation of the dreame. So there came the sothsayers, charmers, Caldees, & coniurers of deuels: to whom I told the dreame but what it betokened, they could not shew me: tyl at the last, there came one Daniel (otherwise called Balthazar, accordyng to the name of my God) whych hath the spryte of the holye goddes in hym, to whome I tolde the dreame, sayenge:

O Balthazar, thou prince of sothsayers: For so muche as I knowe, that thou haste the spryte of the holy goddes, and no secrete is hyd frō the: tell me therfore, what the visyon of my dreame (that I haue sene) maye signifye. I sawe a visyon in my heade vpon my bed: and beholde there stode a tree vpon the grounde, which was verye hye, great and myghtye: the heygth reached vnto heauen, and the bredth extended to all the endes of the earthe: hys leaues were fayre, he had very much frute, so that euery man had ynough to eate therin.

The beastes of the feld had shadowes vnder it, and the foules of the ayre dwelt in the bowes therof. Shortly all creatures fed of it. I sawe in my heade a visyon vpon my bed: and beholde, a watcher and a holye one came downe from heauen, and cryed myghtely, sayenge: Hewe downe the tree, breake of his braunches, shake of hys leaues, and scatre hys frute abrode: that all the beastes maye get them awaye from vnder hym and the foules from hys braunches. Neuertheles, leaue the groūde of hys rote styl in ỹ earth, and bynde hym vpon the playne feld, wyth cheynes of yron and stele. Wyth the dewe of heauen shall he be wet, and he shall haue his parte in the herbes of the grounde with other wylde beastes

C This sentence of the watcher, is a commaundement grounded and sought out in the councell of hym, that is moost holye: to learne men for to vnderstande, that the hyest hath power ouer the kyngdomes of men, and gyueth them, to whom it lyketh hym, and bryngeth the verye outcastes of men ouer them. This is the dreame, that I kynge Nabuchodonozor haue sene. Therfore O Balthazar, tell thou me what it signifyeth: for so muche as all the wyse men of my kyngdome are not able to shewe me what it meaneth. But thou cāst do it, for the spryte of ỹ holy goddes is in the. Then Daniel (whose name was Balthazar) held hys peace by the space of one houre and hys thoughtes troubled hym. So ỹ kyng spake and sayd: O Balthazar, let neyther the dreame nor the interpretacion therof feare the. Balthazar answered sayeng: O my Lorde, this dreame happen to thyne enemeis, and the interpretaciō to thyne aduersaryes. As for the tree that thou sawest whych was so great and myghty, whose heygth reached vnto the heauen, and hys bredth into all the worlde, whose leaues were fayre, and the frute muche, vnder the whiche the beastes of the felde had theyr habitacion, and vpon whose braunches the foules of the ayre dyd syt.

Euen thou: O kyng arte the tree, great and stroge. Thy greatnesse encreaseth, and reacheth vnto heauen, so doth thy power to the endes of ỹ earth. But where as the kynge sawe a watcher euen an holy angell, that came downe from heauen, and sayd: hewe downe the tree, and destroye it: yet leaue the grounde of the roote in the earth and bynde hym vpon the playne feld with cheynes of yron & stele. He shalbe wet with the dewe of heuen and his part shalbe with the beastes of the felde, tyl vii. yeares be come and gone vpon hym: Thys (O kynge) is ỹ interpretacion, yea, it is the very deuyce of him, that is hyest of all & it toucheth my lorde the kynge.

Thou shalt be cast out from mē, & thy dwellynge shalbe wyth the beastes of the felde, with grasse shalt thou be fed like an oxe. Thou muste be wet wyth the dewe of the heauen: yea, seuen yeares shall come, and go vpon the, tyl ỹ knowe * that the hyest hathe power vpon the kyngdomes of men, and gyueth them to whome he lyst. Moreouer, where as it was sayd, ỹ the roote of the tree shulde be lefte styll in the grounde: it betokeneth, ỹ thy kyngdome shall remayne whole vnto the, after thou hast learned to knowe, that the power commeth from heauen. Wherfore O kynge be contente wyth my councell, that thou mayst redeme thy synnes with almesse * & thyne offences wyth mercye to poore people: for thys shalbe an healynge of thyne erroure. All these thynges touch the kynge Nabuchodonozor.

So after. xii. monethes, the kynge walked vp and downe in the palace of the kyngdome of Babylon, and sayde: Thys is the greate citye of Babylon, whyche I my selfe (wyth my power and stengthe) haue made a kynges courte, for the honoure of my maiestye. Whyle these wordes were yet in the kynges mouth, there fel a voyce from heauen, sayenge: O kynge Nabuchodonozor, to the be it spoken: Thy kyngdome shall departe from the, thou shalte be cast out of mens companye: thy dwellynge shalbe wyth the beastes of the feld, so that thou shalt eate grasse as an oxe, tyll seuen yeares be come and gone ouer the: euen vntyll thou knowest, that the hyest hath power vpon the kingdomes of men, & that he maye gyue them, vnto whome it pleaseth hym. The verye same houre was thys matter fulfylled vppon Nabuchodonozor: so that he was caste oute of mens companye, and dyd eate grasse lyke an oxe. Hys bodye was wet wyth the dewe of heauen, tyll hys heeres were as great as Egles fethers, and his nayles lyke byrdes clawes.

My great estates and princes sought vnto me, and I was set in my kyngdome agayne, so ý I had yet greater worshyp.

Then dyd I Nabuchodonozor, loue, magnifye and prayse the kynge of heauen: for all his workes are true, and hys wayes ryght. As for those that go on proudlye, he is able to brynge them downe.

¶ Walthaser kynge of Babylon, abusyng the vessels of the temple, seeth an handwrytyng in the wal. The sothsayers, called of the kynge, can not expounde the wrytyng: Daniel is called, which readeth it & interpreteth it also. Walthasar beyng slayne: Darius succeadeth in hys rowme.

A KYng Walthazar made a great banket to hys thousande lordes: with al those thousande he made great chere, & whē he was dronken with wine, he cōmaūded to brynge hym the golden & syluer
i.pa.xxxvi.c vessels *which his father Nabuchodonosor had taken out of the temple at Jerusalem: that the kyng & his lordes with his quene and cōcubynes myght drynke therout.

So they brought the golden vessel, that was taken oute of the temple of the Lordes house at Jerusalem. Then the kynge and hys Lordes wt his quene and concubynes dronke out of them. They dronke wyne and praysed theyr Idols of golde, syluer, copper, yron, wodde and stone.

B In the very same houre there appeared fyngers, as it had bene of a mans hande wrytyng, ryght ouer agaynste the candlestycke vpon the playne wal in the kinges palace, and the kynge sawe the palme of the hande that wrote. *Thē
Jerem.l.a chaunged the kynge hys countenaunce, and his thoughtes troubled hym, so that the ioyntes of hys bodye shoke, & his knees smote one agaynst
Dan.v.a. the other. *Wherfore the kynge cryed myghtelye, that they shulde brynge hym the charmers, Caldees, and coniurers of deuels. The kynge spake also to the wyse men of Babylon, & sayd: Who so can reade thys wrytyng, and shewe me the playne meanyng therof: shalbe clothed with purple haue a cheyne of golde aboute hys necke, and rule the thyrde parte of my kingdome.

Upon thys, came all the kynges wyse men: but they coulde neyther reade the wrytyng, nor shewe the kynge what it signyfyed. Then was the kynge sore afrayed, in so muche, that hys colloure chaunged, and hys lordes were sore vexed

So by reason of this matter, that had happened to the kynge and hys Lordes, the Quene wente vp her selfe in the banket house, and spake vnto the kynge, sayeng: O kynge, God saue thy selfe C for euer. Let not the thoughtes trouble the, and let not thy countenaunce be chaūged. For why? there is a man in thy kyngdome, that hathe the spryte of the holye goddes wythin hym, * as it Dan.v.a was sene in thy fathers dayes. He hath vnderstandynge and wysedome lyke the goddes. Yea the kynge Nabuchodonozor thy father made thys mā, chefe of the sothsayers, charmers, Caldees, and readers of destenyes: because that such an aboundaūt spryte, knowlege and wysedome (to expounde dreames, to open secretes, and to declare harde doubtes) was founde in hym: yea, euen in Daniell, whom the kynge named Walthazar. Let thys same daniell be sent for, and he shall tell what it meaneth:

Then was Daniell brought before the king. So the kynge spake vnto Daniell, and sayde: D
Art thou that Daniell: one of the preseners of Juda, whome my father the kynge brought out of Jewry? I haue herde speake of the, that thou hast the spryte of the holy goddes experience and vnderstandynge, and that there hath bene great wysedome founde in the. Nowe haue there bene brought me, wyse and counynge charmes, to reade thys wrytynge and to shewe me the meanynge therof. But they coulde not tell me, what thys matter signyfyed. Then harde I saye, that thou canst expounde darke thinges, and declare harde doubtes. Well, then yf thou canst reade thys wrytyng, and shewe me the meaning therof, thou shalt be clothed wt purple, haue a cheyne of golde aboute thy necke, and rule the thyrde parte of my kyngdome.

or gyue thy ryche gyftes to another: yet not the math.x.a.

kinge heare. God the hyest gaue vnto Nabucho donozor thy father, the dignitie of a kinge wyth worshyp and honoure, so that all people, kynredes and tonges stode in awe and feare of hym by reason of the hye estate, that he had lente hym For why, he slewe whome he wolde: he smote, whom it pleased hym. because hys harte was so proude, & hys stomacke set so fast vnto wylfulnesse: he was deposed frō hys kynglye trone, and hys maiestye was taken frō hym. He was shut out frō amonge men, hys harte was lyke a beastes harte, and hys dwellynge was wyth the wylde asses: he was fayne to eate grasse lyke an oxe, & hys bodye was wet wyth the dewe of the heauen, tyl he knewe, that the hyest had power vpon the kyngdomes of mē and setteth ouer them, whom he lyst.

And thou hys sonne (O Walthazar) for all F
thys, haste not submytted thyne harte, thoughe thou knewest al these thynges: but hast magnifyed thy selfe aboue the Lorde of heauen, so that the vessels of hys house were brought before the

that thou, and thy Lordes, wyth thy quene and thy concubynes, myght drynke wyne therout. And hast praysed the Idoles of syluer and golde copper and yron, of wood and stone, whych neyther se, heare nor vnderstande. As for the God Actu.xvij.b *in whose hande consisteth thy breath, & all thy wayes thou hast not loued hym.

G Therfore is the palme of thys hande sente hyther from hym, to token vp thys wrytynge. And thys is the scripture, that is wrytten vp: Mane, Thetel, Phares. Now the interpretacio of the thinge is this: Mane, God hath nombred the kyngdome, and brought it to an ende: Thetell, thou arte wayed in the balaunce, and arte founde to lyght: Phares, thy kyngdome is delte in partes, and gyuen to the Medes and Parses.

Then commaunded Balthazar, to cloth Daniell wyth purple, to hange a chayne of golde about hys necke, and to make a proclamacion cōcernynge hym: that he shulde be the ruler of the thyrde part of hys kingdome. * The verye same Esa.xlviij.b myght was Balthazar the kyng of the Caldees slayne, & Darius out of Medea toke in the kingdome, beyng.lxii. yeare of age. Dan.v.a.

¶ The.vi. Chapter.

¶ Daniell is made ruler ouer the lordes. The Imagynacion of an acte agaynste Daniell. The proclamacion of the acte, whereof Daniell is accused vnto the kyng as a transgressour: He is put into a denne of Lyons by the commaundemente of the kyng: He is delyuered by fayth in God: Daniels accusers are put vnto ꝑ Lyons to be torne in sonder: Darius by the proclamacyon of a decree, magnyfyeth the God of Daniel.

IT pleased Darius to set ouer his kyngdom an.C. and.xx. Lordes, whiche shulde be in all hys kingdō about. Aboue these he set thre princes (of whome Daniell was one) that the Lordes might gyue accōptes vnto them, & the kyng to be vndiseased

But Daniell exceaded all these princes and lordes, for the sperite of God was plenteouse in him: so that the kyng was mynded to sette him ouer the whole realme. Wherfore the princes & lordes sought, to pycke out in Daniel some quarel against the kyngdome: yet coulde they fynde none occasion nor faute vpon hym. For why? he was so faythfull, that there was no blame nor dishonestye founde in hym.

Then sayde these men: we can get no quarell B agaynst thys Daniell, except it be in the lawe of hys God. Vpon thys, went the princes and lordes together vnto the kynge, and sayd thus vnto hym: Kynge Darius, God saue thy lyfe for euer. All the greate estates of the realme, as the Princes, Dukes, Senatours, and Judges, are determed to put out a cōmaundement of ꝑ kyng and to make a sure statute: namely, that who so desyreth any peticion, ether of any God or man (wythin these.xxx. dayes) except it be only of ꝑ, O kynge: the same person may be caste into the Lyons denne. Wherfore, O kynge, confirme ꝑ thys statute, and make a wrytyng: ꝑ the thynge whyche the Medes and Perses haue ordeyned, be not altered nor broken.

C So Darius made the wrytynge: & cōfirmed it. Nowe when Daniell vnderstode that ꝑ wrytynge was made, he went into his house: and the wyndowes of hys wall towarde Jerusalē stode open. There kneled he downe vpon hys knees, thre tymes a daye: there he made hys peticion: & praysed hys God, lyke as hys maner was to do afore tyme.

Then these men made searche, & founde Daniel makynge hys peticion, and prayenge vnto hys God. So they came to the kynge, and spake before hym concernynge his commaundemente, sayenge: O kynge, hast thou not subscribed the statute: that wythin.xxx. dayes who so requyreth hys peticion of anye God or man but onely of thy selfe, O kynge: he shalbe cast into ꝑ denne of the Lyons? The kynge answered, and sayde: yea, it is true. It muste be as a lawe of the Medes and Perses, that maye not be broken.

Then answered they, and sayde vnto the D kynge: Daniell one of the preseners of Juda, O kynge, regardeth neyther the, nor thy statute, ꝑ thou hast made: but maketh his peticion thre tymes a daye. When the kynge herd these wordes he was sore greued, and wolde haue excused Daniell, to delyuer him, and put of ꝑ matter, vntyll the Sunne wente downe to the intente that he myght saue hym.

These men percepuynge the kynges mynde sayde vnto hym: knowe thys (O kyng) that the lawe of the Medes and Perses is that the commaundement and statute whiche the kynge maketh, maye not be altered. * Then the kinge bad Bel.f. them bynge Daniel, and they cast him into the Lyons denne.

The kynge also spake vnto Daniell, and sayde: thy God, whom thou alwaye seruest, euen he shall defende the. And there was brought a stone, and layed vpon the hole of ꝑ denne, thys the kynge sealed wyth hys owne ryng, & wyth the sygnet of hys princes: that the kynges commaundement concernynge Daniel shulde not be broken.

So the kynge went vnto his palace, and eate E no meate that nyght nether was there any mynistrelsye brought in before hym, neyther coulde he take any slepe. But bytymes in the morynge at the breake of the daye, the kynge arose, and went in all hast vnto the denne of the Lyons.

Nowe as he came nye vnto the dēne, he cryed wyth a pyteous voyce vnto Daniel, yea ꝑ kyng spake and sayde vnto Daniell: O Daniell, thou seruaunte of the lyuynge God, is not thy God (whom thou alwaye seruest) able to delyuer the from the lyons? Daniell sayd vnto the kyng. O F Dan.iij.e. kynge God saue thy lyfe for euer. * My God Act.xij.c. hath sent hys angell whych hath shut the lyons Jud.xiij.f. mouthes, so that they myght not hurte me. For 1.reg.xvij.c why? myne vngyltynesse is founde oute before Deut.xi.f. him. And as for ꝑ, O kyng, I neuer offended the.

Then was the kyng exceadyng glad, and cōmaunded to take Daniell out of the denne. So Daniel was brought out of the denne, & no maner of hurt, was founde vpō him. For he put his trust in hys god. And as for those mē which had accused Daniel, the kyng cōmaunded to bynge them, and to cast them in the lyons denne: them, Dan.vii.g they yp(d)ze (e) and theyr wyues. * So the lyons had the maistry of them, and brake all theyr bones asonder, or euer they came at the grounde.

Dan.iii.k. *After thys, wrote kynge Darius vnto al people, kynredes, and tonges, that dwelte in all landes: peace be multiplied wythyou. Hy commaundemente is, in all my dominion and kyngdome, that men feare and stande in awe of Daniels God.

Deu.xxxii.f *For he is the lyuynge God, whyche abydeth euer: his kyngdome shall not fayle, and his Esa.xliii.b power is euerlasting. * It is he that delyuereth Dan.vi.f and sauyth: he dothe wonders and maruaylous workes in heuen and in earth: he hath preserued Daniel from the power of the lyons. Thys Daniel prospered in the raygne of Darius and Cyrus of Persia.

¶ The.vii. Chapter.

¶ A vysyon of foure beastes is shewed vnto Daniell. The vysyon is interpreted of foure kyngdomes of the worlde Of the power and encrease of Antichryste. Of the euerlastynge kyngdome of Christ.

IN the fyrste yeare of Balthazar kynge of Babylon, sawe Daniell a dreame, & a vysyon was in hys heade vpon hys bedde. Whyche dreame he wrote, and the summe of the matter is thys: Daniell spake and sayd: I sawe in my vysyon by nyght, and beholde: the foure wyndes of the heauen stroue vpon the see, and foure great beastes came vp frō the see one lyke another.

Jer.iii.a.b Exe.i.b.c.a Exe.xxvii.a The fyrst was as *a lion, and yet had he taegles wynges. I sawe, that hys wynges were pluckte from hym, and he taken awaye from the earth: that he stode vpon hys fete as a man, and that there was gyuen hym a mans harte.

B Pso.xviii.c Beholde, the second beast was like a *Beer, and stode vpon the one syde. Amonge hys teeth in hys mouthe he had.iii. greate longe teeth and it was sayde vnto hym: Aryse: eate vp muche flesshe. Then I loked, and beholde, there was an other lyke vnto a Leoparde, thys had wynges as a foule, *euen foure vpon the backe. Thys Dan.viii.b and.xi.a. beaste had foure heades, & there was power gyuen hym. After this I sawe in a vision by night and beholde, the fourth beast was grymme and horrible, and maruelous stronge. It had greate yron teeth it deuoured and destroyed, & stamped the residue vnder hys fete. It was farre vnlyke the other beastes that were before it: for it had

And beholde, there came vp amonge them another lytle horne, before whome there were thre of the fyrste hornes pluckt awaye. Beholde thys horne had eyes lyke a man: and mouthe speakynge presumptuous thynges. * I loked tyl the seates were prepared, and tyll the olde aged Apoc.t.c. xvii.a.xx.b. Dan.v.a. sat hym downe. Hys clothynge was as whyte as snowe, and the heeres of hys head lyke ỹ pure woll. Hys throne was lyke the fyrye flame, and hys wheles as the burnynge fyre. There drewe forth a fyrye streame: and went out from hym

Apoc.v.d. * A thousande tymes a thousande serued hym. x. M. tymes ten thousande stode before hym. The iudgement was set, & the bokes opened. Then toke I hede therevnto, bycause of the voyce of the proude wordes: which the horne spake. I beholde tyll the beast was slayne, and his body destroyed, *geuen ouer to be brente in the fyre. mat.xxv.b Apoc.xix.b xx.a

As for the power of the other beastes also it was taken away, but theyr lyues were prolonged for a tyme and season. I sawe in a vision D by nyghte, and beholde, * there came one in the mat.xxiv.c cloudes of heauen lyke the sonne of a mā, whych Actu.i.b wente vnto the olde aged, before whome they Apoc.i.a. brought hym. Then gaue he hym * power and Phi.ii.a dignitie regal, that al people, tribes and tonges shulde serue hym. * Hys power is an euerlasting mat.xxiv.c power, which shall neuer be put downe: and his Ihon.xii.b kyngdome endureth vncorrupte. My hart was Dan.viii.c vexed, * & I Daniell had a troubled spyrite within me, & the visions of my heade made me afrayed, tyl I gat me vnto * one of them that stode by, Deut.xx.b to knowe the truth, concernynge all these thynges. So he tolde me, and made me vnderstande the interpretacion of these thynges.

These foure great beastes, are foure kinges E which shall aryse out of the earthe. These shall take in the kyngdome of the sayntes of the most hyest, and possesse it styll more and more for a longe season. After thys I requyred diligentlye to knowe the truth, concerning the fourth beast, whyche was so farre vnlyke the other beastes, and so horrible, whose teeth were of yron, & hys nayles of brasse: whyche deuoured and destroyed and stamped the residue vnder hys fete. I desyred also to knowe the truth, as touchyng ỹ *ten Apoc.xiii.a and.xvii.c hornes that he had vpon hys heade and thys other whyche came vp afterwarde, before whose face there fell downe thre, which horne had eyes & a mouthe that spake presumptuous thynges, and loked wyth a grymmer vysage then hys fellowes. I beheld, and the same horne made bat- F tell agaynst the sayntes, yea, and gat the victorye of them vntyll the tyme that the olde aged came, that the iudgement was gyuen to the chefeste sayntes: and tyll the tyme that the sayntes had ỹ kyngdome in possessyon. He gaue me thys answere. That fourth beaste shalbe the fourthe kyngdome vpon earth: it shalbe more then al other kyngdomes, it shal deuoure, treade downe, and destroye all other landes.

*The ten hornes, are ten kynges, that shall G aryse out of the kyngdome, after whome there Zach.i.c. shall stande vp another, whyche shalbe greater then the fyrst. He shall subdue thre kynges, and shall speake wordes agaynste the hyest of all: he shall destroye the sayntes of the moost hyest, * & Dan.vii.c thynke, that he may chaunge tymes and lawes They shalbe gyuen vnder hys power, * vntyl a Apoc.xii.b. tyme, two tymes and halfe a tyme.

But the iudgement shalbe kepte, so that hys power shalbe taken from him, for he shall be destroyed, & perysh at the last. As for ỹ kyngdom, power, and al myght that is vnder the heauen: it shalbe gyuen to the holy people of the moost hyest, * whose kyngdome is euerlastynge: yea, Luke.i.c. al powers shal serue and obeye him. ¶ The.viii.Chapter.

¶ A vision of a stryke betwene a Ramme and an hegoate The vnderstanding of the visiõ is of the battel betwene the kynge of Persia and the kynge of the Grecians. Of the shameles kynge Antichrist.

IN the thyrde yeare of ỹ raygne of kyng Balthazar, there appeared a visiõ vnto me Daniel, after that I had sene the Dan.vii.a. *fyrst, I sawe in a vision (and when I sawit, I was at Susis in the chefe citie, whych Jer.xlix.f. Eze.xxvii.h lyeth in the lande of * Elam) and in the vision, me thought I was by the ryuer of Ulai.

Then I loked vp, & sawe: and beholde there stode before the ryuer, a ramme, whych had two hornes: and these two hornes were hye but one was hyer then another: and the hyest came vp behynde. I sawe that thys ramme pushed wyth hys hornes, agaynst the west, agaynst the north and against the south: so that no beastes might stande before hym, nor defende them from hys power: but he dyd as hym lysted, & waxed great lye. I toke hede vnto thys, and then came there an hegoate from the west ouer the whole earth, and touched not the grounde.

B This goate had a maruelous wythẽ horne betwyxte hys eyes, and came vnto the Ramme that had the two hornes (whõ I had sene afore by the ryuer syde) and ranne fearcely vpon hym wyth hys myght. I sawe hym draw nye, vnto the Rãme, beynge verye fearce vpon hym: yea, he gaue hym such a stroke, that he brake his two hornes. Nether had the Rãme so much strength as to stande before hym: but he cast hym downe, trode hym vnder hys fete, and no man was able to delyuer the Ramme out of hys power.

Dan.viii.a and.xi.a. t.Mach.i.a broken also. * Then grew there other foure such lyke in the steade, towarde the foure wyndes of the heauen. Yea, oute of one of the leest of these hornes, there cam yet vp another, whych waxed maruelous great toward the south, toward the east, and towarde the fayre pleasaunt lande. It grewe vp to the hoost of heauen, wherof it dyd cast some downe to the grounde, and of the starres also, and trode them vndre fete.

¶ Yea, it grewe vp vnto the prince of the hoost from whom the daylye offryng was taken, and the place of the Sanctuarye casten downe. And a certayne season was gyuen vnto it, agaynste the dayly offryng (bicause of wickednes) that it myght cast downe the veritie to the grounde, & so to prosperе in al thynges, that it went about.

Upon thys I harde one of the sayntes speaynge, whiche saynt sayde vnto one that asked thys question. Howe longe shall thys vision of the daylye sacrifyce and of the wastynge abhominacion endure: that the Sanctuarye and the powre shall so be troden vnder fote? And he answered hym: Vnto the euenynge and the mornynge, euen two thousande and thre hundreth dayes: than shal the Sanctuary be clẽsed agayn

D Nowe when I Daniel had sene thys vision and sought for the vnderstanding of it: beholde there stode before me a thynge lyke vnto a man. And I harde a mans voice in the ryuer of Ulay whych cryed, and sayde: O Gabriel, make thys man to vnderstande the vision. So he came and stode by me. But I was afrayed at hys commynge, and fell downe vpon my face.

Then sayd he vnto me: O thou sonne of mã E marcke well, for in the last tyme shall thys visyon be fulfylled. Nowe as he was speakynge vnto me, I waxed faynt, so that I sanke downe to the grounde. But he toke hold vpon me, and set me vp agaynst, sayenge: Beholde, I wyll shewe the, what shall happen in the last wrath: for in the tyme appoynted it shalbe fulfylled.

The Ramme whych thou saweste wyth the two hornes is the kynge of the Medes and Perses: but the goate is kynge of Greke lande: the greate horne that stode betwyxte hys eyes, that is the principall kynge. But where as it brake and foure other rose vp in the steade: it signifyeth, that out of thys people shal stand vp * foure t.Mach.i.a kyngdomes, but not so myghtye as it.

After these kyngdomes (whyle vngodlynes F is a growyng) there shal aryse a kynge of an vnshamefaste face, whyche shall be wyse in darcke speakynges.

He shalbe myghtye and stronge, but not in hys owne strength. He shal destroye aboue measure, and all that he goeth aboute shall prosperе he shall slaye the stronge and holye people. And thorowe hys chaftynes, falshed shall prosperе in hys hande, his herte shalbe proude, and many one shall he put to death in hys welthynesse. He shall stande vp agaynste the prynce of prynces, * but he shall be destroyed wythout hande. And g.mac.xv.c v.Thes.i.b thys vysion that is shewed vnto the, is as sure as the euenynge and the mornynge. * Therfore wryte thou vp thys syghte, for it wyll be longe or it come to passe. xlvi.a.b

Upon this was I Daniel very faynt, so that I laye sycke certayne dayes: but whẽ I rose vp I wente aboute the kynges busynesse, and marueled at ỹ vision, neuertheles, nomã knew of it

C The.x. Chapter.

IN the thyrde yeare of kynge Cyrus
A of Persia, there was shewed vnto Daniell (otherwyse called Balthazer) a matter, yea, a true matter, but it is yet a longe tyme vnto it. He vnderstode the matter well and perceyued what þ vysyon was. At the same tyme: I Daniell moorned for the space of thre weakes, so that I had no lust to eate breade: as for flesche & wyne there came none wythin my mouthe: No, I dyd not once anoynte my selfe, tyl the whole thre wekes were out.

Dan.viii.b. was by the greate floud, called * Tygris I lyft
Apoc.i.c. vp myne eyes, and loked: and beholde a man clothed in lynen, whose loynes were gyrded vp wyth fyne golde of Arabye: hys bodye was lyke the Chrysolyte stone, hys face (to loke vpon) was lyke lyghtenynge, hys eyes as the flame of fyre hys armes and fete were lyke fayre glysterynge metall, but the voyce of hys wordes was lyke

B *Daniell alone sawe thys vysyon, ‡the men
Dan.iii.c ‡Act.ix.a that were with me, sawe it not: but a great fear fulnesse fell vpon them, so that they fled awaye and hyd them selues. I was lefte there my selfe alone, and sawe thys greate vysyon, so longe tyl there remayned nomore strength wythin me. Yea, I lost my coloure cleane I wasted awaye, and my strength was gone. Yet harde I ỹ voice of hys wordes: and as soone as I harde it, fayntnesse came vpon me, and I fell downe flat to the grounde vpon my face. And beholde, an hande touched me, whyche set me vp vpon my knees & vppon the palmes of my handes, sayenge vnto
Dan.x.b. me: *O Daniell, thou well beloued man: take good hede of the wordes, that I shall saye vnto the, and stande ryghte vp, for vnto the am I nowe sente.

And when he had sayd these wordes, I stode vptremblyng. Then sayd he vnto me: feare not Daniel: for whyle sence ỹ fyrst day that ỹ dydest set thyne harte to vnderstande, and dyddest chasten thy selfe before thy God: thy wordes haue ben herde. And I had come vnto the, when thou begänest to speake, had not ỹ prince ouer ỹ kingdome of the Perses wythstande me. xxi. dayes.
Josu.b.d: Dan.x.a But lo, *Michaell one of ỹ chefe princes, came to helpe me, & I was left to cõtinue therwyth ỹ kynges of Persea, & am come to shewe the what shal happen vnto thy people in the later dayes. For it wylbe lõge yet or the vision be fulfylled.

D Nowe when he had spoken these wordes vnto me, I caste downe my head to the groũde and held my tonge. Beholde, there touched my lyppes one very lyke vnto a man. Then opened I my mouth, and sayd vnto him, that stode before me, O my Lorde, my ioyntes are loosed in ỹ vpsyon and there is nomor strength wythin me. Howe may my Lordes seruaunt thẽ talke wyth my Lorde? seynge there is no strengthe in me, so that I can not take my breath? Upon this there Dan.x.b, touched me agayne, one much lyke a man *and comforted me, sayenge: O thou man so well beloued feare not: be content, take a good hart vnto the, and be stronge. So when he had spoken vnto me, I recouered, and sayd: Speake on my Lorde, for thou haste refreshed me. Then sayde he: knowest thou wherfore I am come vnto the? nowe wyll I go to fyght wyth the kyng and the prince of the Perses. As soone as I go forth, lo, the prince of Grekelande shall come. Neuertheless I wyll shewe the that thynge, that is faste noted in the scripture of truth. And as for ponder matters, there is none that helped me in thẽ, but Michaell your prince.

¶ A prophecye of the kynges of Persia. Of the kyngdome of Greece. Of the kyngdom of Egypt, and of the bonde ther of, and of the battell wyth the kyngdome of Syria. Of the Jewes that flye vnto the kynge of Egypte, whome Antiochus the kynge of Syria persecuteth, whych figureth vnto vs Antichrist. The pryde of Antiochus.

AND in the fyrste yere of Darius of Media I stode by hym, to comforte hym, and to strengthe hym, and nowe wyl I shewe the the truth. Beholde, there shal stande vp yet thre kynges in Persia, but the fourth shalbe farre rycher then they all. And when he is in the chefeste power of hys ryches, he shall prouoke euery mã agaynst the realme of Grekelande. *Then shal
Dan.viii.a there aryse yet a myghtye kynge, that shall rule wyth greate dominion, and do what hym lyste.
*And as soone as hys kyngdome cõmeth vp, it i.Mach.i.a shal be destroyed, and deuyded toward the foure wyndes of heauen. They that come after hym, shall not haue suche power and dominion as he: but hys kyngdome shalbe scatered, yea, euen amonge other then those. And the kynge of the south shalbe myghtyer, then hys other prynces. And one shall be stronger then he, and shall rule hys dominion wyth great power.

And in the ende of yeares, they shalbe ioyned B together, and the kynges daughter of the south shall come to the kynge of ỹ North, for to make frendshyp, but he shal not obtayne the power of that arme, nether shall she be able to endure thorowe hys myght: but she, and such as broughte her (yea and he that begat her, and cõforted her for hys tyme) shall be delyuered vp. Out of the braunches of her roote, there shall one stande vp in hys steade whych wyth power of armes shall go thorowe the kynges lande of the north, and handle hym accordynge to hys strength. As for they? Idols and prynces, wyth they? costly Jewels of golde & syluer, he shall cary them awaye captiues into Egypte, and he shal raygne more yeares then the kynge of the North. And when he is come into the kynges realme of ỹ south, he shalbe fayne to turne agayn into his owne land (Wherfore his sõnes shalbe displeased, & shal gather together a myghty great hoost of people: & one of them shall come, & go thorowe lyke a water floude: then shall he returne, & go forth wyth despeyte and boastynge vnto hys owne lande.

Then the kynge of the south shalbe angrye C and shall come forth to fyght agaynst the kyng of the north: yea, he shal bringe a greate multytude of people together, and a greate heape shall be geuen into hys hãde: these shall he cary awaye wyth great pryde, for so muche as he hath caste downe so many thousãdes, neuertheless, he shal not preuayle. For the kyng of the north shal gather (of the newe) a greater heape of people then afore, and come forth (after a certayne tyme and yeares) wyth a myghtye hoost, and exceadynge greate good.

At the same tyme there shall many stande vp agaynste the kynge of the south, so that the wycked chyldren of thy people also shall exalte them selues (to fulfyll the vysyon) and then fall. So the kynge of ỹ north shal come to laye sege, and to take the stronge fensed cityes: And ỹ power of them of the southe shall not be able to abyde hym, & the beste men of the people shall not be so stronge, as to resyst hym. Shortly whẽ he cõmeth, he shall handle hym as he lyst, & no man shalbe so hardy as to stande agaynste hym. He shal stande in the pleasaunt countre, whych thorowe hym shalbe destroyed: he shal set hys face wyth all hys power to obtayne hys kyngdome, & to be lyke it. Yea, that shall he do, & gyue hym vnto the doughters amonge wemen, to destroy hym. But he shall fayle, nether shall he optayne hys purpose. After thys shal be set hys face vnto the Iles & take many of them. A prynce shall stoppe hym, to do hym shame, beyde the confusion that els shall come vnto hym. Thus shall he turne agayne to hys owne lande, stomble and fall, and be nomore founde: so he that came vpō hym and dyd hym violence, shall stande in hys place, and haue a pleasaunt kingdome: and after fewe dayes he shalbe destroyed, and that nether in wrath, nor in battel. In hys steade there shall aryse a vyle persone, not holdē worthy of a kynges dignitie: thys shall come in peaceably, and optayne the kyngdome wyth fayre wordes: he shall fyght agaynste the armes of the myghtye (and destroye them) yea, and agaynst the prynce of the couenaunt.

D So after that he hath taken truce wyth hym he shall handle dysceptfully: that he may get vp & ouercome hym wyth a small flocke: & so wyth craftynesse to get hym to the fattest place of the lande, and to deale otherwyse, then ether hys fathers or graūdfathers dyd. For he shal destroye the thynge, that they had robbed & spoyled, yea, & all theyr substaūce, ymagynyng thoughtes agaynst the stroge holdes, & that for a tyme. Hys power & harte shalbe stered vp wyth a great armye agaynste the kynge of the south where thorowe the kynge of the south shalbe moued then vnto battell, wyth a greate & myghtye hoost also. Neuertheles he shal not be able to stande, for they shall conspyre agaynst him. Yea, they that eate of his meate shal hurt him: so that his hoost shall fall, and many be slayne downe.

E These two kinges shalbe minded to do mischefe, and talke of dyscepte at one table: but they shall not prosper, for why? the ende shall not come yet: vnto the tyme appoynted. * then shal he go home agayne into hys owne lande wyth great good, and set hys harte agaynst the holye couenaunt, he shal busye agaynst it, and then returne home. At the time appointed he shal come agayne, & go towarde the south. So shal it happen otherwyse then at the fyrste, yet once againe And why? * the shippes with Italiās shal come vpon hym, that he maye be smytten and turne agayne: that he maye take indignacion agaynste the couenaunt of holynesse, to medle agaynst it. Yea, he shal turne him, and drawe such vnto him as leaue the holy couenaunt.

He shall set myghtye men to vnhalowe the F Sanctuary of strength, to put downe the dayly offryng, and to set vp the abhominable desolacion. And suche as breake the couenaunt shall he flatter wyth fayre wordes. But the people that wyl knowe theyr God, shal haue the ouerhande and prosper. Those also that haue vnderstandinge amonge the people shal enfourme the multitude: and for a longe season, they shalbe persecuted wyth swearde, wyth fyre, wyth captiuitie and wyth the takynge awaye of theyr goodes. Nowe when they fall, they shall be set vp wyth a lytle helpe: but manye shall cleaue vnto them faynedlye.

Yet some of those whiche haue vnderstāding shalbe persecuted also, that they maye be tryed purified and clensed, tyl the time be out: for ther is yet another tyme appointed. The kinge shal do what him lyst * he shall exalte and magnifie him selfe againste all that is God. Yea, he shall speake maruelous thinges agaynste the God of all goddes wherin he shall prospere, so longe tyl *the wrath be fulfylled, for the conclusion is decyded already. He shall not regarde the God of his fathers, but his lust shalbe vpon wemen. Yea, he shall not care for anye God, for he shall magnifye him selfe aboue all. In his place shal he worshippe the mightye stout God: and the God whom his fathers knewe not, shall he honoure with gold and syluer, with precious stones and pleasaunt Jewels. 11. Thes. 2. a

Thus shal he do, thorowe his stronge fensed places, settinge vp his straunge God whom G he confesseth and encreasing his glorie. Such as wyl receaue him, & take him for God, he shal geue them great worshyp & power: yea & make them lordes of the multitude, and giue them the lande with rewardes. In the latter tyme shal ꝑ kinge of the south striue with him, and the kinge of ꝑ north in lyke maner shal come agaynst him with charettes, horsemen and with a great nauy of shyppes. He shal come into the landes, destroy & go thorow: he shal entre also into ꝑ fayre pleasaūt lande: Many cities and countreis shal decaye * except Edom, Moab, & the best of ꝑ children of Ammon, which shal escape frō his hand. He shal stretch forth his handes vpon the countreys, & the lande of Egypt shal not escape him For thorow his goyng in, he shal haue dominion ouer the treasures of syluer and golde, and ouer al the precious Jewels of Egypt, Libia, & Ethiopia: * Neuertheles, the tidinges out of the East & the north shal trouble him, for the which cause he shal go forth to destroy and roote out a great multitude. The tētes of his palace shalbe pitched betwext the two sees, vpō the hil of the noble Sanctuary, for he shal come to his death * and then shal no man helpe him. Apoc. xvi. b and. xx. c.

¶ The. ix. Chapter.

A Ioy not thou tryumphe, O Israell, make no boastyng ouer ioyous thinges as do the hethē: for thou hast committed aduoutry agaynst thy God: whoryssh rewardes hast thou loued, more then all the corne floores.

* Therfore shall they nomore enioye the corne floores and wyne presses, and theyr swete wyne shall fayle them. They wyll not dwell in the Lordes lande: * but Ephraim tourneth agayne into Egipt, and eateth vncleane thinges amonge ꝑ Assirians. They poure out no wyne for a drynkoffryng vnto the Lord, neither gyue they hym theyr slayne offrynges: but they be vnto them as mourners meates, wherein all they that eate them are defyled. For the bread that they haue suche lust vnto, shall not come into ꝑ house of the Lorde. What wyll ye do then in the solempne dayes, and in the feast of the Lorde? Lo they shall get them away for the destruccyon. E gipt shal receyue them, & Noph shal bury them.

¶ The.iii. Chapter.

For take hede: in those dayes and at the same tyme, when I turne agayn the captiuytye of Juda and Ierusalem: I shall gather all people together, and bryng them in the valley of Iosaphat: and there wyl I reason with them because of my people & heritage of Israel, whō they haue scatred about in the nacions, & parted my lande: yea, they haue cast lottes for my people, the younge men haue they set in the brodell house, and solde the damsels for wyne, that they myght haue to drynke. *Thou Tyrus and Sydon, and all ye borders of the Philistines: what haue ye to do with me? Wyll ye defye me? well yf ye wyll nedes defye me, I wyll recompence you euen vpon your heade, and that ryght worthely: for ye haue taken awaye my syluer and golde, my fayre and goodlye iewels, & brought them into your goddes houses. The chyldren also of Juda and Ierusalem haue I solde vnto the Grekes, that ye myght bryng them farre from the borders of theyr owne countryes.

Beholde therfore, I wyll rayse them oute of the place where ye haue solde them, *and wyl reward you euen vpon your heade. Your sonnes and your doughters wyll I sel thorowe the handes of the chyldren of Juda, and so they shal geue them forth to sell vnto them of Saba, a people of a farre countrye, for the Lorde hym selfe hath sayde it. Crye out these thynges amonge ỹ Gentyles, proclayme warre, wake vp the gyauntes let them drawe nye, let them come vp all the lusty warryours of them. *Make you swerdes of your plowshares, and speares of youre syckeles and sythes: Let the weake man say: I am stroge

Wustre you and come, all ye heathen rounde about gather you together: there shall the Lorde laye all thy gyauntes to the grounde. Lette the people aryse, and get them to the valley of Iosaphat, for there wyll I syt, and iudge all heathen rounde about. *Laye to your sythes, for ỹ Apoc.xiiii.b harueste is rype: come get you downe: the wynepresse is full: yea, the wynepresses runne ouer, for theyr wyckednesse is waxen great.

In the valley appoynted there shalbe many people: for the daye of the Lorde is nye, in the valley appoynted. *The sunne and moone shal Joel.ii.d. be darkned, and the starres shall withdrawe theyr Esa.xiiii.b lyght. *The Lorde shall rore out of Syon, and Ier.xxv.b. crye out of Ierusalem, that the heauens and the earth shall quake withal. But the Lorde shalbe a defence vnto hys owne people, & a refuge for ỹ chyldren of Israel. Thus shall ye knowe that I the Lorde your God dwel vpon my holy mount of Syon. Then shall Ierusalem be holy, & there shall no straungers go thorowe her any more.

*Then shall the mountaynes drope swete wyne, and the hylles shal flowe with mylke. All the ryuers of Juda shall haue water ynoughe, and oute of the Lordes house there shall flowe a spryng, to water the brooke of *Sitim: but E- Ioel.xxi.a gypt shalbe layde waste: †and Edom shalbe de- †Ier.xlix.b solate: bycause they haue dealte so cruelly wyth the chyldren of Juda, and shed innocente bloude in theyr lande. Agayne, Juda shalbe inhabyted for euermore, and Ierusalem from generacyon to generacyon: for I wyl not leaue theyr bloude vnauenged. And the Lorde shall dwell in Syon.

A way wt the syluer, away wyth the golde, for there is no ende of treasure. There shalbe a multitude of all maner of costly ornamentes. Thus must she be spoyled, emptied and cleane strypped out: that their hartes maye be melted awaye, their knees tremble, all their loynes be weake, & their facys blacke as a pot.

Where is nowe the dwellyng of the Lyons and the pasture of the Lyons whelpes? where ꝑ lyon and the lionesse went with the whelpes, and no man frayde them away? But the lyon spoyled ynough for his yong ones, and deuoured for his lyonesse: he fylled his dennes with hys praye, and his dwellyng place with ꝑ he had raupshed. Beholde, I wyll vpon the, sayeth the Lorde of hostes, and wyl set fyre vpon thy charettes that they shall smoke withall, and the swearde shall deuoure the yonge lions. I wyl make an ende of thy spoyling from out of the earth, and ꝑ voyce of thy messaungers shal nomore be hearde.

¶ The.iii. Chapter.

¶ Of the fall of Ninue.

A Eze.xxiii.a Abac.ii.b WOe to the bloudthursty cītye, which is all full of lyes and robberye, and wyll not leaue of from raupshynge. There a man maye heare scourgyng russhynge, the noyse of the wheles, the cryinge of the horses, and the rollynge of the charettes. There the horsemen get vp wyth naked swerdes, and glystrynge speares: there lyeth a multitude slayne, and a great heape of dead bodyes: there is no ende of dead corses: yee, men fal vpon their bodyes. And that for the greate and manyfolde whordome, of the fayre & bewtyfull harlot which is a mastres of wytchcrafte: yee, & selleth the people thorowe her whordome, and ꝑ nacyons thorowe her wytchcrafte.

B Esa.xlvii.a Eze.xvi.d. Beholde, I wyl vpon the (sayeth the Lord of hostes) and wyl pul thy clothes ouer thy head that I maye shewe thy nakednes among ꝑ heathen, & thy shame among the kingdomes, I wyl cast durt vpon the, to make the be abhorred, and a gasyng stocke: Yee, al they that loke vpon the shal starte backe, and saye: Niniue is destroyed. Who wyll haue pytie vpon the: where shall I seke one to comforte the? Art thou better then the great cītye of Alexandria? that laye in the waters, and had the waters rounde about it: which was strongly fenced and walled with the see? Ethiopia and Egypt were her strength and that exceadyng great, aboue measure. Aphrica and Libya were her helpers, yet was she driuen awaye, and brought into captiuytye, her yonge children were smytten downe at the head of euery strete, the lottes were cast for the most auncyent men in her, and all her myghtye men were ¶ bound in cheynes. Euen so shalt thou also be drōken, and hyde thy selfe, & seke some helpe agaynst thyne enemy. All thy stronge cītyes shalbe lyke fygtrees with rype fygges: whych when a man shaketh, they shal fal into the mouth of ꝑ eater.

the:yee as the locust doth, so shall it eate the vp. It shall fall heuyly vpon the as the locustes:yee rygh te heuyly shall it fell vpon the, euen as the grethoppers. Thy marchauntes haue bene nom bred with the starres of heauen, but nowe shall they spryede abrode as the locustes, and fle theyr waye: Thy Lordes are as the grethoppers:and thy captaynes as the multytude of grethoppers which when they be colde, remayne in ỹ hedges: but when the Sunne is vp, they flee away, and no man can tell where they are become. Thy shepheardes are a slepe (O kynge of Assur) thy worthies are layde downe, thy people is scatred abrode vpon the mountaynes, and no man gathereth them together agayne. Thy wounde can not be hyd, thy plage is so sore. All they that heare thys of the, shall clappe theyr handes ouer the. For what is he, to whome thou hast not alwaye bene doynge hurte.

The ende of the prophecye of Nahum.

A complaynte agaynst Israel.

THis is the heuy burthen, which the Prophet Abacuc dyd se. O Lorde, *how longe shal I crye & thou wylt not heare? * Howe longe shall I complayne vnto the, sufferynge wronge, & thou wylte not helpe? Why letteste ỹ me se werynesse and labour? * Tyrannye and violence are before me, power ouergoeth ryghte: for the lawe is torne in peces. and there can not ryght iudgemẽt go forth. And why? the vngodlye is more set by then the ryghtuous: this is the cause, that wronge iudgement procedeth? * Beholde amonge the heathen, and loke well, wonder at it, and be abasshed: for I wyll do a thynge in your tyme, whyche though it be tolde you, ye shall not beleue. * For lo, I wyll rayse vp the Caldees, that bytter & swyfte people: whiche shall go as wyde as the lande is, to take possessyon of dwellynge places, that be not theyr owne. A grymme and boysterous people is it, these shall syt in iudgement & punyshe. Theyr horses are swyfter then the cattes of the mountayne, and byte sorer then * the wolues in the euenynge. Theyr horsemen come by greate heapes from farre, they flye hastely to deuoure as the Aegle. They come all to spoyle, onte of them commeth an eastwynde, whyche bloweth and gathereth theyr captaynes, lyke as ỹ sande They shal mocke the kynges, and laugh ỹ pryn ces to scorne. They shall not set by any stronge holde, for they shall laye ordynaunce agaynst it, and take it. Then shall they take a freshe corage vnto them: to go forth and to do more cupll, and so ascribe the power vnto * theyr God.

But thou O Lorde my God & my holy one, thou arte from the begynnynge, therfore shall we not dye. O Lorde, thou hast ordeyned them for a punyshmente, and set them to reproue the myghty. Thyne eyes are cleane, thou mayst not se cupll, thou canst not beholde the thynge that is wycked. ‡ Wherfore then doest thou loke vpon the vngodly, and holdest thy tonge when ỹ wycked deuoureth the man that is better then hym selfe? Thou makest men as the fysshe in the see, and lyke as the creppynge beastes, that haue no gyde, they take vp all with their angle, they catche it in theyr nette, and gather it in theyre yarne: wherof they reioyce and are glad. Therfore offre they vnto theyr nette, and do sacrifyce vnto theyr yarne: bycause that thorow we it their porcyon is become so fat, and theyr meat so plenteous. Wherfore, they cast out theyr net agayne and neuer cease to slaye the people.

the:yee as the locust doth, so shall it eate the vp. It shall fall heuyly vpon the as the locustes:yee rygh te heuyly shall it fell vpon the, euen as the grethoppers. Thy marchauntes haue bene nom bred with the starres of heauen, but nowe shall they spryede abrode as the locustes, and fle theyr waye: Thy Lordes are as the grethoppers:and thy captaynes as the multytude of grethoppers which when they be colde, remayne in ỹ hedges: but when the Sunne is vp, they flee away, and no man can tell where they are become. Thy shepheardes are a slepe (O kynge of Assur) thy worthies are layde downe, thy people is scatred abrode vpon the mountaynes, and no man gathereth them together agayne. Thy wounde can not be hyd, thy plage is so sore. All they that heare thys of the, shall clappe theyr handes ouer the. For what is he, to whome thou hast not alwaye bene doynge hurte.

The ende of the prophecye of Nahum.

The first Chapter.

A complaynte agaynst Israel.

THis is the heuy burthen, which the Prophet Abacuc dyd se. O Lorde, *how longe shal I crye & thou wylt not heare? * Howe longe shall I complayne vnto the, sufferynge wronge, & thou wylte not helpe? Why letteste ỹ me se werynesse and labour? * Tyrannye and violence are before me, power ouergoeth ryghte: for the lawe is torne in peces. and there can not ryght iudgemẽt go forth. And why? the vngodlye is more set by then the ryghtuous: this is the cause, that wronge iudgement procedeth? * Beholde amonge the heathen, and loke well, wonder at it, and be abasshed: for I wyll do a thynge in your tyme, whyche though it be tolde you, ye shall not beleue. * For lo, I wyll rayse vp the Caldees, that bytter & swyfte people: whiche shall go as wyde as the lande is, to take possessyon of dwellynge places, that be not theyr owne. A grymme and boysterous people is it, these shall syt in iudgement & punyshe. Theyr horses are swyfter then the cattes of the mountayne, and byte sorer then * the wolues in the euenynge. Theyr horsemen come by greate heapes from farre, they flye hastely to deuoure as the Aegle. They come all to spoyle, onte of them commeth an eastwynde, whyche bloweth and gathereth theyr captaynes, lyke as ỹ sande They shal mocke the kynges, and laugh ỹ pryn ces to scorne. They shall not set by any stronge holde, for they shall laye ordynaunce agaynst it, and take it. Then shall they take a freshe corage vnto them: to go forth and to do more cupll, and so ascribe the power vnto * theyr God.

But thou O Lorde my God & my holy one, thou arte from the begynnynge, therfore shall we not dye. O Lorde, thou hast ordeyned them for a punyshmente, and set them to reproue the myghty. Thyne eyes are cleane, thou mayst not se cupll, thou canst not beholde the thynge that is wycked. ‡ Wherfore then doest thou loke vpon the vngodly, and holdest thy tonge when ỹ wycked deuoureth the man that is better then hym selfe? Thou makest men as the fysshe in the see, and lyke as the creppynge beastes, that haue no gyde, they take vp all with their angle, they catche it in theyr nette, and gather it in theyre yarne: wherof they reioyce and are glad. Therfore offre they vnto theyr nette, and do sacrifyce vnto theyr yarne: bycause that thorow we it their porcyon is become so fat, and theyr meat so plenteous. Wherfore, they cast out theyr net agayne and neuer cease to slaye the people.

the:yee as the locust doth, so shall it eate the vp. It shall fall heuyly vpon the as the locustes:yee rygh te heuyly shall it fell vpon the, euen as the grethoppers. Thy marchauntes haue bene nom bred with the starres of heauen, but nowe shall they spryede abrode as the locustes, and fle theyr waye: Thy Lordes are as the grethoppers:and thy captaynes as the multytude of grethoppers which when they be colde, remayne in ỹ hedges: but when the Sunne is vp, they flee away, and no man can tell where they are become. Thy shepheardes are a slepe (O kynge of Assur) thy worthies are layde downe, thy people is scatred abrode vpon the mountaynes, and no man gathereth them together agayne. Thy wounde can not be hyd, thy plage is so sore. All they that heare thys of the, shall clappe theyr handes ouer the. For what is he, to whome thou hast not alwaye bene doynge hurte.

The ende of the prophecye of Nahum.

The first Chapter.

A complaynte agaynst Israel.

THis is the heuy burthen, which the Prophet Abacuc dyd se. O Lorde, *how longe shal I crye & thou wylt not heare? * Howe longe shall I complayne vnto the, sufferynge wronge, & thou wylte not helpe? Why letteste ỹ me se werynesse and labour? * Tyrannye and violence are before me, power ouergoeth ryghte: for the lawe is torne in peces. and there can not ryght iudgemẽt go forth. And why? the vngodlye is more set by then the ryghtuous: this is the cause, that wronge iudgement procedeth? * Beholde amonge the heathen, and loke well, wonder at it, and be abasshed: for I wyll do a thynge in your tyme, whyche though it be tolde you, ye shall not beleue. * For lo, I wyll rayse vp the Caldees, that bytter & swyfte people: whiche shall go as wyde as the lande is, to take possessyon of dwellynge places, that be not theyr owne. A grymme and boysterous people is it, these shall syt in iudgement & punyshe. Theyr horses are swyfter then the cattes of the mountayne, and byte sorer then * the wolues in the euenynge. Theyr horsemen come by greate heapes from farre, they flye hastely to deuoure as the Aegle. They come all to spoyle, onte of them commeth an eastwynde, whyche bloweth and gathereth theyr captaynes, lyke as ỹ sande They shal mocke the kynges, and laugh ỹ pryn ces to scorne. They shall not set by any stronge holde, for they shall laye ordynaunce agaynst it, and take it. Then shall they take a freshe corage vnto them: to go forth and to do more cupll, and so ascribe the power vnto * theyr God.

But thou O Lorde my God & my holy one, thou arte from the begynnynge, therfore shall we not dye. O Lorde, thou hast ordeyned them for a punyshmente, and set them to reproue the myghty. Thyne eyes are cleane, thou mayst not se cupll, thou canst not beholde the thynge that is wycked. ‡ Wherfore then doest thou loke vpon the vngodly, and holdest thy tonge when ỹ wycked deuoureth the man that is better then hym selfe? Thou makest men as the fysshe in the see, and lyke as the creppynge beastes, that haue no gyde, they take vp all with their angle, they catche it in theyr nette, and gather it in theyre yarne: wherof they reioyce and are glad. Therfore offre they vnto theyr nette, and do sacrifyce vnto theyr yarne: bycause that thorow we it their porcyon is become so fat, and theyr meat so plenteous. Wherfore, they cast out theyr net agayne and neuer cease to slaye the people.

A O Lorde, when I hearde speake of the, I was afrayde. The worke ỳ thou haste taken in hande, shalt thou perfourne in his tyme, O Lorde: ‡ when thy tyme commeth, thou shalt declare it. In thy very wrathe thou thynkest vpon mercye, God commeth from Theman, and the holy one from the mounte of Pharan: Selah.

His glory covereth the heauens, and ỳ earth is full of his prayse. His shyne is as the sunne, ‡ beames of lyght go oute of hys handes, there is his power hyd. Destruccyon goeth before hym, and a pestylent sycknesse goeth from hys fete.
Amos.ix.a * He standeth and measureth the earthe. He loketh, and the people consume awaye, the mountaynes of the worlde fall downe to pouldre, and the hylles are fayne to bowe them selues, for his goynges are euerlastynge and sure.

B I saw e that the pauylyons of the Moxians, and the tentes of ỳ lande of Madian were vexed for werynesse. Was thou not angry, O Lorde in the waters? was not thy wrath in the floudes and thy displeasure in the see? yes, when thou sattest vpon thy horse, and when thy charettes had the victory. Thou shewdest thy bowe openly, lyke as thou haddest promysed with an othe Gen.xlvi.c * vnto the trybes. Selah.

Thou dyddest deuyde the waters of the erth. When the mountaynes sawe the, they were afrayde, the waterstreame went awaye, the depe made a noyse at the lyftynge vp of thyne hande.
Josu.x.c. ¶ The * sunne and moone remayned styll in theyr habitacion. ¶ Thyne arowes went out glystryng and thy speares as the shyne of the lyghtenyng.
Joan.vi.a. * Thou trodest ‡ down the lande in thyne angre, and dyddest threshe the heathen in thy displeasure. Thou camest forth to helpe thy people, to helpe thyne annoynted. Thou smotest downe ỳ hed of the house of the vngodly, and discouredst hys foundacyons, euen vnto the necke of hym. Selah.

Thou dydst stryke thorowe with his sceptre the heades of his playne people, whiche come as a stormye wynde to scatter me abroade, and are glad when they maye eate vp the poore secretly. Thou makest a waye for thyne horses in the see euen in the myddest of the great waters. When I heare this, my body is vexed, my lyppes tremble at the voice therof, my bones corrupte, I am afrayde where I stande. O that I myght rest in the daye of trouble, that I myght goo vp vnto our people, which all are ready prepared.

For the fygtrees shall not be grene: and the vynes shall beare no frute. The labourre of the olyue shalbe but lost, and the lande shall bynge no corne: the shepe shalbe taken out of the folde, and there shalbe no cattell in the stalles. But as for me, I wyll be glad in the Lorde, and wyll reiopce in God my sauyour. * The Lorde God is pra.xviii.b my strength, he shall make my feete as the feete of hartes: and he which geueth the victory shall bynge me to my hye places, synggynge vpon my Psalmes.

IT happened also in the fourth yeare A of kynge Darius, that the wozde of the Lozde came vnto Zacharye in the fourth daye of the vynth moneth, whych is called, Casleu: what tyme as Sarasar and Rogomelech and the men that were wyth them sent vnto Bethel foz to pzaye bekoze the Lozde, and that they shulde saye vnto the pzeastes, whyche were in the house of the Lozde of hoostes, and to the pzophetes. welthy, the and the cyties roũde about her: whẽ there dwelt men, both towarde the south and in the playne countrees.

¶ And the worde of the Lorde came vnto Zacharye, sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes: *Execute true iudgement: shew mercy and loupnge kyndenesse: euery man to his brother. Do the wyddowe, the fatherlesse, the straunger and poore no wronge: and let no man ymagyne eupll agaynst his brother in his herte. *Neuertheless, they wolde not take hede, but tourned theyr backes, and stopped theyr eares, that they shoulde not heare: yea, they made theyr hertes as an adamant stone, lest they shoulde heare the lawe and wordes *which the Lorde of hoostes sent in hys holye spyryte by the Prophetes afore tyme.

After that shall the Lorde go forth to fyght agaynst those heathen, as mẽ vse to fyght in the daye of batel.

B Then shal hys fete stande vpon the mount Olivete, that lyeth vpon the east syde of Jerusalẽ And the mount Olivete shal cleue in two, eastwarde and westwarde, so ỹ there shalbe a great valeye, and the halfe mõut shal remoue toward the north, and the other towarde the south. And ye shal flee vnto the valey of my hylles, for ỹ valeye of the hylles shal reache vnto Asal. Yea, flee shal ye *lyke as ye fled for the earthquake in the dayes of Osiah kynge of Juda. And the Lorde my God shall come, and all sayntes wyth hym.

Amos.i.a

In that daye shal it not be lyght, other cleare or dymme. *Thys shal be that special daye which is knowẽ vnto the Lord, nether daye nor nyght but aboute the euenynge tyme it shalbe lyghte.

mat.xxiiii.c zach.xiii.a Apo.xxii.a

* In that tyme shal there waters of lyfe runne out from Jerusalem: the halfe parte of them towarde the east see, and the other halfe towarde the vttermost see, and shall continue both somer and wynter. * And the Lorde hym selfe shall be kynge ouer all the earth.

Abdia.i.b

¶ At that tyme shal there be one Lorde only, & hys name shalbe but one. Hyll shall go aboute the whole earth, as vpon a felde from Gibea to Rimmõ, and from the south to Jerusalem. She shalbe set vp, and inhabyted in her place: frõ Bẽiamins porte, vnto the place of the fyrst porte, and vnto the corner porte: and from the towre of *Hananeel, vnto the kynges wyne presses.

Ezech.xlvii.f Zach.xiv.f

There shall men dwel, and there shalbe nomore cursynge, but Jerusalem shalbe safely inhabyted. ¶ Thys shalbe the plage, where with ỹ Lord wyll smyte all people, that haue fought agaynst Jerusalem. Namely, theyr flesshe shall consume awaye, though they stande vpõ theyr fete, theyr eyes shalbe corrupt in theyr holes, & theyr tonge shal consume in theyr mouth.

the hãdes of hys neyghboure. *Juda shal fyght also agaynst Jerusalem, and ỹ goodes of all the heathen shalbe gathered together roũde about: golde and syluer, and a very great multitude of clothes. And so shall thys plage go ouer horses, mules, camels, asses, and all the beastes ỹ shall be in the hoost, lyke as ponder plage was. Euery one ỹ remayneth then of al the people, whych came agaynst Jerusalem, shall go vp earlye, to worshyp the kynge (euen the Lorde of hoostes) *and kepe the feast of tabernacles. And loke what generacyon vpon the earth goeth not to Jerusalem for to worshyp the kynge (euen the Lorde of hoostes) vpon the same shall come no rayne. Yf the kynred of Egypt go not vp, and come not, it shal not rayne vpon them nether.

Thys shalbe the plage where wyth ỹ Lorde D wyl smyte al the heathen, that come not vp to kepe ỹ feast of tabernacles: yea, thys shalbe the synne plage of Egypte and the synne plage of al people that go not vp to kepe the feast of tabernacles.

At that tyme shal the rydynge gere of ỹ horses be holy vnto ỹ Lorde, & the kettels in ỹ Lordes house shalbe lyke the basens before the auter: yea, al the kettels in Jerusalem and Juda, shalbe holy vnto the Lorde of hostes and al they that slaye offrynges, shal come and take of them, & dyght them there in. And at that tyme there shalbe no mo Cananites in ỹ house of the Lorde of hostes.

A ii.pa.rrb.a iiii.regum. xxiii.c

AND* Iosias helde ꝑ feast of Easter in Ierusalem vnto ꝑ Lorde & slewe the Passeouer the .xiiii. day of ꝑ fyrste moneth. He set ꝑ preastes also in order (accordig to theyr dayly courses) beinge arayed in longe garmentes in the temple of the Lorde. And he spake vnto ꝑ Leuites the holy ministres of Israel, ꝑ they shulde halowe them selues vnto ꝑ Lorde, to set the holy Arke of the Lord, in the house ꝑ kynge Salomon the sonne of Dauid had buylded, and sayde: Ye shall nomore beare the Arke vpon youre shulders. Nowe serue your Lord & take ꝑ charge of his people of Israel, after your vyllages and your trybes: accordynge as kynge Dauid the kynge of Israel, hath ordeyned, and accordynge as Salomon hys sonne hath honorably prepared: yee: loke ꝑ ye all do seruyce in ꝑ temple accordynge to theyr ordrynge & dystrybucyon of the prynceypall men whych are appointed out of the trybes, to do seruyce for the chyldren of Israel. *Kyll the Passeouer, ād prepare offringes for youre brethren, and do accordyng to the commaundemente of the Lorde, whyche was geuen vnto Moses. And vnto the people ꝑ was founde, Iosias gaue. xxx. thousāde of shepe lambes, kyddes, and goates, and thre thousand oxen. These the kynge (of hys kynglye lyberalyte) gaue vnto the people, accordyng as he had promysed: & to the preastes for the Passeouer, he gaue two thousande shepe, and an hundred oxē Moreouer Iechonias, and Semeias, and Nathanaell, hys brethren, and Hasabias. Iehiel, & Iosabab gaue them to the passeouer, fyue thousande shepe, and fyue hundred bullockes.

Exod.xii.d

25 And when these thynges were brought to passe, the preastes and the Leuytes stode goodly in theyr ordre, & had the vnleuened bread thorowe out the trybes. And after ꝑ ordrynge of ꝑ prynceypall men in the trybes, they offered vnto the Lorde in the syghte of the people accordinge *as it is wrytten in the booke of Moses, & soo they rosted the Easter lambe as accordyng was. As for the thanckeofferynges & the other, they dight in the kettelles & pottes, & set them before ꝑ people wyth good wyll, & afterwarde before them selues & the preastes. For the preastes offerede the fat vntyll the tyme was expyred, but ꝑ Leuites prepared for them selues & for theyr brethren the chyldren of Aaron. The holy syngers also, the chyldren of Asaph stode in theyr order, accordynge as Dauid deuysed. So dyd Asaph, zacharp, & Iduthum, which were appointed by the kynge. Moreouer the porters & dore kepers stode by the doores and that dyligently, so that none went out of hys standynge ād seruyce: for theyr brethrē (the Leuites) prepared for them.

Thus were all thynges perfourmed, that belonged to the offerynge of the Lorde. In that daye they helde the Passeouer and offered thanckeofferynges beside the sacrifyce of the Lord accordynge to the commaundement of kyng Iosias.

So the chyldren of Israel which were thē present helde an honourable Passeouer, and the feaste of swete breade seuen dayes longe. Yee ¶ suche a Passeouer was not kept in Israell from the tyme of the prophete Samuel. And all the kynges of Israel, helde not suche an Easter as thys whyche kynge Iosias held, and the preestes the Leuytes, the Iewes, and all Israell, of all them that were at Ierusalem. And in the eyghte tene yeare of the raygne of Iosias was this Passeouer kepte. And ẅ a perfecte herte dyd kynge Iosias order all hys worckes, before the Lorde and the thynges that were wrytten of hym in tymes paste, concernynge those that sinned and were vngodly agaynst the Lorde before al people: & that soughte not ꝑ worde of ꝑ Lorde vpon Israel. * After all these actes of kynge Iosias, Pharao ꝑ kinge of Egipt went vp & came towarde Carmis by Euphrates, & Iosias wente to mete hym. Then sent ꝑ kyng of Egipte to Iosias, saying: what haue I to do with the, O king of Iuda? I am not sent of ꝑ Lord to fyght agaynste the, for my warre is vpon Euphrates, go ꝑ thy way home agayne in al ꝑ hast. And Iosias wolde not turne againe vpon his charet, but vndertoke to fyghte agaynst hi, & herkened not vnto ꝑ worde of the prophet, which he told hym out of the mouth of God, but pytched battayle agaynst hym in the felde of Mageddo. And the prynces preased to kynge Iosias. Then sayde ꝑ kynge vnto his seruauntes. Cary me away out of the battayle, for I am sore wounded. And immediatly his seruauntes toke hym away out of the fronte of the battayle. Then sat he vp vpon the seconde charet, came to Ierusalem, dyed, ād was buryed in his fathers sepulchre. ¶ The. ii. Chapter.

¶ Cirus geueth licence to the Jewes to returne to Jerusalem, and restoreth them the vessels of the temple. After that are there letters sent to Artharerses: whych accuse the Jewes for buyldyng of the cytie: and so is the buyldynge dryuen of vntyl ẏ Wherfore nowe we certyfye oure lorde the kynge, that yf thys citie be buylded and occupyed agayne, and the walles thereof set vp a newe, thou canst haue no passage into Celosyria and Phenices.

Then wrote the kynge to Rathimus, the Wherefore I haue commaunded those people, ỳ they shal not buylde the cytie, ỳ they make nomore in it, and that they procead no forther wyth the buylding for so muche as it myghte be the cause of warre and dyspleasure vnto kynges.

Nowe when Rathymus & Sabellius the scrybe & the rulers in the lande had red the wrytynge of kynge Artharerses, they gat them togeather, and came in all the haste to Jerusalem wyth an hoofte of horsemen, and wyth muche people of foote, and forbade them to buylde. And so they lefte of from buyldynge of the temple, vnto the seconde yeare of kynge Darius.

¶ The.iii. Chapter.

A KYnge Darius made a great feast vnto hys seruauntes, vnto all hys courte, & to all the offycers of Medea and Persia, yee, to all the debytes and rulers ỳ were vnder hym, from India vnto Ethopia, an hundred & .xxvii. coũtrees. So whẽ they had eaten & dronken being satisfyed, and were gone home againe. Darius ỳ king went into hys chãbre, layde hym downe to slepe, and so awaked.

B Then ỳ thre yonge men, ỳ kepte the kĩges person, & watched hys body, commoned amonge thẽ selues, & spake one to another: let euery one of vs say some thige & loke whose sentence is wyser & more excellent then the other, vnto him shal kyng Darius geue great gyftes, & cloth hĩ wt purple. He shal geue him vessels of gold, & to drink i, clothes of gold & couerĩges: he shal make him a costly charet & bridle of gold, he shal geue him a bonet of whyte sylke, & a chayne of gold about his necke: yee, he shalbe ỳ seconde & princypal nexte vnto kynge Darius, & that because of his wisdome, & shalbe called the kinges kinsmã

¶ So euery one wrote his meanyng, sealed it and layde it vnder the kynges pelowe, & sayde: when the kynge aryseth, we will geue hym our wrytynges, and loke whose worde the kynge & hys chefe Lordes iudge to be the moofte wyselp spoken, the same shall haue the victorye. One wrote: Wyne is a stronge thynge. The seconde wrote: The kynge is stroger. The thyrde wrote Women haue yet more strength, but aboue all thynges ỳ truth beareth awaye the victorye. Nowe woen the kynge was rysen vp, they toke theyr writynges & delyuered thẽ vnto hym, & so he red thẽ. Then sent he forth to call al hys chefe lordes & all the debytes & rulers of ỳ coũtrees of Media & Persia. And whẽ they were set downe in the counsayle, the wrytynges was red before them. And he commaunded to call for the yonge men ỳ they myght declare theyr meaninges thẽselues by mouth. So when they were sent for, & came in, the kynge sayde vnto them: shewe vs & make vs vnderstande what the thynges are ỳ ye haue wrytten. Then began the first (which had spoken of the strength of wyne) & sayde: O

It causeth a mã to thynke also ỳ the thyng that he doth is honest & good: and remembreth not that he is a kynge, nor that he is in auctorytye, and that he oughte not to do such thynges. Moreouer whẽ men are drynckynge, they forget all frendeshyp all brotherly faythfulnes & loue, but as sone as they are dronkẽ, they drawe out ỳ swerd & wyll fyghte: & when they are layde downe from the wyne, & so risen vp agayne, they cã not tel what they dyd: iudge ye nowe is not wyne ỳ strõgest? For who wolde els take in hãde to do such thinges? And whẽ he had spokẽ this: he held his tõg

¶ The declaracyon of the two laste sentences of the yonge men: proponnded in the Chapter before: of whyche the last is, that verye beareth ỳ victorye in all thynges & is moofte commended and alowed. Darius wryteth letters to al the rulers vnder hym, that they shulde ayde Zorobabell, to the buyldynge of Jerusalem.

A Then the seconde (whych had sayde: ỳ the kynge was stronger) began to speake, sayinge: O ye men, are not they the strongest & most excellent, ỳ conquere the land and the see, and all that is in the see & in the earth? Now is the kinge lorde of all these thynges and hathe dompnyon of them all and loke what he commaũdeth, it is done. Yf he sẽde his mẽ forth a warfare, they go and breake downe hylles, walles, and towers. They are slayne, and (slaye other men) them selues, and ouer passe not ỳ kynges worde. Yf they get ỳ victory, they bryng the kyng al ỳ spoyle. Likewise the other ỳ medle not wyth warres & fyghtyng, but tyll the grounde: whẽ they reape they bring tribute vnto ỳ king. And yf ỳ kinge alone do but commaund to kil, they kil: Yf he cõmaunde to forgeue, they forgeue: Yf he cõmaũde to smite, they smyte: Yf he byd dryue awaye, they dryue away: yf he cõmaund to buyld, they buylde: Yf he commaũde to breake downe, they breke downe: yf he cõmaund to plant they plãt.

There came people also of other coũtries ãd the Heathen out of all landes, to set vp ỹ aulter in his place, and offred sacrifices and burntofferynges vnto the Lorde in the morynge. And so they helde the feaste of tabernacles, * as it is

And they gaue vnto ỹ masons & carpenters, monye, meate, & drynke with chearfulnesse. Unto them of Sidon, also & Tire, they gaue carres, ỹ they shuld cary Cedre trees, from Lybanus to be ioystes, and beames and that they shulde make shyppes in the hauen of Joppe, accordynge as it was appoynted and ordeyned by Cyrus kynge of the Persyans. F

And in the seconde yeare, they came into ỹ temple of God, at Jerusalem. * In the seconde moneth began zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, & Jesua the sonne of Josedec, & their brethren the preastes and Leuytes: and al they that were come vnto Jerusalem out of ỹ captiuite of Babylon, & layed ỹ foundacyon of the temple, in ỹ newe mone of the seconde moneth in the seconde yere, ỹ they were come into Jewry & Jerusalem. And they a pointed ỹ Leuites (that were aboue. xx. yere old) vnto the seruyce of the Lorde, so Jesua and hys sonnes, and hys brethren, all the Leuytes stode together, and perfourmed the lawe and ordynaunce in the house of the Lorde. Ezr. xxiv. b. c

And the preastes stode, and had theyr garmentes and trompettes, and the Leuites, the sõnes of Asaph, had cymbales, geuynge thankes and prayses vnto the Lorde, accordyng * as Dauid the kynge of Israel had ordeyned. 1. par. xvi. b

And the songe that they dyd synge vnto the Lorde, was after this maner. ‡ O synge vnto ỹ Lorde, for he is gracious, & hys goodnesse vpon Israel endureth for euer. And al ỹ people blewe out wyth trompettes, & sange wyth lowde voyce prayſynge the Lorde together, in the rearing vp of the house of ỹ Lorde. There came also frõ amonge the preastes & Leuites the rulers and elders accordinge to the trybes & kynredes (suche as had sene the house afore) to the buyldynge of this temple with great cry, & great mournyng many also wyth trompettes & great ioye: In so muche, that the trompettes myghte not well be herde for the wepinge & mournynge. For the cõmune people blewe goodly vpon ỹ trompettes. Ps. cxxxv. a Esay. xii. b G 1. Esd. iii. d

* Then came the enemyes of the trybes of Juda & Ben Jami, to knowe what that trompetynge & noyse of shawmes myght be. And they perceyued ỹ it was they which were come agayne out of captiuite, & wolde buyld the temple vp a newe vnto the Lorde God of Israel. So they went to zorobabel, and Jesua, and the rulers of the vyllages, & sayde vnto them. Shall we builde wyth you also? For we likewise haue heard your Lord, and we walke after the same maner from the dayes of Azbasareth the kynge of Assyria, whych brought vs hyther. Then zorobabel & Jesua, and the rulers of the vyllages of Israel, sayde vnto them: It is not mete, ỹ ye shuld buyld ỹ temple of our God wt vs, we our selues alone wyl buyld vnto ỹ Lorde, lyke * as Cirus ỹ kynge of the Persians hath commaunded vs. 1. Esd. iv. a. 1. Esd. iiii. a

But the Heathen in the land layde them selues agaynst those that were in Jewry, helde vp the buyldynge from them, layed wayte vpõ thẽ pryuylye, stopped such as broughte any thynge to them, forbad them to buylde, & hyndred those that that made them passage, ꝑ the buyldyng shulde not be fynysshed: and thys contynued so long as kynge Cyrus lyued: and so they put of the buyldyng, for the space of two yeres, vntyl ꝑ raigne of kynge Darius.

¶ The. vi. Chapter.

¶ Aggeus and zacharyp prophecie. They buylde the temple without let or hynderaunce, by the commaundemente of Darius.

1.Esdr. b.c

AMotwythstandynge, in the seconde yere of the raigne of Darius.* Aggeus ⁊ zacharye the sonne of Addo, prophecied vpō thē in Jewry, ⁊ Jerusalem, in the name of the God of Israel: * Then zorobabel, ꝑ sonne Salathiel, ⁊ Jesua the sonne of Josedec stod vp ⁊ beganne to builde the house of ꝑ Lorde at Jerusalem, when ꝑ prophetes of the Lorde helped them. At ꝑ same tyme came Sisennes ꝑ vnder shreue in Syria, ⁊ Phenices, with the lanlordes ⁊ hys companians, and sayde vnto them: Who hath bydden and commaunded you to buyld the house, to make the rooke and all other thynges agayne? And who are ꝑ worcke men, that buylde them? Neuertheleſſe, the elders of ꝑ Jewes had such grace of the Lorde, ꝑ they wolde not be let (thoughe they were pronoked therto) but buylded on skyll, vntyll the tyme that kyng Darius were certyfyed therof, and an answere receiued from hym. The letter that these men sente vnto kynge Darius was after thys maner.

Sisennes the vnder Shreue in Syria, and Phenices, and the landlordes wyth theyr companyons, whych are hedrulers in Syria, ⁊ Phenices, sende theyr salutacyou vnto Darius the kynge. We certifye the lorde the kyng, that we came into the lande of Jewry and went to Jerusalem: where we foūde them buyldinge ꝑ great house of God, and the temple, wyth great costly fre stone, and with goodly tymbre for ꝑ walles: yee, they make great haſt wyth the worcke, and helpe one another, and it goeth forth prosperously in theyr handes, and with great dilygēce ⁊ worshyp is it made. Then asked we the elders who had commaūded them, to make vp ꝑ house and the buyldynge? and thys we dyd, to the entent that we myghte certyfye the perfectly, and wrote vnto the, the names of those that were ꝑ rulers of the worcke. So they gaue vs thys answere: we are the seruauntes of ꝑ Lorde, which

Then Salmanasar layde the foundacion of the Lordes house at Jerusalē: ⁊ euer sens they haue buylded, and yet is not ended. And therfore, O kynge, yf thou thynkeſt it good, let it be sought in the Lybrarpes and rolles of kynge Cirus. Yf it be founde then, that it is done wyth ꝑ councel and consent of kynge Cyrus, ⁊ yf oure lorde the kīge be so minded, let him wryte vntovs therof.

wyth theyr companyons, obeyed the thynges, that kynge Darius had ordeyned, and were dylygent in the holy worckes, and were felowhelpers wyth the old rulers of the Jewes. And so ỹ worcke of the Sanctuary went forth and prospered, when Aggeus, and zachary prophecyed. And they perfourmed all thynges thorowe the commaundemente of the Lorde God of Israel, and after the decree of Cyrus, Darius, and Artharerses kynges of Persya.

B And thus was oure house fynished vnto ỹ xriii. daye of the moneth Adder in the. vi. yeare of kynge Darius. And the chyldren of Israel, ỹ preastes and Leuytes, and the other that were come out of captiuytie: and such as were ioyned vnto them, dyd accordynge as it is wrytten in ỹ booke of Moses. And in ỹ dedycacion of the temple: they offred an hundred oxen, two hundred rãmes, foure hundred lãbes, and twelue goates, for the synnes of all the people of Israel, after ỹ nombre of the trybe of Israell. The Preastes also and the Leuytes stode arayed in theyr preastly garmentes, after the trybes, ouer al ỹ worckes of ỹ Lord God of Israel: accordynge to the boke of Moses, & the porters by all the doores.

C And the children of Israel (with those that were come oute of captyuytie) helde ỹ passeouer the fourteneth daye of the fyrste moneth, when the preastes and the Leuites were sanctyfyed. They that came out of captyuytye were not all sanctifyed together. But the Leuites were sanctifyed to geather. and so all they that came out
D of captyuytie, kylled the Easter lambe for their brethren, for the preastes & for them selues. And the chyldren of Israel, that came out of captiuytie and escaped from all the abhompnacyons of the heathen, sought the Lorde, and kepte the feaste of the vnleuened breade seuen dayes longe, eatynge and drynckynge and were mery before the Lord, ỹ the Lorde had turned the deuyce of ỹ kyng of Asseria, and comforted theyr handes to the worckes of the Lorde God of Israel.

AND after hym * when Artharerses ỹ kyng of ỹ Persiãs raygned, there wente vnto hym Esdras the sonne of Saraias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Helchiach, the sonne of Sallum, the sonne of Saddoch, the sonne of Achitob, The sonne of Amarias, The sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Boccus, the sonne of Abisu the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron the fyrste preaste. This Esdras wente vp from Babylon (for he had good vnderstandynge in the lawe of Moses, that was geuen of the Lorde God of Israel, to be taughte and done in dede.) And the kynge fauored hym, and dyd hym great worshyppe and honoure, after all hys dysyres. There wente vp wyth hym also certayne of the chyldrẽ of Israel, of the preastes, of the Leuytes, of the syngers, porters, & mynysters of the temple at Jerusalem.

In the seuenth yeare of the raygne of kyng Artharerses, in the. v. moneth, that is in the seuenth yeare of the raygne, they wente from Babylon in the newe mone of ỹ. v. moneth, & came the hygh waye to Jerusalem after his commaũdement, lyke as the Lorde hath prospered theyr iourney. For in these Esdras gat great instruccyon, that he shuld leaue none of the thynges behynde, whych are in the lawe and commaundementes of God. And he taught hole Israel all ryghteousnesse and iudgementes.

Then came the Secretaries of kynge Artharerses, and delyuered the wrytynges (that were come from Artharerses the kynge) to Esdras the preast and reader of the lawe of ỹ Lord And thys is the coppe of ỹ letter: kyng Artharerses sendeth hys gretyng vnto Esdras the preaste & reader of the lawe of the Lorde. Of frend shyppe & good wyll I haue ordeyned and charged yf there be anye of the Jewes, of the prestes and Leuites in my realme, whiche desyreth and is content to go with the vnto Jerusalem, that he may do it. Therfore, yf anye be mynded to beare ỹ company, let them come together, & go with the (lyke as I am contente & my seuen frendes, my councelers) to se what they do at Jerusalem and in Jewry, and kepe the thinges accordynge as thou haste, in the lawe of the Lorde, & to bryng the gyftes vnto God the Lord of Israel, that I & my frendes haue promysed to Jerusalem, & all the syluer & golde that is in the countrye of Babylon, vnto the Lorde to Jerusalem with the thynge that is geuen for the people in the Lordes temple at Jerusalem: Yea, that the same syluer and golde maye be gathered, and oxen, rãmes, shepe, & goates, and other that belõg to these thynges: and that they may offre sacryfyces vnto the Lorde, vpon the aulter of theyr Lorde whych is at Jerusalem.

And whatsoeuer thou & thy brethren wyll do wyth the syluer and golde, that do after thy mynde, accordynge to the commaundemente of the Lorde thy God, & lykewyse wyth the holye vessels that are geuen the, for the seruyce of the house of ỹ Lord thy God & other thynges whatsoeuer is necessary for the worcke of the temple that shalbe geuen of the kynges treasure, & loke what thou wyth thy brethren wylte do wyth ỹ golde & syluer. that do after the wil of the Lord And I kynge Artharerses haue commaunded ỹ kepers of the treasures in Syria and Phenices that whatsoeuer Esdras the preaste and reader of the lawe of the Lorde doth wryte, it shalbe geuen hym: tyll an. C. talentes of syluer. and of golde in lyke maner. Of corne also an. C. measures & tyl an. C. vessels of wine, & other plenteous thinges wout nõbre. Let al thinges be done after ỹ lawe of ỹ hyest God, ỹ the wrath of God arise not i the realme of the kyng & of hys sõnes I commaunde you also that ye requyre no tare nor trybute of the preastes, Leuytes, syngers, & mynystres of the temple, nor of the wryters: ād that no man haue authorite to medle any thyng agaynste them. Of the sonnes of Baanta, Salymoth, the sōnes of Josaphia, & wyth him an hundred & three score men Of the sonnes of Beer, zacharie, Bebei, & with hym two hundred & eyghte men. Of the sonnes of Esead, Johannes, Ezecham, & wyth hym an C. & ten men Of the sonnes of Adonicam, those that were the laste: & these are theyr names. Eliphalam, the sōns of Gebel, & Semeias, & wyth hym. lxx. men. All these called I together by the water Thia, where we pytched oure tente three dayes: and there I mustred them.

D 1.Esd.bvii.b * As for the sonnes of the preastes & Leuytes, I founde none there. Then sente I vnto Eleazar, & Eccelom, and Masmam, & Malobam, and Eanaathan, and Samea, & Jorybimathā, Eunagā, zachary, Mosolamun (these were the elders and men of experyence) and I sente them worde, ꝑ they shulde come vnto Loddus, which was by the place of the treasury, and commaunded them that they shulde speake vnto Loddus and to hys brethren, & to those that were in the treasurye, to sende vs suche men, as myghte execute the preastes offyce in the house of the Lorde oure God, & wyth the myghtye hande of our Lorde God, they broughte vnto vs mē of good experyence, from amonge the sonnes of Mooly us, the sonne of Leui, the sonne of Israel, Sebebeiam, & the sonnes and hys brethren Albin, ād Anin, of whome there were. xviii. C. & xx. mē whose names are all tokened vp in wrytynge.

E 1.Esd.bviii.a * Then commaunded I a fastynge vnto the ponge men before the Lorde, that I myghte despre of him a prosperous iourney, & a good way for vs: yea, for vs: for oure chyldren and for the catell, by cause of the lapenges awayte, and I durst not requyre of the kynge men of horse and of foote, to conuey vs safely agaynst our enemyes, for we had sayde vnto the kynge, that the power of the Lorde our God shulde be wyth them that seke hym with theyr whole herte. And therfore, we besoughte God oure Lorde earnestlye because of these thynges, and he was mercyfull vnto vs, and hearde oure prayer. And I seperated from among the rulers of the people, & from the preastes of the temple. xii. men, and Sebeia and Asania, ād ten men of theyr brethren wyth them. And I weyed them the golde and the syluer & all the preastly ornamentes of the house of oure God, whyche the kinge, & hys counsayle, & hys rynces, and whole Israel had geuen. And when I had weyed yt, I gaue them, an hundred & fyfty talentes in syluer vessel, an hundred talentes of golde, & of golden vessell seuen tymes twentye, & vessels of other metall (yea, of good metall) twelue glystering as the golde, & sayde vnto them: ye are holye vnto the Lorde, and the vessels are holy, & the gold & the syluer is promysed vnto the Lorde God of oure fathers.

Be dylygente nowe, and kepe it, vntyll ꝑ tyme that ye delyuer it to the rulers of the people, to the preastes, to the Leuytes, & to the principall men of the cyties of Israel in Jerusalem, and in the chambre of the house of oure God. 1.Esd.bviii.b

* So the preastes and the Leuytes whyche receaued of me the golde, the syluer, and the vessell, broughte it vnto Jerusalem into the temple of the Lorde. And from the ryuer of Thia, we brake vp the twelue daye of the fyrste moneth, tyll we came to Jerusalem. And when ꝑ thyrde daye was past, the weyed golde and syluer was delyuered in the house of the Lorde the fourthe daye, vnto Marimoth the sonne of Jor the preaste, & wyth hym was Eleazar the sōne of Phineas, and wyth them were Josabdus the sōnes of Jasnet, Medias, & the sonne of Banus, & certayne of the Leuytes to the nombre and to the weyghte: & the weyghte of them was wrytten vp the same tyme. As for those that were come out of captyuytye, they offred sacrifyce vnto ꝑ Lorde the God of Israell: euen twelue oxen for all Israell. lxxxvi. rammes. lxxii. shepe. xii. goates for synne: twelue kyne for a thankeoffering all to the sacrifyce of the Lorde. And the kinges commyssion delyuered they vnto the stewardes and deputyes of the kyng: and to the vndershryues in Celosyria, and Phenices. 1.Esd.bix.a

* Nowe, when those thinges were done the rulers came vnto me, and sayde: The generacyon of Israell, the prynces, the preastes, and Leuites, the straunge people and indwellers of the lande, haue not put awaye theyr vnclennesse, from the Cananites Hethites Pherelites, from the Moabites, Egipcians, and Edomites. Then stode I vp from fastynge, haupnge rente clothes & the holye garmẽt, kneled downe vpon my knees, held out my handes vnto the Lorde, & sayde: O Lorde, I am confounded & ashamed before thy face for oure synnes are become manye vpon our heades: and oure wyckednesses are exalted vnto the heauen: for syns the tyme of our fathers, we are in greate synne vnto thys daye. And for the synnes of vs and oure fathers, we with our bre thren and wyth oure preastes haue bene delyuered vnto the kynges of the earth: into the swerd and into captyuytye: & became a spoyle with cõfusyon and shame vnto thys daye. And nowe O Lorde God: howe greate is the mercye that we haue gotten of the: in that thou hast left vs a name and a roote in the place of thy Sanctuarye, to dyscouer oure lyghte in the house of the Lorde oure God, and haste genẽ vs meate at all tymes of oure mynystracyon. And when we were in captyuytie we were not forsaken of the Lorde our God: but he made the kynges of Persia gracious and fauorable vnto vs: so that they gaue vs vytayles & meate: yea, & leaue to buyld vp the temple of oure Lorde God agayne, to repayre the wasted places of Syon: and to dwell in Jewrye and Jerusalem. And nowe O Lorde what shall we saye: haupnge all these thynges in possessyon: For we haue broken thy commaundementes, whyche thou gauest vnto vs by ꝑ handes of thy seruauntes the prophetes saying The lande that ye go vnto & that is geuen you for an heritage to haue in possessyon, is defyled wyth the vnclennesse and fylthynesse of the Heathen & wyth theyr abhomynacyon haue they polu

i.Esd.x.a. *And when Esdras wyth hys prayer had knowleged the synne, weppynge and lyinge ſat vpon the ground before the temple, there gathered vnto hym from Jerusalem a greate multytude of men and wemen, of yong men, and maydens: for there was a very great weppynge, and mournynge in the congregacyon. So when Iechonias the sonne of Jehely one of the chyldren of Israel cryed, he sayde vnto Esdras: we haue synned agaynste the Lorde, bycause we haue maryed outlandysh wemen of the Heathen. Nowe art thou ouer al Israel. We wyl sweare an othe therfore vnto the Lorde, that we shal put away all oure wyues whyche we haue taken of ꝑ Heathen: wyth theyr chyldren: lyke as it is appoynted the by oure fore elders. Stande vp then, opẽ thou it and declare it playnely vnto vs, accordynge to the lawe of the Lorde: for the matter belõgeth vnto the, and we wyll helpe the, quyte thy selfe manlye. So Esdras arose, and toke an othe of ꝑ rulers, of the preastes, & of the Leuites & of Israel, to do after these thinges: & they sware of the temple wythout, and went into the chambre of Jonathas the sonne of Nasabus, and remayned there and dyd eate no meate, nor dronke dryncke: for the multytude of the wyckednesse of the people. And there was made a proclamacyon in all Jewry & at Jerusalem, for al such as were gathered at Jerusalem out of captyuytye that whosoeuer came not to Jerusalem wythin two or thre dayes (accordyng to the iudgement of the olde Lordes of the counsayle) hys goodes shulde be taken from hym, and be excluded from the congregacyon of the captiuytie. And in thre dayes were all they of the trybe of Juda & Benjami gathered togeather at Jerusalem, the. xx daye of the nynth moneth. And the hole multytude sat trymblynge in the courte of the temple for it was wynter. So Esdras rose vp, & sayde vnto them: ye haue done vnrygh teously, in that ye haue taken outlandysshe wyues to maryage, & so to encrease the synnes of Israel. And nowe knowlege the same, & geue prayse vnto the Lorde God of oure fathers, and performe hys wyll, B departynge from the Heathen of the lande, and from the outlandysshe wyues. Thẽ cryed ꝑ hole multytude wyth loude voyce, and sayd: lyke as thou hast spoken, so wyl we do: but for so much as the people are manye, and the wynter heare, we may not stonde without the house: Agayne thys worcke is not a thyng that cã be fynyshed in a daye or two: For we be manye, that haue synned in these thynges. Ordeyne therfore that the rulers of the multytude, and they that dwel wyth vs, and as manye as haue outelandysshe wyues, the preastes also & iudges of euery place maye stande in the tyme appoynted, tyll they swage the wrath of the Lord in thys busynesse.

makynge the depthes to shake, and troublynge the worlde: And thy glory wente thorowe four portes of fyre, and earthequakes: and wyndes and colde: that thou myghteste geue the lawe vnto the seed of Jacob, and dylygence vnto the generacyon of Israel. And yet tokest thou not a waye from them that wycked herte, ỹ thy lawe myghte bringe furth frute in them. For the fyrste Adam bare a wycked herte, transgressed:
and was ouercome, and so be all they that are Rom.viiia borne of hym. * Thus remayned weakenes wt ỹ lawe: in the hertes of the people, wyth ỹ wyc= kednes of the roote: so that the good departed a waye and the euell a bode styl. So the tymes passed awaye, and the yeares were broughte to i.reg.vbi.c an ende. * Then dydeste thou rayse the vp a ser= xii.Ma.v.a uaunte called Dauid, * whome thou commaun= dedste to buylde a cytye vnto thy name: and to offre vp incense and sacrifyce vnto the therein.
Thys was done nowe many yeares. Then the inhabyters of the cytye forsoke the, & in all thyn ges dyd euen as Adam and all hys generacions had done: for they also had a wycked herte.
And so thou gauest thy cytye ouer into the D handes of thyne enemyes. Are they of Babilon then better and more righteous then thy people that they shall therfore haue the dompnyon of Syon? For when I came there and sawe theyr vngodlynesse, and so greate wyckednesse: that it coulde not be nombrede: yee, when my soule sawe so manye euell doers (in the thyrty yeare) my herte fayled me, for I sawe, howe thou suf= feredst them in such vngodlynesse, and sparedst the wicked doers: but thyne owne people hast ỹ roted out, & preserued thyne enemyes, and thys haste thou not shewed me.
I can not perceaue howe thys happeneth
Do they of Babylon then better, then they of Syon? Or is there anye other people that kno= weth the, saynge that people of Israell? Or what generacyon hath so beleued thy couenaūt tes, as Jacob? And yet theyr rewarde appereth not, and theyr labour hath no frute. For I haue gone heare and there thorowe the Heathen, and I se that they be ryche and welthy, and thynke not vpon thy commaundementes. Weye thou therfore our wyckednesse nowe in the balaunce and theyrs also that dwel in the worlde, and so shall thy name be no where founde but in Israel Or where is there a people vpon earthe, ỹ hath not synned before the? Or what people hathe so kepte thy commaundementes? Thou shalte fin de that Israel by name hathe kepte thy precep= tes, but not the other people and Heathen.

The.iiij. Chapter.

¶ The Aungel reproueth Esdras, because he semed to en ter into the profounde iudgementes of God.

AND the Aungell that was sēt vnto me (whose name was Uryel) gaue me an aunswere, and sayd: thy hert hath taken to muche vpon it in this worlde and thou thynckest to com= prehende the waye of the hyeste. Then sayde I: Yee, my Lorde. And he aunswered me, and sayd
I am sente to shewe the thre wayes, and to set forth the symylytudes, before the: whereof yf ỹ canste declare me one, I wyll shewe the also the way, that thou desyrest to se: And I shal shewe
the from whence the wycked herte commeth.
And I sayde: Tell on my Lorde. Then sayde he vnto me: Go thy waye, wepe me the weyght of the fyre, or measure me the blaste of the wynde, or call me agayne the daye that is paste. Then aunswered I and sayde: What man borne is a= ble to do that? why requyrest thou suche of me?
And he sayd vnto me: Yf I shuld aske the howe depe dwellynges are in the see? Or howe great watersprynges are vpon the fyrmamente? Or howe greate watersprynges are in the begyn= nynge of the depe? Or whych are the out goyn= ges of Paradyse? Parauenture thou woldeste saye vnto me: I neuer went downe yet into the depe or hell, neyther dyd I euer clyme vp to hea uen. Neuertheles nowe haue I asked the but onely of fyre, and wynde, and of the day, where thorowe thou haste trauayled, and frome the whych thou canstnot beseperated: and yet canst thou geue me none aunswere of them.
He sayde moreouer vnto me: Thyne owne thynges, and suche as are growen vp wyth the canst ỹ not know: howe shold thy vessel then be able to comprehende the waye of the heyest, and nowe outewardelye in the corrupte worlde, to vnderstande the corrupcyon that is euydent in my syghte? Then sayde I vnto him: It were bet ter that we were not at all, then that we shulde lyue in wickednes, and to suffre, & not to knowe wherfore. He answered me and sayde: I wente in a woode

In a wood, and *the trees toke such a deuyce, & Judith.ix.b
sayd: Come let vs go, and fyght against ỹ see, xi.pa.xvb.c that it maye departe awaye before vs, & that we maye make vs yet moze woddes.

The floudes of ỹ see also in lyke maner toke thys deuyce, and sayd: Come let vs go vp, and fyght agaynste the trees of the woode that we maye make oure lāde the wyder. The thought and deuyce of the wood was but vayne and no thyng wozth, foz the fyze came & consumed the woode: The thoughte of the floudes of the see: came lykewyse to nought also, foz the sande stode vp and stopped them.

Yf thou were iudge nowe betwixt these two, whom woldest thou iustifie, oz whom woldest thou condempne? I answered & sayd: Verely it is a folysh thought that they both haue deuysed. Foz the grounde is geuen vnto the woode, & the see also hath hys place to beare hys floudes. Then answered he me, & sayde: Thou hast geuen a ryght iudgemēt, why iudgest thou not thy selfe also? Foz lyke as the grounde is geuē vnto the wood, and the see to his floudes, euen so * they that dwell vpon earthe maye vnderstande nothing, but that which is vpō earth: & he that dwelleth aboue the heuens, maye onlye vnderstand the thynges ỹ are aboue the heuēs. Then answered I, & sayd: I beseche ỹ, O lozde let me haue vnderstāding: foz it was not my mind to be curyous of thy hye thinges, but of such as we dayly medle withal, namely wherfoze that Israel is blasphemed of the heathē, & foz what cause the people (whō thou haste euer loued) is geuen ouer, to be punyshed of vngodly nacyōs: & why the lawe of oure fathers is bzoughte to nought and the wzytten couenauntes come to none effecte, and passe awaye out of the wozlde as the greshoppers, & oure life is a very feare, & we are not wozthye to optayne mercye. What wyll he do then vnto hys name, whyche is called vpon ouer vs? Of these thynges haue I asked question.

Then answered he me, and sayde: The moze thou searchest, the moze thou shalt maruell, foz the wozlde hasteth fast to passe away, & cannot comprehende the thynges, that are prompted foz the ryghteous in tyme to come foz * thys wozlde is ful of vnryghteousnes & weakenes.

But as concernynge the thynges whereof thou askest me, I wyll tell the. The euell is sowen, but the destruccyon thereof is not yet come. Yf the euell nowe that is sowen, be not turned vpsyde downe, and yf the place where the euell is sowen, passe not away, then cannot the thynge come that is sowen wyth good. Foz the cozne of euell sede hath bene sowen in the hert of man from the beginnyng, and howe muche vngodlynes hath be bzoughte vp vnto thys tyme? and howe much shall he yet bzynge fozth, vntyll he come into the barne.

Ponder now by thy selfe, whē ỹ cozne of euel sede is cut downe, howe greate a barne shall it fyll? I answered and sayde: Howe & when shal these thinges come to passe? Wherfoze are our yeres few & euel? And he answered me, saying:

Haste not thou to muche vpon the hyest, foz thy hastynes to be aboue him is but vaine, thou makest to moche a do. Dyd not the soules also of ỹ ryghteous aske questiō of these thinges in their holynesse, sayinge: * Howe longe shall I hoope of this fashion? When commeth the frute of my barne and my rewarde? And vpon this Jeremiel the Archangell gaue them answere, & sayde Euen when the nombze of the seedes is fylled in you, foz he hath weyed the wozld in ỹ balaunce: in measure & nombze hath he measured the time and moueth it not vntil the same measure be ful fylled. Then answered I and sayde: O Lozde Lozde, nowe are we ful of synne, & foz oure sake paraduenture it is not, that the barne of the ryghteous shal not be fulfylled, because of ỹ synne of them that dwel vpon earth. Apoca.vi.b

So he answered me & sayd: Go thy waye to a woman wyth chyld, & aske of her, when she hath fulfylled her nyne monethes, yf her childebed may kepe the byzth any longer wythin her. Then sayde I: No Lozde that can she not. And he sayde vnto me: In hell the secret places of soules are lyke the pzeupe chambze of a woman ỹ trauayleth, & maketh hast, whē the tyme & necessyte of the byzth is at hand: Euen so doth she hast to deliuer it that is committed vnto her Loke what thou desyzest to se, it shalbe shewed the from the begynnynge. Then answered I, & sayde: Yf I haue founde grace in thy syghte & yf it be possible, & yf I be mete therfoze, shewe me thē whether there be mo to come then is past, oz moze past then is foz to come. What is past, I knowe, but what is foz to come, I knowe not. 10

And he sayde vnto me: Stand vp vpon the right syde, & I shal expounde ỹ similitude vnto the. So I stode & beholde, an whote burnynge ouen went ouer before me: & it happened ỹ whē ỹ flame was gone by, the smoke had the vpper hande. After thys there went ouer before me a watery cloud, & sent downe much raine wt a foz me: & when the stozmy rayne was past ỹ dzopes remained styl. Then sayde he vnto me: lyke as ỹ rayne is moze then the dzoppes, & as fyer exceadeth ỹ smoke, euen so the measure of the thinges ỹ are past hath the vpper hand. Then went the dzoppes and the smooke aboue: and I prayde & sayde: maye I lyue (thynckest thou) vntyll that tyme? Oz what shall happen in those dayes? He answered me, and sayde: As foz the tokens wherof thou askest me, I maye tell the a parte: but as touchynge thy lyfe, I maye not shewe the, foz I am not sent therfoze.

Euertheless, as concernynge the tokens, marcke thys: Beholde, the dayes shall come, that they whyche dwell vpon earth, shalbe taken in a greate nombze, and the waye of the truthe shalbe hyd, and the lande shalbe barren from fayth: but * iniquitye shall haue the vpper hande, lyke as thou hast sene nowe, and as thou hast yearde longe ago. And the lande that thou sepste nowe to haue rule, shalte thou shoztlye se A mat.xxiiii.a

waske. But yf God graunt ẏ to lyue, thou shalt se after the thyrde trompet ẏ the sunne shall sodenly shine agayne in the nyght, & the mone. iii. times in the daye, & blonde shall drop out of the wood, & the stone shall geue hys voyce, & the people shalbe vnquyet: & euē he shal rule, whōe they hope not, ẏ dwell vpon earth, & the foules shall flyte ẏ Sodomytish see shal cast out his fishe, & make a noyse in ẏ nyght, whych many shall not knowe, but they shall all heare the voyce therof

There shalbe a confusyon also in many places, & the fyre shalbe oft sent agayne, & the wyld beastes shal go theyr way, and monstreous women shall bare monstres, and salte waters shal be founde in the swete: one frende shall fyght agaynst another: then shal wyt & vnderstandyng be hyd and put aside into theyr secret places, & shalbe sought of many, & yet not be found: then shal vnrighteousnes & volupteousnes haue the vpper hande vpon earth. One lande also shall aske another, and saye: Is righteousnes gone thorowe the? And it shal saye: Noo, At the same time shal men hope, but nothyng optayne: they shal laboure, but theyr wayes shal not prosperе

To shewe the such tokens I haue leue and yf thou wylt praye agayne, & wepe as nowe, ād faste seuen dayes, thou shalte heare yet greater thynges. Then I awaked, & a fearfulnes went thorowe all my bodye, & my mynde was feble & carefull, so that I almost sowned wythall. So ẏ Aungel that was come to talke wyth me, helde me, comforted me, and set me vp vpon my fete.
